REAGAN GIVES SUPPORT

Judges now armed

SACRAMENTO UPI—Superior Court judges today talked about their new practice of carrying guns for protection.

"We don't know what to expect these days," said one jurist, who sat in his chamber with a pistol strapped to his hip.

He cited recent threats and violent attacks on judges. Both judges asked to remain anonymous.

Carrying a gun, said one, "is a matter between a judge and his job."

The other said, in a separate interview, "If you had a safe you certainly wouldn't leave the combination to the safe on the face of the safe. When you are in the field of security, by definition, it involves to some extent the concept of disclosure."

One judge pointed out that bailiffs are not armed in Sacramento courts because they come in close contact with prisoners. If a bailiff's gun were to be taken by a prisoner, innocent people could be hurt in a courtroom shooting.

Gov. Ronald Reagan today gave his support to the judges.

"I couldn't fault them for that," Reagan said during a television interview taping (on KOVR).

The governor said there was a "trend away from mob violence" and towards "guerrilla activity" or "Viet Cong terror tactics." He said the terrorists have "picked out government officials to show the system doesn't work."

"I would think that the courtroom would continue to be a target," Reagan said.

At least two Sacramento jurists have armed themselves since the slaying of a San Rafael judge during an abortive escape attempt by San Quentin convicts last Aug. 7. Tighter security procedures are also planned for Sacramento courtrooms.

Asked how long he expected the "present turmoil" to continue, the governor said the timetable is up to the people.

"When the people themselves say enough, I think it'll move very quickly," Reagan said. "I would hesitate to say how long."

During the far-ranging interview the governor again reiterated his intention to serve out a second four-year term if elected to it in November.

"I haven't reconsidered," he said, referring to his earlier pledge to serve out another term. When pressed on whether he may again become a presidential candidate in 1972, the governor responded:

"I expect to be out in '72 in support of our incumbent President," Reagan said.

The governor also criticized some psychiatrists, whom he said were giving the state's therapeutic abortion law a "liberal interpretation."

He said the number of abortions has increased significantly since the law was relaxed in 1967. He said it "has led to a very bad condition."

"You can't deny you're killing a life," the governor said, adding that someday the procedure could lead to permitting a mother to decide whether a baby just born should live or die.

"You're but a step away from what Hitler did," he said. "No one has been able to say when it is that an unborn child is a human being with a soul."

Reagan endorsed Max Rafferty, who is seeking a third term as state superintendent of public instruction.

"I made no secret of the fact that I'd like to see Max re-elected," Reagan said. "This is an endorsement, yes, he's my personal preference."

Mini-mobile homestead

If you're tired of high rental costs, noisy roommates, and undesirable locations, there is an answer to your problems. Live in a car!

Brent Lathrop, a graduate student in biology, has made his home in a '62 Chevy station wagon for the past two years. Besides not having to pay rent, Brent claims almost all the conveniences of having a house.

The seats of the car have been removed and a Persian rug

Students who have questions about the housing situation in San Luis Obispo should plan on attending the Social Science Club meeting and hearing representatives from Arnett and Broadbent Realty.

The time is 7 p.m. Monday, in the Engineering Auditorium and the topic will be, "Housing Tenants Union."

covers the car floor. A removable chair with sawed-off legs is situated where the driver's seat use to be, and a sleeping bag with a foam rubber mattress is rolled up under the dashboard of the passenger's side. A small, two burner butane stove, one used for cooking and the other for heating, sits next to the side window with its stove pipe leading through the roof of the car. An ice chest, suitcase, record player, and other odds and ends fill the back end of the car. Clothes are hung on one side, and a tripod with a wooden top is used as a dining room table and a desk.

Since Brent owns a house in Santa Barbara, he decided that the cost of two homes was more than he could afford. His car was already paid for, so he decided to live in it for awhile. Brent had such a "good feeling of having simplified needs and being mobile," that he decided to continue living in the car.

Most of the time Brent parks his car overnight in the Episcopal Church parking lot of Pismo street but sometimes goes to the beach or Perfumo Canyon. He uses the showers in the gyms on campus, and the car contains a toilet and other facilities.

A large car battery allows Brent to use two small lights, a small fan, and even an electric typewriter. One time he had a dinner party for six people; he recalls, "It was a real novelty."

There are, of course, some drawbacks to living in a car.

"You can't stand up," said Brent, "and all of my clothes are either wash and wear or permanent press. One must be patient—if you whirl around you might knock your coffee on your books."

Besides finishing up his last quarter for his M.S. degree, Brent is teaching a beginning zoology class. After this quarter he will attend the University of Davis for his P.H.D. in plant physiology. He plans to continue living in his car while attending Davis.

By living rent free and paying only $6 a year for cooking and heating—gas for the butane stove, you can "Make the system work for you rather than be a slave to it."

Nader to talk on social events

Response to the pre-lecture sale of tickets for Ralph Nader at Cuesta College, October 21, has been unusually high, according to Jim Greathouse, Director of Cuesta's Community Services.

Nader will speak at Cuesta following a morning appearance at the University of California at Irvine, and his schedule includes two lectures the following day on the San Francisco Peninsula.

Nader, who has become a national institution as protector of the consumer, has had over 4000 students, including a third of the student body at Harvard law school, working as Nader's Raiders this summer. The Center for the Study of Responsive Law has ranged from its probes of land use in California, pollution of the Savannah River in Georgia, and problems of the textile towns in North Carolina, to old targets like the Food and Drug Administration, the Department of Agriculture, and has opened new investigations of the antitrust division of the Justice Department and the quality of care in nursing homes.

Nader's influence is still skyrocketing, Greathouse said, and public interest increases day.

Tickets for the Nader lecture are $2.00 each.

From the black past

by Doyle McGhee

In the song "Young, Gifted, and Black," by Nina Simone, is the verse "sometimes as I look back, I am haunted by my youth." The black man's past in American may be haunted, but not all of the past was this way. 1770 - Beethoven, one of the world's greatest musicians, was without a doubt a Black man. He was called "The Black Spaniard." His teacher, the immortal Joseph Haydn, who wrote the music for the former Austrian National Anthem, was black too.

Beethoven's family originated in Belgium, which was ruled for centuries by the Spaniards, who had large numbers of black soldiers in their army. It is strange how in some encyclopedias the only mention of Beethoven's ancestry is that he was of Dutch-German descent. In the Southern states, Beethoven would have been forced to ride in the Jim-Crow car as President Andrew Jackson's full brother had to do.

2300 B.C. - Imhotep of Ancient Egypt was the real Father of Medicine. Greece and Rome got their knowledge of medicine from him. Imhotep was also Prime Minister to King Zoser as well as foremost architect of his time. The saying, "eat, drink, and be merry for tomorrow we die," has been traced to him. Hippocrates, the so-called "Father of Medicine," lived 2,000 years later. The modern symbol for medicine has been traced back to Imhotep's land and time.

218 B.C. - Hannibal, a full-blooded black man of Ancient North Africa, conquered territory in Spain and France, performing the astounding feat of crossing the Alps. With only 26,000 men, he defeated Rome, the mightiest military power of that age, who had a million men in every battle for the next fifteen years. His tactics are still taught in leading military academies of the United States and Europe.

(Doyle McGhee, a member of the Black Students Union, is a fourth year architecture student from Los Angeles.)

Mis-quote rebuttal

Editor:
The article in the Thursday, October 15, 1970, issue of Mustang Daily has some quotes attributed to me that are incorrect.

Several foreign students approached the first Student Affairs Council meeting of this year and asked for aid to meet the increased tuition for foreign students. A committee was selected to study the issue and to report back to SAC. I was appointed chairman of the committee. At the SAC meeting of this past week, I gave a progress report and answered questions brought up by the Council members.

The first statement attributed to me concerns the levels for out-of-state students' and foreign students' tuition should be equal. What I said was that the Trustees of the California State Colleges were headed in that direction. I made reference to a story in Cal Poly Today, October 1, 1970, which is the alumni newsletter that the SLO Chamber of Commerce recommended that the level of tuition that out-of-state and foreign students pay the same amounts.

I also made reference to a news release of the California State Colleges Board of Trustees of September 23, 1970, which I had read at the SAC meeting the week before that states that the Trustees have deferred until November a resolution that would establish equal tuition for all non-resident students in the 1972-73 fiscal year.

The second statement is that ASI funds should be available for helping the foreign students to pay the increased tuition. This statement would indicate my personal opinion. The fact is that in my opinion—and that of many students here at Cal Poly—ASI funds should not be available for this purpose. Furthermore, with the budget for this fiscal year set, it would be nearly impossible to find ASI funds for this.

The third statement is that it costs a foreign student $85 per quarter in tuition fees. What I said was that several years ago (1967-68) it was $85 per quarter. It continued to be $85 per quarter until this past year; the Trustees set it at $200 per quarter. As I have said before, the Trustees are considering raising the tuition of foreign students to the same level as out-of-state students. Currently, out-of-state students pay $370 per quarter. These tuitions are based on students who carry 14.5 units or more and prorated for those who carry less. According to the figures provided by the state, it costs about $1,800 to educate a student per year, based on three quarters as being a year.

At $200 per quarter, foreign students would pay $600 per year which equals one-third of the $1,800. At $370 per quarter, out-of-state students pay $1,110 per year, which is close to two-thirds of the $1,800.

I hope that this letter clarifies the issue of foreign students tuition now before SAC. The committee's recommendations will be made at the SAC meeting of October 20, 1970. All students interested in this matter may attend if they so desire.

Mustangs to invade Fresno

by CAROL CHADWICK

"We're going to play this game like its our last," said head Mustang mentor, Joe Harper. That is how the team intends to play their most important game of the season.

After echoing the same type of strategy, quarterback Don Milan commented, "This game could make all the difference between a 10-0 and a 7-3 season."

Fresno State boasts a 4-1 record, losing to the University of Montana, but defeating the University of Pacific. The Mustangs are as yet undefeated, but still a bit untested, "This is probably the best team we face all season," Coach Harper stated.

Last year, the Mustangs broke an 11 year old jinx by defeating the Fresno Bulldogs, 21-17. It has been 17 years since the Mustangs have been able to win a contest in the Bulldogs home territory, Radcliff Stadium.

This is the first away game for the Mustangs this season, and they are well aware of the type of support to expect. "I'd rather have this game an away game," defensive back Mike Church explained, "You really know you've beaten them when you do it on their own field. Especially with Fresno, they don't loose too often on their own field."

Practice has been hard this week. There seems to be a tenseness in the air. "It's sort of a tingling feeling," center George Hurley described. "We're practicing like we've never practiced before. We're confident, but scared." Who isn't?

The game itself is under a lot of speculation by everyone. Coaches are bragging, students are optimistic and both teams are working hard. "It's going to be a hard hitting game," co-captain Vic Ecklund predicted. "I think the tension is from waiting around."

Dan Johansen, Mustang linebacker, summed up the game by saying, "Both teams are good—but the real story will be told when that gun goes off. Then, all the press clippings will go out the window."

"It's not just going to be a hard game physically," Church offered, "it is going to be a very emotional game as well. That can take a lot more out of you."

Former Bulldog defensive back Jim Sanderson now coaches the Mustang defense. "If both teams play up to their full capabilities, it's going to be one whale of a game."

Aerial bomber Karl Francis, quarterback for the Bulldogs, has completed 66 out of 122 passes for 771 yards and nine TDs. Up to now, none of the Mustang's opponents have scored on a pass.

A passing game is definitely in order this week and it will have to be deadly and accurate. Fresno has intercepted 14 passes in their five contests, nine of the grabs were by free safety Carl Ray Harris. Mustang aerial thefts have totaled 12 in four games.

Still leading the California Collegiate Athletic Association, Darryl Thorne has accumulated an impressive rushing record with 80 carries for 375 yards and six touchdowns.

Coach Harper summed up his feelings by simply saying, "This is it."
