Haight out of job in fall

Raymond Haight, unsuccessful campaigner for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in the primary, has been told by the college that he will not be retained in his teaching post in the Department of Social Sciences.

Haight was hired last fall on what was termed "an emergency basis" and has taught each quarter since his appointment. This summer he is teaching two courses in American government.

The 49-year-old former Redlands (Calif.) high school teacher was not retained, according to Yvonne A. Dengler, secretary in Social Sciences, because he "was not working on his doctoral degree."

Dr. Clyde Fisher, dean of the School of Applied Sciences, was more explicit. He told Mustang that Haight was hired only as a lecturer and not as a regularly appointed instructor.

"Mr. Haight has not had a regular appointment," Fisher said, "and his reappointment or nonreappointment is not part of procedures for the regular teaching staff. The fact that Mr. Haight has not been reinstated for the upcoming year is not a negative position on the part of the administration or the Social Science Department."

Haight differed with this view of his ouster. In an interview Tuesday he said:

"I think you could say there is an attempt to have professors with the same philosophy at Poly. (Continued on page 12)

Flying bulb hits Lawler

With the end of the Flying Flashbulb of Fate Contest goes another chance for all photography buffs to display their photographic expertise. Perhaps at some future time Mustang may once again provide the impetus for photographers to come forth and reveal their technical creativity.

Banke said that the idea for a coordinator, who would act as prosecutor, was a good one, but felt that there was a need for a provision in the rules for a defender upon request by a student. Banke was also against the notification method. He said the mailing of notices was sufficient.

Finally, Banke is against the section of the procedures that will allow college presidents to suspend a student for 10 days without a hearing. The idea is to rid the campuses of troublemakers. However, 10 days, according to Banke, of absences could result in failure of all classes.

These and other recommendations by student presidents will be drawn up in the form of (Continued on page 12)

DISCIPLINE RULES

Board still probes

Student discipline and procedures are once again in the vanguard with the start of the academic year.

During the July meeting of the Board of Trustees for the California State Colleges, an enabling resolution was passed giving the Board the power to promulgate rules of conduct in matters of student discipline. The measure was passed after failure to pass a set of stringent rules to deal with student discipline. The resolution, according to Trustee William A. Norris, was an emergency measure to deal with any problems that might occur at the beginning of the coming academic year.

During the July meeting the trustees expressed their wish to use a set of concrete student disciplinary procedures, and the students represented at that meeting expressed their desire for a fair set of procedures.

It was decided that student organizations and the individual colleges would submit recommendations for disciplinary procedures and the Committee on Educational Policy would study these and report at the Sept. meeting of the Trustees.

Paul Banke, ASI Pres., said that he attended the meeting of a newly formed organization made up of the student presidents of California State Colleges, where he presented his points of concern over the draft of the disciplinary procedures. Banke said he felt the idea of a Hearing Officer to preside over a closed hearing was good. Banke however questioned the lack of a provision for a Panel-jury of peers to decide the guilt of the defendant.

Tractor stolen

A Caterpillar tractor is reported to have been stolen from one of this college's agricultural projects, according to campus Security. The tractor was reported missing from a student plot at the edge of Camp Hill on August 1.

Apparently the tractor was driven from its parking area at the reservoir to an isolated spot near the highway, as there were tractor and truck tracks at the edge of the highway. A frontage road fence was also knocked over by the tractor en route to the loading truck.

Security sources said that the value of the stolen tractor is about $8000. Investigation is continuing, they added.

West protests more

The Far West of the United States is experiencing a more rapid growth in student protest on college campuses.

Fifth-ranked, though, is California, in the percentage of college campuses that have experienced student protest.

These are part of the findings in a report by the Carnegie Commission on Higher Education and the Center for Research and Development in Higher Education at UC Berkeley.

Dr. Harold Hodgkinson, principal author of the report, entitled, "Institutions in Transition," based his findings on data assembled from 1,230 colleges and universities.

In summing up the report, Hodgkinson said, "One gets the impression from all of this that these high protest campuses are simply superactive places in which people are more intense, more active and more involved in something, although that something may necessarily be the welfare of the institutions."

The report points out that, "although some areas have had more student protest than others, there is no 'safe' region of the country."

New York ranks tops in the states that have the highest incidence of student protest, with 50% of the reporting institutions; Iowa, 48%; Michigan, 43%; Massachusetts, 40%; California, 36%; and Illinois, 30%.

Of all the educational institutions studied, about 30% reported an increase in protest, 44% with no change, 1% with a decrease and 22% said they experienced no protest.

As to whether a school is public or private, Hodgkinson said there is no significant variation between the two in avoiding protest.

Hodgkinson reported, "It does seem, however, that as 'quality' increases, the incidence of student protest also increases."

As for faculty, he said he found a "quite consistent" pattern at high protest institutions. The staff shows "interest in research, lack of interest in teaching, lack of loyalty to the institution, and support of dissident students."

What kind of thinking is going on in the minds of the people who run the colleges and universities? It started with the case of Angela Davis, the UCLA instructor who is going through a struggle to remain on the teaching staff of the university because of her Communist beliefs. It is continuing with the case of our own college instructors who are not being retained for next year.

The Social Science Department at this college is letting three of its best instructors go because they have failed to obtain their doctorate degrees. We are not singling out the Social Science Department, but we are using it because it is one of the few departments that offers courses which are controversial and highly relevant to world and national problems.

Raymond Haight, Anne Fowler, and Harry Woolpert are three teachers who have inspired thought and controversy in a college that has been lacking involvement for too long.

The reasons given for their nonretainment are logical; but to the students who are eager to discuss political philosophies, race relations, and such areas that make the political pot boil the reasons for these instructors not coming back are not good enough.

These three instructors have given many students a place where and a person with which to discuss world problems in an open-minded and relaxed atmosphere. The popular image is that students here are not as interested in world problems and do not place these problems on the top of their priority list for a well-rounded education. There are many students here who are interested and who do care about these problems, and this college can expect many more (much to the dismay of the administration) who are going to try to do something about the problems facing this college and the state college system.

We feel that Raymond Haight, Anne Fowler and Harry Woolpert are the kind of instructors that are needed for this college to function as an educational body, especially at this time. We also feel that not retaining these instructors was a gross mistake on the part of the administration.

was the first electronic recharging of Nixon's batteries. The situation should look product, bored by the whiteness, the commercialized pap, the sameness; learning "Agnew" for a household word.

In the 1970 search for substance—a Nixonian topic worthy

Gene Jones made eighteen commercials for the Nixon effort. "Look, I get it from my friends, too," Jones said, "I go to a party and the first thing everybody wants to know is, how can you work for that fascist bastard."

"The problem we've had, in most cases, is Nixon himself," Jim Sage, Jones' top film assistant, said.

"He says such incredible pap. In fact, the radicalness of this (still pictures flashing) approach is in the fact of creating an image without actually saying anything. The words are given meaning by the impressions created by the stills."

The eagerness of Nixon media men to prostitute artistry—corrupt esthetics—is another foul odor in a messy house.

"Nixon has not only developed the use of the platitude," Sage explained, "he's raised it to an art form. It's mashed potatoes. It appeals to the lowest common denominator of American taste. It's a farce, a delicious farce; self-deception carried to the nth degree."

Again, a murky house emerges from the gloom; a kind of mickey house: film makers who don't believe.

Shuffling about in Nixon's hallways was Roger Alles, a tv studio applause innovator. His energies were employed arranging pithy question and answer shows and thinking aloud, "Let's face it, a lot of people think Nixon is dull. Think he's a bore, a pain in the ass."

"They look at him as the kind of kid who always carried a book-bag. Who was forty-two years old the day he was born. They figure other kids got footballs for Christmas, Nixon got a briefcase and he loved it."

"He'd always have his homework done and he'd never let you copy."

Put Nixon on tv, Alles said, and "you've got a problem right away. He's a funny-looking guy. He looks like somebody hung him in a closet overnight and he jumps out in the morning with his suit all bunched up and starts running around saying, 'I want to be President.'"

Alles, who seemed to be the circus wit in a house of mirrors, said that because people see Nixon as a funny looking bore the hand picked theatre audiences and select panels were needed. "To make them forget all that," Alles said.

Nixon's "ethnic experts" in Philadelphia counted one of every three voters there as black. So Alles said "we definitely need a Negro" on the taped panel show for that "region".

We like that idea. ("HER house is always clean, Mable.")

No dusty phoniness; no greasy pranks or shifty eyes; no salesmen or coffee grounds on linoleum; please, no hidden meaning.

Because he, as any "strict constructionist" should know, is in direct violation of this Clean House ethic, Richard Nixon lacks respectability in persona and in fact.

Merely from the point of view of his untidy housekeeping—Nixon's foul mouthed script people, trained in cigarette sales and in magic manners of "received impression" juxtaposed with reality's unspoken truth—his credibility tumbles to political purgatory.

Little of what Nixon's campaign gimmickry seemed to promise will be recalled by the tv public—shrewd two-and-three-dimension makers made certain his rhetoric would lack substance, promise; would evoke only amorphous fantasies.

The color film sagas and resplendent flashing stills were designed to say everything at once with nothing:

Phosphates are headaches

by RALPH ALLEN

Our modern-day, heavy-duty detergents have come a long way from Grandma's laundry soap. However, these new detergents, and their additives, are creating headaches for this country's ecologists.

Regular laundry soap was used by almost everyone until it was apparent it would not work in hard water. This resulted in the advent of today's detergents.

The problem today is the ecological effect of the widespread use of heavy-duty detergents. The additives in these detergents that are most harmful are the phosphates.

Phosphates are not biodegradable, which means that they cannot be decomposed into inert substances. They are plant and algae nutrients and upset the ecological balance which existed in our rivers and lakes. A current example of the result of phosphate saturation is the "drying" condition of the Great Lakes.

It is interesting to note that all of today's detergents do not contain the same percentage of phosphates. Below is a list of these values as reported by a recent publication of Credit Union National Association (CUNA) International, Inc. The detergents are listed with their respective phosphate contents in ascending order:

	Percent
Trend	1.4	Ajax Laundry	28.2
Diaper Pure	5.0	Bold	30.2
Wisk	7.6	Tide	30.6
Cold Water All	9.8	Oxydol	30.7
Cold Power	19.9	Salvo	35.3
Fab	21.6	Bio-Ad	35.3
Breeze	22.2	Biz	40.4
Cheer	22.3	Axon	43.7
Bonus	22.4
Dux	23.1
Gain	24.4
Dreft	24.5
Drive	25.3
Punch	25.8

The recommended phosphate level is 9.8%. Consumers can begin to return the ecological balance in our nation's waters by using low-phosphate detergents.

Proof of attendance needed before payoff

Veterans who have been in school for spring and summer sessions under the GI Bill should send certification-of-attendance forms to the Veterans Administration immediately if they haven't already done so.

Tardy return of a card can delay receipt of VA payment for the last month of spring or summer training. Without the card, the VA says it also will be unable to process promptly the first month's payment for students continuing study this fall.

The VA also advises veterans planning to enter school this fall for the first time under the GI Bill to apply immediately at the nearest VA office for a certificate of eligibility.

Campus drive to gain voters

Voter registration booths will be set up on campus over the days of Aug. 19-20 to register student voters, according to Paul Banke, ASI President.

The booths will be located at the library patio and the main bar and will operate during the hours of 9:30 a.m. to 12:00 p.m. and 1:00 p.m. to 3:30 p.m.

The voter registration drive is part of a national effort by the National Board of the League of Women Voters and the National Students Association who have contacted Banke to aid in the effort to mobilize the student voters on this campus.

Showing his support of voter registration on campus, Banke said, "I'm confident that we will be able to register at least 1,000 students as this is a particularly vital election year."

Banke said that he felt it was sad that in the last election so few college students voted and that he believed the figure was around low 23 percent of all eligible college students.

He added, "I hope that students who have shown so much interest in the political atmosphere in the past will take the time to participate in the democratic process and vote."

Though the program is sponsored by the League of Women Voters, students may help in running the booths during operating hours; any student wishing to help may contact the office at 543-3411.

In closing, Banke said, "Students are ever to make some constructive changes in the system, they are going to have to take part in the democratic process."

Final exam on

The note which appeared in the Cal Poly Report and said the exams would be held Tuesday through Thursday, August 24-26 is not true.

Final exams will be held Monday through Thursday, August 24-27. Complete exam schedules are circulating through the departments.

The maid bugs out

CAROL SOWARDS

Carol, a girl whose episodes of being fired unintentionally had never entered her mind, she had thought of having a little fun to make the firing but maybe she had had her fun. Throwing clothes from the second floor, she called the maid (the same one below). The restaurant cohorts with the motel employees observed and "just didn't look good." She thought they did — much like doves of peace falling from a lot of Best Western hotels. There were other hotels. Forgetting an entire set of keys and probably most of all, she said she just "didn't work."

ALLOWS NAMED JOE
The girl could afford to be selectively about those who bugged her — she was highly in the motel room. There was one maid that had names like Joe, Sam, and others and other things they were dealing with. It irritated her beyond reason. Another thing, she allowed to use the acid for heavy cleaning "too dangerous for a girl like me, we must do it." That thing was truly ego.

The combination of these two ended the motel maid, the reader, surely can be relieved.

When the girl's mind suddenly freed from all bonds and was funny to her. She had played the fact that if there were no maids there would be no maids and hence she would have been employed. She asked herself what she would have occupied herself with. She was now going to herself with. She saw an endless path of city and sat down to write. Words were intolerable. She experienced a bit of desperation at what she could not do. When the words finally came out they were all in the light, nonsensical vein of the absurd. Although she realized her freedom, it was perhaps within the realm of her own fear. But who could say the girl was not as free as a bird, (a dove of peace? They were put to a quick end.)

WORLD OF ILLUSIONS

Times started passing. She became occupied with the passions of youth although in reality they were far from her. They lived brightly and with vivid colors in her mind. Yes, the mind can visit countless places when it is left completely to its own devices.

The first few days she lived entirely within her own illusions. And so strong were they that when she picked up a book it could not penetrate.

When she at last collected the energy to leave the apartment (feeling her roommates looked unfavorably on her immobile state) it was only a few hundred yards to a nearby stream. At times she loved this stream intensely, then at other times she felt entirely separated from it to the point of depression and hate. This gave her mind a question of serious proportions. If she was the same girl, and indeed this was the same stream — why then could it evoke two such different feelings? But this is only one of countless dialectics pursued.

SMALL SCALE FREAK-OUT

To be frank, her mind began to freak out on a small scale.

Nixon dust

A "Negro" friendly to received image theory had to be found. "Goddammit, we're locked into the thing anyway" Ailes figured, noting that "Negros" had appeared on other shows for RN, setting a pattern of sorts.

"Once you start it's hard as hell to stop, because the press will pick it up and make a big deal out of why no Negro all of a sudden."

A house of shabby moral furniture will be the subject of serious American scrutiny in the coming campaign.

And, just perhaps, the Nixon electronic election was never completely shut off.

Something had to be done to put things on a more serene and flowing level. She knew this could be done only by separation from the thought patterns. Conversation with people usually wasn't the answer — she engaged in it superficially while the thought patterns flowed over and above it simultaneously.

In near desperation the girl looked again to the literary world. A Russian novel — unfolding in all its power, intensity, and passion could perhaps divert the explosive thoughts. She delved into The Brothers Karamazov oblivious of the pervading dangers. Each thought the book examined was a mere skeleton upon which to consider countless others.

At a certain moment of impulsivity she determined to go home to Idaho. Idaho — the permanent home of this strangely conglomerate girl. The very place she had fled certain it "was not the place" for summer 1970. Bags were packed and arrangements firmed. But in the midst of parting words a friend forbade her departure. A friend for whom she could not leave. But a strange friend; for he was one with whom circumstances prevented her also from spending time. And he was asking her to have a strength she was not certain she possessed. But she knew also that when one needs strength, he simply summons it.

A strange story indeed, but certainly it must have happened.

Dumke appointed

Chancellor Glenn S. Dumke of the California State Colleges has been appointed to the Board of Commissioners of the National Commission of Accrediting.

The commission serves to coordinate activities of 25 professional and specialized higher education accrediting organizations throughout the country. Through these groups the commission exercises a supervisory role in the quality of higher education.

Dumke will succeed President Arland F. Christ-Janer of Boston University as a representative on the Commission of the Association of American Colleges.

The commission, with headquarters in Washington, D.C., has representatives on its governing board of six constituent associations which in turn have more than 1,425 member institutions.

Air pollution study solution

Many high school and community college science and engineering teachers will be participating in a short course on air pollution here. They are expected to arrive late this month.

Dr. Harold M. Cota, director of the special program said last week that 59 teachers from throughout California have been selected for the short course. Twenty-seven of the 59 teachers are returning for the second time.

The week-long course is being financed with part of a $10,755 grant to the college from the National Air Pollution Control Administration (NAPCA). A similar grant from NAPCA, an agency of the U.S. Public Health Service, made the 1969 event possible.

Dr. Cota, a member of the faculty of the college's Environmental Engineering Department, sponsor of the Aug. 24-28 program, said the participants were selected from applications received earlier this year.

GI scholars gain money

Veterans attending this college can now receive full-time educational allowance from the GI Bill by enrolling in 12 course units. Previously, a veteran was required to be enrolled in a minimum of 14 units, according to John Enos, veterans service officer.

The change is part of a bill that boosted GI education benefits by 35 percent in March. The bill, signed by Pres. Richard Nixon on March 26, increases monthly payments to single veterans from $130 to $175 if they are attending school full time.

Veterans who carried a course load of less than 14 units, but more than 12 units after March 26 are eligible for retroactive payments for the difference between full and three-quarter time allowances. Any students who fall in that category should contact Mrs. Kathy Roslandi at the Records Office in the Administration Building if their payments have not been corrected.

Students with 10 or 11 quarter units are now considered to be attending school three-quarter time and students with seven to nine units are considered half time students.

Single veterans attending school three-quarter time had their monthly payments increased from $95 to $128. The same veterans attending half time received a $21 increase going from $60 to $81.

Veterans with one dependent and going to school full time received a $50 increase from $155 to $205. Three quarter-time students had their allowance increased from $115 to $152 and half time people jumped from $75 to $100.

A raise from $175 to $230 was given to the full time student with two dependents. If he were attending three-quarter time his allowance would change from $135 to $177; if half time it would change from $85 to $114.

WW II veterans better off

Today's military veteran doesn't receive the educational benefits that his World War II predecessor did.

UPI Senior Editor Louis Cassels has asserted that the original "GI Bill of Rights," enacted in 1944, made it possible for any WW II veteran, however poor to obtain a college education.

A WW II veteran had the right to enroll in any accredited institution, from an expensive private college to a low-tuition

State Board accredits

Two new programs in pupil personnel services and school supervision have received initial accreditation from the California State Board of Education and two teacher education programs have been reaccredited for this college.

The accreditation of the professional education programs was announced by President Robert Kennedy after being notified by State Superintendent of Public Instruction Max Rafferty.

The two new programs are those leading to the Standard Supervision credential with Specializations in Elementary Supervision, Secondary Supervision, Elementary Principalship, and Secondary Principalship, and also the Standard Designated Services.

Both of the new programs were given full terms of accreditation, which is three years and will run to June 30, 1973.

The programs leading to the Standard Teaching Credential with Specialization in Elementary Teaching and the Standard Teaching Credential with Specialization in Secondary Teaching were reaccredited for full five year terms, to June 30, 1975. Each of these have been utilized for more than 15 years.

Dr. Kennedy, in commenting on the accreditations, termed approval "especially gratifying at this time." He went on to state that "It comes as an endorsement of the job our faculty and students are doing under the leadership of Dr. Walter Schroeder, head of the Education Department; and the important job our alumni are doing in schools throughout the state."

state university. The government paid his full tuition, whatever it might be, plus any extra laboratory, library or instructional fees.

In addition he received a room-and-board allowance of $75 a month if single, $105 a month if married and $120 if he had two dependents.

Under the current GI Bill, a Vietnam veteran who wants to go back to school is eligible for an educational allowance of $175 a month, if single, or $205 if married and attending school full time.

The maximum period in which the allowance can be paid is 36 months or four school years of nine months each.

The Serviceman's Readjustment Act of 1944 allowed for an allowance payment period of one year plus the period of enlistment, up to 48 months. This eligibility, applied to the room-and-board allowance of $75, $105 and $120. Schooling was required to begin within four years from date of discharge.

Congress attached an income ceiling amendment to the education bill in 1946. This meant that a single person wishing to work to add to his veterans administration subsidy was forced to have a combined total monthly income from labor and VA of no more than $175. A veteran with dependents was allowed $200 per month.

In 1948 these totals were raised to $210 and $270 respectively.

The Korean War GI Bill first changed the maximum allowance payment period to 36 months. It specified that training must begin within three years from time of discharge. The 1962 bill also stopped government payment of tuition, laboratory, library and other instructional fees. Veterans were given flat allowances of $110, $135 and $160, depending on whether they were single or with one or two dependents.

Why the drastic changes between the original 1944 educational benefits bill and the Korean War and Vietnam War versions of the bill?

John Enos, local veterans service officer, speculates that the original bill was "probably a headache to certify." That was to get rid of a lot of red tape involved in administering the old bill.

He also feels that a change in the mood of congressmen in 1952 and 1966 contributed to the different kind of GI Bills. Enos said, "There was most likely a change in attitudes about public assistance programs indicating a stronger desire for people to earn their own way."

Veterans organizations such as the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars heavily lobby congress most of the time. These organizations are mainly responsible for all increases in educational benefits to veterans, according to Enos. "Possibly these organizations just were not influential enough in 1952 and 1966," said Enos.

Cassels explained that a single Vietnam veteran gets a total of $1,575 a year to finance his college education. He contends that, that sum won't begin to cover tuition at a leading private university.

The veteran UPI writer notes that "even if his tuition is modest—say $375 a year—the Vietnam veteran who is dependent on his GI Bill income has to feed, clothe, shelter and transport himself on $1,200 a year, which is far below the government's own officially-defined poverty line."

Enos agrees with Cassels. He doesn't feel the college veteran is getting a fair deal, considering current living expenses. He said, "The veteran is conditioned to the amount he's getting now. Most veterans don't know what the benefits used to be like. The Vietnam veteran started out with $100 per month in benefits in 1966.

That was raised to $130 and $175, so he thinks he's doing pretty well."

What about the future? "I doubt if they'll ever go back to the 1944 type of GI Bill benefits," Enos said.

A capacity crowd of over 100, including coaches, physical education teachers, interested students, and faculty jammed the College Theater Tuesday, to hear Edward Day, President of the California State School Board of Education.

Day, the keynote speaker for the annual Calif. Workshop for Physical Education and Athletic Coaching spoke on the topic of "Opportunities Through P.E." Day is reputed to be the most important layman in education in the United States today. He opened his address by

To reserve your suite

If your club or organization has conference rooms on campus take note!

Procedures for scheduling use of campus conference rooms will change on Sept. 1 following approval of revisions recommended by the college-wide Space Allocation Committee.

According to Douglas Gerard, executive dean at this college, reservations for use of conference rooms between 8 a.m. and 1 p.m., Monday through Friday, should be made through the Office of the Associate Dean, Educational Services, after Sept. 1.

Rooms available for use during these hours include Erhart Ag 135 and 341, Computer Science 115B, Graphic Arts 101, and 207, Library 128, Men's Physical Education 122, Mathematics and Home Economics 152 and Military Science Department 125. Reservations of conference rooms for use after 5 p.m. may be made through the Student Activities Office. Rooms available during that time are Erhart Ag 135 and 341, Graphic Arts 101 and 207, Library 128, Men's Physical Education 122 and Military Science Department 125.

The changes in procedures will be included in College Administrative Manual revisions recently being prepared.

commending the Athletic Department, and its head, Dr. Robert Mott, for their outstanding contribution to P.E., over the past two decades.

Day pointed out that the state has come a long way with its fitness programs, but that a long road is still ahead. He proposed that the Board look into the possibility of making coaches and instructors specialists in their fields of P.E. since a part-time coach cannot devote time to his field if he is involved in classroom instruction.

Day was deeply concerned with the training of the younger elementary students. "From kindergarten through the third grade, are the most important years of training a student physically," states Day. "If we do not start here it will be too late to start in the upper elementary schools."

Top jumper gets award

The man with all the watches, medals and trophies, will have to make room for one more on his shelves. Mohinder Gill, the number one track man on campus, has been named the "Cal Poly Athlete of the Year."

Gill, the top ranked triple jumper in the U.S., number three world wide, will now be under consideration for the California Collegiate Athletic Association's (CCAA) top honor. The CCAA crown will be decided by a vote of a group of sports writers. The voting will take place in the near future.

A native of Chandigarh, India, Gill competed in July with his home country, at the Commonwealth Games held in Scotland. This most recent effort placed him second in his specialty.

He will return to the U. S. later this month to compete in a meet at Lake Tahoe, after which he will enroll in the Fall Quarter.

Day, on almost every occasion, would like to see more local control of sports activities as well as P.E. classes. "I feel the state can set guidelines, but only as suggestions to the local school districts."

After the brief talk, Day opened a session devoted to questions from the audience. The questions ranged from hippies, to sex, to proposed education bills in the legislature. However, the majority of the crowd were more concerned with learning of state school problems, than about the topic at hand.

The question was raised on adult physical fitness, what can, and should be the school's role. Here again, Day stated this should be handled at the local level. Cities and schools in many districts share facilities to get adult participation in physical fitness.

Day has very definite opinions on how our school system should be run. He believes that the school board should not interfere with local policies, unless asked to do so.

He is all for young people. Day was instrumental in organizing the Economic and Youth Opportunity Agency of greater Los Angeles.

Thursday flick stars Newman

Paul Newman stars in "Cool Hand Luke" this Thursday evening in the Air Conditioning Auditorium. The film will be shown at 7 and 9:30 p.m.

Co-starring in the action film is Arthur Kennedy, who won the Academy Award for Best Supporting Actor for his role in the film.

Depicting the harsh life of a Southern prison camp, "Cool Hand Luke" presents Paul Newman in one of his best performances. Newman received a nomination from the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences for Best Actor of the Year for his portrayal of Luke in Thursday night's movie.

Library cuts

Despite an approximately 25 percent cut in appropriated funds, the college library will continue to function under normal operational policies during the upcoming academic year. The 1970-71 library budget is $1,062,203, which is $323,176 less than last year's budget. L. Harry Strauss, college librarian, has expressed the library's continuing policy of providing the best possible service to students and faculty members of this college.

Strauss notes that the budget cuts will affect the library's acquisition of new books, staffing, supplies and services. The college librarian explains that the cutback in funds is restricted to processing services (including ordering and cataloging.) Strauss points out that because of its organizational structure, the library's budget cuts will also affect public services. He explained that the secondary reaction is due to the fact that several public service sections (circulation, the curriculum library, documents, periodicals, and the reference section) receive processing monies to cover shelving of books and processing of non-book materials.

The library book budget for last year was $400,420. This year the budget is set at $229,309, or 36 percent less than last year's. This cut means the library will acquire some 18,000 fewer volumes. Strauss cited a recent report in the Los Angeles Times which, in explaining the Cal State budget cuts, described most campus libraries as below national standards by saying that these standards are set by the number of books the library has. He says that the campus library was ranked at around number 167 nationwide for colleges with enrollments over 3500. This ranking was done in a 1966-68 study.

A reduction in funds available to the student assistant program poses a serious problem, according to Strauss. Last year the funds generated by several Temporary Help positions were transferred to augment the approved Student Assistant budget, resulting in a total appropriation of $87,572. The reduction in total staffing for the 1970-71 prevents a similar transfer of funds, meaning the Library must operate within the basic budget allocation of $64,841. This amount represents a decrease of approximately 25 percent. Strauss indicates that this means there will be fewer student employees hired. He also indicated, however, that the Library hopes to augment funds from other sources with their organizational structure to cover the Student Assistant budget cuts.

The College Librarian wishes to emphasize that although the year's fundings will adversely affect the total program, every effort will be made to maintain an effective program in Library Public Services.

Haight's straits

"My position on marijuana during the campaign hurt me with some of the upper members of the administration," Haight went on to say that he was not positive about this and possibly it was only rumor.

"If Cal Poly doesn't want faculty members to have opinions on legalizing marijuana this is their prerogative."

Haight feels that his situation is somewhat similar to that of Angella Davis, a UCLA instructor who was not allowed to continue teaching because of her admitted Communist affiliation. Haight said he felt that this college was reacting to him as UCLA did to Miss Davis. He

Steubenville smells

What is the dirtiest city in the United States? Don't guess Los Angeles even if you've been there and seen what it is like.

Steubenville, Ohio, was ranked first in the amount of visible particulates such as dirt, smoke and soot, according to a recent federal study.

The National Air Pollution Control Administration listed New York City first in concentrations of sulphur oxides, an industrial emission.

The agency has not yet reported cities' measurements of nitrogen oxides.

doesn't feel that political beliefs are valid reasons for letting an instructor go.

He said: "If Cal Poly has this philosophy they must consider an alternative," meaning that this college must come up with a more appropriate reason for not retaining certain instructors.

In reply to the reason given to him for nonretention Haight said, "If they hire people who just have their doctorates they may be imprisoning themselves." He feels that although some instructors do not have their doctorates they may be able to educate students equally as well with their past experience and knowledge of their subject.

Haight's plans are somewhat indefinite. He would like to teach in a high school or junior college but he added that he "always wondered what it would be like to go on welfare."

Boat owners beware

Boat-trailer owners should have wheel bearings inspected frequently if they must back a trailer into water deep enough to reach the axle and hubs.

Though the grease seals on most trailers are designed to be waterproof, the seal can be broken when a hub that is hot after highspeed highway travel is suddenly rolled into cold water.

If water gets into the bearings, it can cause corrosion and break down protective grease. Where evidence of water is found, bearings and axle spindles should be wiped clean and repacked with fresh grease.

would make, Banke said, "I think they will approve the existing draft of disciplinary procedures in a somewhat amended form." As to whether or not the student organization would prove effective in the changes, Banke said, "I feel that the student presidents will have an effective voice."

Banke said he didn't feel the proposed rules were too stringent as he feels campus problems call for strictly defined and tightly structured disciplinary procedures. He went on to say that everyone likes to see a loose set of rules but then there is danger of interpretation and avenues through which the rules might be taken advantage of. He did, however, state that though he is in favor of tight structuring he is in no way in favor of "marshall law" on campuses.

Consultations have been underway since the last trustees meeting concerning student discipline. The Chancellors office is expected to release rules of discipline by the authority of Chancellor Glenn Dunke within the coming weeks.
