CALIFORNIA STATE POLYTECHNIC COLLEGE

Volume XXXIII No. 43

San Luis Obispo, California

Wednesday, November 18, 1970

California State College trustee Dudley Swim will be on campus tomorrow to confer about proposed housing for married students.

New library plan revealed

Hopefully, in a year from now, construction will begin on the proposed college library.

This library, all 306,000 square feet of it, would be the biggest structure on the campus. Rising five stories and costing an estimated $ and a quarter million dollars, the library, if built, will be located where the temporary residence halls now stand, north of the present library.

According to Douglas Gerard, executive dean, who is coordinating this project, the building would be built from brick and concrete materials similar to the ones used to construct the College Union building. Structural brick and concrete, Gerard said, has more endurance, lasts longer and is convenient to work with.

"The funds needed for the construction of the proposed library have a high priority on 1971-72 state budget," said Gerard. He added that although the college system is asking 182 million dollars in capital funds, it is expected that only 30 to 50 million dollars will be received from that amount. "Even though this project has a high priority, it may be deferred because of the reduction in funds, but that is just a guess on my part," said Gerard.

Harry Strause, head librarian, said that he is pleased with the proposals and plans for the new library.

Since the rooms will be large, Strause said, the judicious use of shelves will come into play, to make the areas a little more personal.

Carrels, individual seating units, will be arranged in geometrical patterns, such as swastikas, to break up large areas.

Small four seat tables will be used in the new library, since Strause said that he felt the larger tables now in use in the library create a distracting atmosphere for students.

Hallways will be eliminated in the new building and carpets will be used to help control the sounds of foot traffic.

According to Strause, a new area for instructional services, will be created for the new library. This area would be an individual study center using audio visual materials, such as sound tapes and films.

Marquis and Stoller, San Francisco architects and planners, designed the building.

Cape Kennedy fire destroys structure

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)—Fire struck in a rocket gantry at Cape Kennedy Tuesday extensively damaging a spacecraft checkout room that was being rebuilt, but sparing construction workers, who were lunching at the time.

It was the first major fire in a rocket gantry since the Apollo 1 disaster in which three astronauts were killed in their spacecraft Jan. 27, 1967. Tuesday's fire was several miles from the Apollo 14 rocket, being prepared for a moon launch Jan. 31.

The blaze occurred at launch complex 17B, one of two pads used by Delta rockets to launch unmanned satellites. The other pad was not damaged and will be used for the next Delta launch in January.

Cause of the fire was not determined and the structure was too hot for entry for more than an hour. It was reported, however, that welding work was being carried out in the area Tuesday morning.

The damaged 125-foot tall service tower, being modified to handle a new model Delta, was not to be used for a year and the space agency said "no impact to NASA programs is foreseen."

A checkout room is an enclosure with a controlled atmosphere that fits around satellites mounted on rockets. It is used by engineers to give spacecraft a final check before launch and is called a "clean room" or, in this case, the "483, 973" because of its color.

The space agency said valuable testing equipment had been removed from the room and gantry for the construction work and a spokesman reported damage "may be less than $50,000" although the room was virtually destroyed.

The fire was reported at 11:30 a.m. EST, 10 minutes after construction workers left for lunch. The blaze was brought under control by two cape fire units at noon EST.

Thick black smoke, billowing from the top of the gantry for about a half hour, could be seen from nearby beaches and from office buildings 10 miles away.

The modification work was being carried out by the Swaney Construction Co., of Orlando, Fla., and the project was managed by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

GM optimistic on settlement of work strike

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors went forward Tuesday with plans to begin recalling workers next week on the assumption that the United Auto Workers would ratify a new national contract and end a strike now in its tenth week.

The company was optimistic after 24 union locals around the nation ratified the agreement reached last week by overwhelming margins.

The union proceeded with its schedule of holding ratification votes at locals during the rest of the week. The final ratifications are due Friday and tally of the full nationwide vote comes Saturday. A total of 186 locals must vote on ratification.

With nationwide ratification an apparent certainty, GM officials started machinery for recalling maintenance and other make-ready employees as soon as approval is official to get the plants in shape to begin production by Dec. 1.

Leadership conference

ASI will sponsor a Leadership Conference to be held at Pinecrest Camp in Cambria this weekend, Nov. 20-22.

The conference will emphasize awareness; an encounter with yourself and your relationship in a group situation. Faculty and students are invited, and a fee of $6 will be charged for the weekend, all inclusive.

All interested persons are to meet in the amphitheatre, at 11 a.m. on Thursday, Nov. 19 for further information concerning the conference and transportation to and from the camp.

Two conquer El Capitan

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, Calif. (UPI)—Mountain climbers Warren Harding and Dean Caldwell Tuesday inched up the last 360-foot stretch of their four-week conquest of El Capitan's "Wall of the Early Morning Light."

Harding and Caldwell Monday overcame the last serious obstacle, a 15-foot overhang, and hoped to reach the summit of the 3,400-foot stone monolith late Tuesday.

They were grimy and grizzled after nearly 30 days without setting foot on level ground but looking forward to a dinner of "cheese and wine" on the summit with fellow climbers from their ground party.

A small crowd of climbers, rangers, tourists and newsmen walked up El Capitan along easy hiking trails from the back side to await the mountaineers at the top.

Harding and Caldwell, who refused to be rescued last week when the National Park Service decided they could not make it to the top, were in high spirits on the final leg of the climb.

"They even shouted 'make sure you get there early' when we told them we were going to meet them at the top," said ground co-ordinator Dave Hanna.

Harding, a 44-year-old West Sacramento, Calif., surveyor, and Caldwell, 37, a Milwaukee, Ore., adventurer, set out Oct. 19 to make the first climb of El Capitan's southeast face, poetically named because it catches the first rays of the morning sun.

They had expected to complete the climb in less than two weeks, and took along 20 days' supply of food.

But drenching rains pinned them to the rock and slowed their progress at some points to only a few feet a day.

Last Wednesday, after successive rainstorms had soaked them and their equipment and caused their food to run low, the Park Service decided to rescue them.

But when rescuers flown to the top by helicopter shouted down to Harding that they were "going to rescue you," he replied: "Like hell they are!"

In 1908, Harding led the first ascent of El Capitan, one of the largest stone monoliths in the world and one of the most difficult to climb.

Since then, it has been climbed hundreds of times, but never over the nearly vertical "Early Morning Light" route.

Cuesta to give blues concert

A blues concert is being presented by the Associated Students of Cuesta College. It looks to an exceptional one since the featured performances will be given by the Paul Butterfield Blues Band and John Lee Hooker.

The concert, slated for 8 p.m. on Wednesday, Dec. 2, will be held in the Cuesta College Gymnasium. According to Karen Kelly, student activities chairman, the concert will be open to the public with advance ticket sales only. Admission will be $3.00 for Cuesta students and $3.50 for the public; Cal Poly students must pay the general public price.

Tickets are available at the Gabby Book Store, Kwan Yin Book Store, Stereo West, Supersonic, The Corner, Zeidler and Zeidler, and the Cuesta College Book Store.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Mother Goose out of place

Editor:

I am writing in response to Mr. Jason Clayson's letter published in the Mustang Daily on Tuesday, November 17.

Obviously, above mention Mr. Clayson is not in an environment that suits him.

First of all, Cal Poly is a college which has a fine reputation due to its traditions and ideals. Cal Poly doesn't pretend to be an institution which was created solely as a place where students can "raise hell," as he puts it. Cal Poly is a place where students can come to get an education and a darn good education, I might add.

He is correct in asserting that Cal Poly is an excellent example of a conservative institution. It was established as a conservative institution around the turn of the century, and I truly hope that it remains as such for many years to come.

His incoherent babblings of Mother Goose and Fairy land lead me to believe that he belongs in nursery school rather than an institute of higher learning.

In his reference to the "work force" or Aggies, I think that one thing should be cleared up. IF the Aggies are the work force or the clean up crew of this school, they've done a darn good job. How can I justify statement? How many banks do you see burning in San Luis Obispo? How often do the National Guard troops have to come onto our campus?

The Aggies are proud of their school and do as much as they can to keep this place where there can be a balance of work and fun without the fear of riots and disruptions.

So, Mr. Clayson, all I can say is, if you don't like it, get the hell out, because there are a lot of kids who do like this school and what it stands for.

Question asked

Editor:

After four years at this school, one of the general attitudes burns me up. I am referring to the general consensus that agricultural students are dumb, rating next to the chicken in mentality. If this is true, how come the Ag. students are able to compete on an equal basis in general education classes? In almost every restroom on campus there is obscene graffiti inscribed on the wall by somebody who must have scraped his nose on the ceiling while trying to look down on the ag. students.

This attitude of superiority over the ag. students by some of people in other majors was illustrated in Jason Clayson's letter, which was printed in Tuesday's edition of the Mustang Daily. He uses the entire first half of his letter trying to establish his credence with the campus community by deriding all people concerned with agriculture for this campus's resistance to change and conservative attitude. Did you know, Mr. Clayson, that there is a new swine unit nearing completion at the far end of the airport? I also fail to see how Mr. Clayson arrives at the conclusion that attitudes generated in the School of Agriculture and Natural Resources can be called the attitude of the college, unless the rest of the college agreed. (Last year enrollment of ag. students constituted less than eighteen percent of the student body.) There must be some other conservatives hiding in other parts of the school.

A general question I would like to pose to the entire student body is this: If somebody is different than you are, be he of a different color, from a different nation or even a different part of this college, what gives you the right to consider yourself superior to him? If you start putting other PEOPLE into boxes, somebody will probably put you into a smaller one.

'Ideal School'

Editor:

I once had a problem much like Mr. Jason Clayson. I was attending Cal State Long Beach and hated every minute of it. I started to look around and found my ideal school, Cal Poly. May I suggest that Mr. Clayson start looking. Mr. Clayson might try Cal State San Francisco, Long Beach, San Jose, or most any California State College and leave one school for people like me.

'Minority farce'

Editor:

A very pretty picture was painted by the words of C.R. Lara in Friday's issue of the Mustang Daily, of the farm workers banning together to fight against being oppressed by the growers in California. C.R. Lara makes reference to the inadequate pay and living standards in which the poor farm workers have been forced to live in. My question is who are these so called poor farm workers which CR. Lara is asking you to support?

It is interesting to note that these farm workers of the UFWOC are not by any means a majority of farm labor force in California, but are in fact, a small minority of farm workers farm working force. The UFWOC's interests do not include the wide majority of farm workers. Their stand on higher wages and better living conditions for the farm workers are at best a farce. Their obvious main intent is control of land rather than helping the long forgotten farm workers. C.R.

Lara asks you to support the UFWOC to help the farm worker, the truth is if you support the UFWOC you are supporting a land rather than helping the long forgotten farm workers. C.R. Lara asks you to support the UFWOC to help the farm worker, the truth is if you support the UFWOC you are supporting a small, well financed band of revolutionaries that couldn't care less about the farm workers or their living standards. Their motives are political not humanitarian. They have pushed their campaign to unite the farm worker by half truths and fraud. I can not support their political movement and I deplore their tactics used on the innocent farm workers in the fields of California. I ask you C.R. Lara how many of the farm workers in California support UFWOC and why have they, the vast majority, refused strike? I would also like to ask you and other students at Cal Poly not to support this movement for it is detrimental to agriculture and killing the economy of thousands of innocent farm workers. Join with us of the C.C.A. to investigate and expose this farce to the public. Meeting 7p.m. Wednesday, 115 Ag Bld.

Havens lauded

Editor:

I have just returned from one of the greatest gatherings of people this campus has probably ever witnessed before. Of course I am referring to Richie Havens' concert. This concert was certainly not the disaster that our ASI President predicted, but to the contrary, was a great tribute to the good taste of the C.P. students and the excellent stage presence and quality of music by Mr. Havens.

The almost capacity crowd at the concert certainly proves that fine sounds performed anywhere in the world, will certainly draw the enthusiastic support of the people in the area. I would predict that if the Activities Committee continues to bring this type of sound onto our campus, we will certainly not have to worry about breaking even, but rather we would have to plan a use for the profits, (perhaps a free concert?)

The only points of downfall involving the concert are in reference to the environment within which it was held. Unfortunately the Men's Gym is not an acoustical paradise. It would please me greatly if the next concert could be held at another location. I realize that we are rather short on areas that can accommodate a large capacity, but a look into this may reveal a few excellent opportunities.

I would also like to point out that many people would rather sit on the floor than the hardwood bleachers.

I am looking forward to the next concert with great anticipation. I hope that it proves to be as notable as this one.

Drama fans in for a new treat

"Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead" is not an ominous statement of doom, but the title of a dramatic play by Tom Stoppard scheduled to be produced by the Speech Department on Nov. 19, 20, and 21, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday.

Inspired by William Shakespeare's "Hamlet", the Stoppard drama will be the first in a series of three plays to be produced by the department this year. Curtain time will be 8:30 p.m. in the Little Theater.

J. Murray Smith, a member of the faculty for 10 years who formerly worked as a director at the famed Pasadena Playhouse and at the Civic Theater in Denver, is directing rehearsals for the production.

Tickets for the three performances of "Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead" available to both students and the general public.

Tickets priced at $2 for adults, $1 for students, and 50 cents for children under 12 years, may be purchased at the Speech Department office in the English building.

Season tickets, including admission to one performance of each of the three productions scheduled during the year are $4.25 each. They may also be purchased at the Speech Department.

Poly Royal meeting slated

The Junior Class of Architecture is sponsoring a Poly Royal meeting this Thursday, Nov. 19, in Engineering West 223 ones used to construct the College.

The purpose of the meeting will be to select a Poly Royal theme and to elect officers for the School of Architecture. All architecture students are encouraged to participate with your ideas and comments.

ROTC analysis Sociology of worker

by William M. Boyce
Col. U.S. Army—retired

The interesting dialogue you have been carrying with respect to the military during the past few weeks leads me to offer this further analysis.

There are some individuals who actually believe that wars are created and fostered by the American military establishment and, therefore, by downgrading or eliminating the military element we can abolish war. Please let me assure you that nothing is further from the truth.

A military officer is closely akin to a Captain in the Fire Department. The Fire Captain's salary continues whether he fights a fire or not. He trains himself and his subordinates in how to best fight a fire with minimum loss of life and property damage. He also attempts to educate the general public and his own department in methods of fire prevention. Precisely the same analogy can be applied to the military officer. His salary will continue whether or not he fights a war. He trains in methods designed to bring a war to a successful conclusion with minimum loss of life, and he tries to find peaceful solutions to world problems.

A military officer is a practical pacifist. He knows that if war comes, he must fight it just as you. He and his sons may be killed just as you and yours. He must be separated from his family and undertake hardship and sacrifice just as you must do to protect our country, our freedom, and our way of life. Better than most, the military officer recognizes war as a fiendish phenomenon of society. For all these reasons, just like you, he abhors war and seeks peace. On the other hand, he knows that during the past 4,000 years of history, less than 300 years have passed without war. With this dismal record, he recognizes the reality that war is an unfortunate possibility in the future. Like you, he enjoys our way of life. He reasons that if tragedy should strike and war should come, some Americans had better master the art of warfare and be able to bring any such war to a successful conclusion. He is, indeed, a practical pacifist. Wars are not caused by the American military establishment.

Wars are caused by aggressive countries with a lust for power and greed who seek dominance over other countries who are weak or who have been weakened. The real warmongers in the United States today are groups of people who deliberately create conditions that would invite aggressor attacks against us and that would force us to surrender to any aggressor because of our inability to resist. This is phony pacifistic idealism and is playing directly into the hands of aggressors. I urge you to read a most revealing book in this regard entitled, "While England Slept" by the late President John F. Kennedy. The phony pacifists are those who scream loudly at any element of American militarism but who never so much as whisper when Russia invades Hungary and forces its will on those poor people by armed might. They do not demonstrate against a Russian invasion of Czechoslovakia or the annual May Day parade of overt armed might on the streets of Moscow. There are no active pacifists in Russia or Red China. If there were, they have been relegated long since to concentration camps or have been murdered.

If we will only recognize that wars are caused by lust for power, by greed and by envy an entirely new light is focused upon the subject. Examine, if you will, the so-called dissident elements in this regard. Do not such elements have a lust for power? Are they not greedy and envious as well? Under such ruses as a need for a change or power to the people, they themselves are seeking power because they envy our freedom and because they greedily seek to take over our society and operate it to their own selfish ends. They do not seek freedom. They themselves are the very fascists that they so loudly denounce.

Don't, I beg of you, permit your well meaning idealism to be used as a tool by these despicable bigots to foster their own ends. These are the warmongers who seek to weaken us and thereby invite aggressor notions to force us into war and to try to conquer us. These are the people who foster and cause war. These are the self-proclaimed powers of the future. Think this through! Your future and that of your country may well depend upon your clarity of thought, your sound reasoning, and your perceptibility to recognize what causes war and who is doing the causing.

EDITOR'S NOTE:

Mr. Boyce is now a faculty member in the Business Administration Department and was head of the Military Science Department here from 1963-65.

A new course of general interest being offered by the Social Sciences Department for the Winter Quarter includes SOC SCI 470, Selected Advanced Topics which will focus on the various aspects of Industrial Sociology. More specific areas include: The sociological analysis of the social system of work organizations, the structure and function of work organizations and industrial bureaucracy, the social and psychological effects of industrialism on the worker and the various dimensions of role behavior in work positions.

Although this course is conventionally called "Industrial Sociology," the material covered is not in any way restricted to "industry" and the course might more comprehensively be called the "Sociology of work." The sociological analysis of the social system of the "work place" and the study of the concepts and problems of all kinds of work organizations includes stores, offices, factories, restaurants, schools, churches, hospitals, mines, military bases and ships. It is seen that the course is of direct relevance to virtually all major curricula on campus, as almost all students will be working in some kind of organization following termination of their formal education careers.

Prerequisites for the course include Soc. 105, IR 214 or Psy. 302. Scheduled for MWF 1200, the instructor will be Dr. Malcolm Carr of the Social Science Dept.

Dr. Carr received the B.A. degree with distinction in Sociology from the University of Missouri, where he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa; the M.A. degree from Indiana University; and the Ph.D. from UCLA. He has specialized in the area of industrial sociology for a number of years, holding a series of prominent occupational as well as teaching positions and membership in well over twelve professional societies and organizations.

His doctoral dissertation,

"Technological, Organizational, and Communicational Dimensions of Occupational Roles in Formal Organizations: A Study in Role Characteristics of Work Positions," was completed under the chairmanship of Prof. Melville Dalton (author of Men Who Manage) was based on SAMOA (Systematic Approach of Multidimensional Occupational Analysis) research project conducted under Dr. Carr's direction. Requests for copies of papers and reports of the industrial, government, and academic sources in some 11 countries and 14 states, ranging from Mexico to Russia and California to Maine.

A classical guitar recital will be given by Donald L. Amori during this Thursday's College Hour. Amori has recently returned from Spain where he studied classical guitar on a Fulbright Grant.

The recital is open to the public and admission is free.

NERELLI'S NIBBLES

Surviving on bread alone

by Ann Nerelli

One of the most difficult facets of college life, or any other life for that matter, is making bread. After all, that's what we came to this noble institution for, to get "an education" so we could go out into the world and rip off all the dumb guys.

...So while we garner the fruits of the intellectual world we must sustain ourselves. Now, life sustenance to some people means that they have to work, in a college community that can get kind of dull: pumping gas, sewing, sweeping floors, ironing, selling vegetable matter, or any other schemes cogitated on how to assume vast sums of bread.

One way to save bread is not to spend it. So in an effort to save your bread and at the same time satisfy mad cravings in the area of your solar plexus, we offer a simple solution: make bread. What could be more fun than counterfeiting that stuff they sell in all the stores that looks like bread and has all sorts of embalming chemicals that keeps it

"Somehow, I never imagined that education could be so enjoyable..."

"The streets are made of cobblestone, and there is a castle and a cathedral dating back to the Middle Ages..."

"There are so many good-looking women running around it's unreal..."

Typical of the reaction a group of 67 students currently enrolled in Sweden with the California State International Programs are the above comments on the opening weeks of their study abroad. Students in the Swedish

Program are among some 500 from 18 State College campuses that recently embarked on a year study at distinguished institutions of higher learning throughout Europe, the Middle East, Asia and Latin America. Applications for the 1971-72 academic year are now open, and will be accepted through January 8, 1971.

Students in Sweden attend either the University of Stockholm or the University of Uppsala.

According to Denise A. Altree

of Hayward, "Sweden is a long way from Hayward, and it is much different from Hayward. It is really fantastic!"

Janet E. Dickens of Sacramento commented on the economic situation in Sweden, "Fifty to seventy percent of a wage earner's income goes to taxes. Ceilings have been put on food prices due to inflation. You even have to have the color of your house okayed before you paint it. On the other hand, communism here is not a dirty word; communists hold 17 decisive seats in the parliament."

Sweden can be viewed as a semi-utopia in the eyes of Robert B. Hughes of Sacramento.

"Sweden must be one of the world's most beautiful places to live. Beautiful women everywhere, no race problems, a government that at least appears to know what it is doing, and no poverty to speak of. Shopping is just as easy, though prices are generally higher."

From San Luis Obispo, Erik H. Lund stated that he never imagined that education could be so enjoyable. "Never a week-end or hardly a day passes without an invitation from our landlady for coffee or our relatives for some gala event they have planned. We have been wine, dined, chauffeured, entertained, served and pampered."

Sean M. Wharton also of San Luis Obispo comments on women's liberation.

"There is no need for a Women's Liberation Front in Sweden. The equality of the sexes is an established fact. Girls go virtually anywhere unescorted. It is most common for the girl to pay her share when she is out with a date."

An overall view of Sweden was given by Kent R. Rees of San Francisco.

"Sex, suicide and socialism are not the outstanding characteristics of this society any more than hamburgers, poodles and cowboys are the most noteworthy features of America. This is not a 'free-for-all' society characterized by the kind of spontaneity and 'I want to live for the moment as fully as possible' ideology consciously and subconsciously embraced by a large segment of the U.S. youth 'movement'. On the contrary, this is a highly structured society within the framework of what had been termed a 'disciplined democracy'. Life is future oriented and the struggle to improve one's material comfort is clearly the most important public issue. The well developed welfare state cushions the individual in a blanket of security, virtually guaranteeing every person a minimum living standard and equal social services regardless of one's station in life."

Focus on Sweden

"Somehow, I never imagined that education could be so enjoyable..."

"The streets are made of cobblestone, and there is a castle and a cathedral dating back to the Middle Ages..."

"There are so many good-looking women running around it's unreal..."

Typical of the reaction a group of 67 students currently enrolled in Sweden with the California State International Programs are the above comments on the opening weeks of their study abroad. Students in the Swedish

Program are among some 500 from 18 State College campuses that recently embarked on a year study at distinguished institutions of higher learning throughout Europe, the Middle East, Asia and Latin America. Applications for the 1971-72 academic year are now open, and will be accepted through January 8, 1971.

Students in Sweden attend either the University of Stockholm or the University of Uppsala.

According to Denise A. Altree

of Hayward, "Sweden is a long way from Hayward, and it is much different from Hayward. It is really fantastic!"

Janet E. Dickens of Sacramento commented on the economic situation in Sweden, "Fifty to seventy percent of a wage earner's income goes to taxes. Ceilings have been put on food prices due to inflation. You even have to have the color of your house okayed before you paint it. On the other hand, communism here is not a dirty word; communists hold 17 decisive seats in the parliament."

Sweden can be viewed as a semi-utopia in the eyes of Robert B. Hughes of Sacramento.

"Sweden must be one of the world's most beautiful places to live. Beautiful women everywhere, no race problems, a government that at least appears to know what it is doing, and no poverty to speak of. Shopping is just as easy, though prices are generally higher."

From San Luis Obispo, Erik H. Lund stated that he never imagined that education could be so enjoyable. "Never a week-end or hardly a day passes without an invitation from our landlady for coffee or our relatives for some gala event they have planned. We have been wine, dined, chauffeured, entertained, served and pampered."

Sean M. Wharton also of San Luis Obispo comments on women's liberation.

"There is no need for a Women's Liberation Front in Sweden. The equality of the sexes is an established fact. Girls go virtually anywhere unescorted. It is most common for the girl to pay her share when she is out with a date."

An overall view of Sweden was given by Kent R. Rees of San Francisco.

"Sex, suicide and socialism are not the outstanding characteristics of this society any more than hamburgers, poodles and cowboys are the most noteworthy features of America. This is not a 'free-for-all' society characterized by the kind of spontaneity and 'I want to live for the moment as fully as possible' ideology consciously and subconsciously embraced by a large segment of the U.S. youth 'movement'. On the contrary, this is a highly structured society within the framework of what had been termed a 'disciplined democracy'. Life is future oriented and the struggle to improve one's material comfort is clearly the most important public issue. The well developed welfare state cushions the individual in a blanket of security, virtually guaranteeing every person a minimum living standard and equal social services regardless of one's station in life."

from rotting? Nix, say some of the great chefs out there, it takes too long with all that rising and stuff. But at last, through incredible delving through files we have found a home cooked bread that even speed freaks can handle, dig it:

For this operation you'll need:

- 3 1/4 cups of flour
- 1/2 cup of milk
- 1/2 cup water
- 1/2 cup oil
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon of salt
- twice eggs (2)
- 1 package dry yeast

After you have assimilated all your ingredients, try this: stir together 1 1/4 cups of flour and the package of dry yeast. Then heat up the milk, oil, water, sugar and salt. Just get it warm, if it gets too hot your yeast freaks out and the bread looks like a mushroom cloud. Check the heat by dabbing it on the inside of your wrist—it should be warm.

Add the liquid stuff and the flour-yeast and throw in the two eggs. Now at this point you can also add any other little goodies you have laying around: cheese, raisins, nuts, leftover hamburger, jelly beans, apples, rumor has it that some vegetable seasonings really contribute to some far-out bread.

After you have your stuff mixed and the other added attractions, beat the thing with a fork until stiff. That takes about a minute, over-flagellation can botch the batter, so be careful, beat it stiff-not dead.

Knowing that many of you students have kitchens stocked with Early Cafeteria silverware and sometimes eat dinner off of your roommate's frisbee, we have another suggestion. Instead of putting the batter into a pan and coming out with the stocker shaped loaf, get a coffee can, bear can, or any other can and pour the batter on. Fill the can only about half full and then cover it with a dish towel or an old shirt and let it rise until the batter is a quarter inch from the top of the can, it takes about an hour.

When the uprising is complete, stick the can in a 350 degree oven and cook for 30 minutes. When the stuff is done it should look brown on top. You'll have some freaky looking monolithic bread that tastes good and costs about half of what is charged in the stores.

Hymns in Cantonese

by Art Tyree

The room is a warm comfortable one, with a fireplace on one wall and a piano at another. Chinese prints decorate the walls and on the coffee table are several black books with Chinese characters on the covers. The only non-oriental faces among the group are the host, hostess, and two guests.

Friday evenings for the past four years at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer McLennon, 645 Grove Street, San Luis Obispo, have seen gatherings of the Chinese Christian Fellowship, composed of students from Hong Kong and Taiwan who attend this college.

When the room is filled, the group is called to order, the black hymnbooks are passed around and the fellowship members begin to sing favorite hymns—usually in English. Then a member leads in prayer, in Cantonese. The guest speaker, who may be a local pastor or faculty member from this college is introduced, and the group listens with concentration as he expounds a passage from the Bible.

Among the 20 to 30 students present are a number to whom the Christian life is a recently-discovered experience. Eddie Chan, from Hong Kong, an electronics engineering major, has been coming to Chinese Christian Fellowship meetings over the last three years. It was 10 months ago, he says, after asking God to show Himself to him, he became a Christian.

Billie Chu, an architectural engineering major from Hong Kong, became a Christian in high school. He discovered the fellowship here at a welcome meeting sponsored by the group.

Irene Lee, an attractive biochemistry major, became a Christian, she says, after coming to fellowship meetings.

Fellowship host Elmer McLennon, a self-employed civil engineer in this city, and his wife Florence have observed the growth of the Chinese Christian Fellowship through its history. A Chinese pastor began the work by gathering students in the McLennon home about four years ago. During the first year, about 15 to 20 were involved. Now, McLennon reports, 30 to 40 come to the sessions.

"The Chinese kids, like any group, like to be together." "We just let 'em take over." Speaking of the calibre of the group, McLennon adds, "Their ideals are good. They have high standards."

The McLennons maintain contact with many fellowship members who have graduated, and have even attended weddings of some. They have received gifts from some on their travels.

A "welcome song" which the fellowship members sing, first in English and again in Cantonese, begins, "There's a welcome here . . . a Christian welcome here . . ." In either language, it's for real.

Russian moon-crawler beats U.S. to punch

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)—A robot crawling machine Tuesday accelerated the Soviet Union's apparent drive to catch up with the manned lunar exploration carried out by America's curtailed Apollo project.

The surprise operations of the eight-wheeled vehicle, Soviet talk of future moon crawlers and the fact that Russia has carried out three moon flights in two months demonstrate that Russia has embarked on an ambitious unmanned moon program.

Project Apollo, on the other hand, has been cut back and has only four manned landings left between now and mid-1972. After that, because of spending reductions, the U.S. Space Agency plans no further moon flights—manned or unmanned—until sometime in the 1980s.

The landing of the Soviet vehicle called "Lunokhod 1" came eight months ahead of America's plans to fly a two-man moon car to the moon on next July's Apollo 15 mission. America's next moon flight is Apollo 14 set for launch Jan. 31.

Whether by accident or design, the Russian machine's exploration site, the great circular Sea of Rains, is directly related to both the manned Apollo 14 and 15 expeditions.

Scientists believe the Sea of Rains was gouged out by the explosive impact of a giant meteoroid a few billion years ago and later filled in by lava flows.

U.S. and Russia agree—no weapons in Cuba

WASHINGTON (UPI)—State Department officials said Tuesday that Russia has given the United States private assurances to back up its public pledge not to introduce offensive weapons into Cuba.

The officials said these private verifications reinforced a recent public Soviet statement, distributed by the Tass news agency Oct. 13, which included a denial that Russia was establishing a naval base on the southern coast of Cuba.

State Department spokesman Robert J. McCloskey meanwhile said that the presence of Soviet naval vessels in the harbor of Cienfuegos, including a submarine tender and barges, did not constitute a violation of what he described as "an understanding" between Russia and the United States that the Soviet Union would not introduce offensive weapons, or bases for them, into the island.

The other part of the understanding involves the U.S. pledge not to invade Cuba.

This understanding was expressed in a statement by President John F. Kennedy in November, 1962, after he had forced the withdrawal of Soviet intermediate range missiles from Cuba.

Church named top Mustang

"There's nothing Mike Church thinks can not be done until it's proven otherwise," commented defensive backfield coach Jim

Sanderson. "He'll do everything he can to become faster, smarter and tougher." Until proven otherwise, the Mustang's "Player of the week" is going to hang onto one flaming ambition—a desire to play professional football.

Sanderson acknowledges that the junior defensive back, who sat out last season with a broken arm suffered just prior to the start of the 1969 campaign, is "better prepared mentally than any other back as far as recognizing sets and anticipating what the opponent is going to run from these sets."

Head Coach Joe Harper asserts that Church's best suit is "his aggressiveness. He always plays with a great deal of determination. He does everything pretty well but nothing outstanding. He's the best strong safety in the conference by far."

Despite his selection as "Player of the Week" for his performance against Cal State Fullerton last week, the six foot, 181-pounder insists he played better against Long Beach than he did against the Titans.

Foremost in Church's mind was the fact that he had been beaten by Fullerton's Tyrone

Perry on a flag pattern from the 14-yard line for a touchdown. The coaching staff accepted the responsibility for the score, however. "Fullerton showed us something different with their wide receivers on the play," Sanderson explained. "We should have been in a zone coverage with our secondary and goal line defense up front," he noted. "The touchdown was our fault because we hadn't prepared our men for this situation."

Against Fullerton Church had one interception in the end zone to blunt a Titan drive just before the half with the Mustangs leading 20-0 in route to a 28-18 verdict. He had another apparent theft nullified by the officials on a controversial play.

Church is thankful for the fact that he's played in seven of the Mustangs' first eight games. "It feels like I'm finally getting in the groove as a junior," he remarked. In his sophomore season of 1968 he played in half of his team's 10 games missing the other five due to injuries.

Church still thinks he can reach his goal of eight interceptions this season, even though he needs five steals to reach his goal in the final two games. There's nobody telling him he can't do it.

Senior Greg Tibbetts leads the pack shortly after the start of the CCAA meet. He went to the nationals in Wheaton, Ohio but did not place.

Tibbetts 70th in field of 400

The final stage of a disappointing cross country season begins this Saturday when the Mustangs enter the United States Track and Field Federation (USTFF) regional championships in Fresno Saturday.

November 24 the Mustangs tangle with University of California at Santa Barbara and December 6 will participate in the Western Hemisphere Marathon in Culver City.

All action now is anti-climatic, as the Mustangs followed last year's ninth place finish in the small college division of the NCAA national meet with a limited performance this year. Only a single runner, Greg Tibbetts, qualified for the nationals, and he finished 70th in

Wrestlers to vie for position

The leading contenders for 10 coveted spots in the Mustangs' varsity wrestling lineup will be determined tonight in the Men's Gym when Coach Vaughan Hitchcock sends his team through the annual intrasquad match competition. Action gets under way at 8 p.m.

This will be the only opportunity to see the Mustangs perform at home until January 13 when they take on Oklahoma University, the team ranked fifth in the nation. Two days later the Mustangs entertain no. 1 ranked Oklahoma State.

"Wednesday night's matches are very important to the boys," Hitchcock noted. "This is so particularly because the winners establish themselves as the No. 1 man at their weight and they must be beaten twice in challenge bouts before they lose their position. This is very difficult to do because of the closeness of competition we have on our squad," Hitchcock added.

The outstanding bout on Wednesday's card pairs former national champion John Finch against Lee Torres in the 155 pound match. Torres was second in his weight class the past two years after capturing a national title as a freshman in 1968.

Tickets to the intra-squad match are priced at $1 for adults and 50 cents for students. They be available at the door.

Several prospective first stringers are injured and may not be able to battle for first string billing this evening. The group includes Guy Greene at 118 pounds, Glen Warner at 126 and Dennis Johnson at 167. Greene has an injured neck muscle, has an ailing knee while Johnson sustained a recent rib injury.

"The teams should be fairly equal. For the most part the wrestlers are the no. 1 and no. 2 men in their weight classes," Hitchcock advised. Three football players will join the squad after their sport has concluded.

They are Joe Nigos at 167, John Miller at 190 and Wayne Robinson at heavyweight.

Gary McBride, who redshirted last year after tying national champion Terry Hall in the intra-squad match, will probably meet Greene in the 118-pound opener. Greene, who had a 14-4-2 record last year as a frosh, was Northern California prep champ at Los Gatos.

Last year's regular 126 pounder, pounder, sophomore Glenn Anderson, owner of a 30-7 record, will face Tom Robak, a freshman who last year won the Northern California High School title.

Katsuji Neiro, who last summer won the National Wrestling Federation Greco Roman 138-pound title, will vie with Larry Morgan in the 134-pound bout. Morgan, a regular last season as a freshman, had a 26-6 record. He was a Junior World freestyle champion in 1969.

Paired at 142 will be Steve Gardner, another regular as a frosh last season, and three year varsity letterman Ron Shearer. Gardner posted a 26-8 mark last year. Shearer, stymied by injuries last season, had a 9-3 record.

Two time San Joaquin Valley champion Cecil Crowder, a sophomore from Bakersfield, will challenge another soph, Allyn Cooke in the 150 pound match. Cooke also is a Valley champ from Tulare. The latter notched a 16-4-1 mark as a freshman.

Finch and Torres will square off in the featured 155-pound match.

The participants in 167 will be Frank Oakes, a Yucaipa wrestler who redshirted last year after compiling a 9-7 prep record, and

Junior Rodeo to come here

The first Junior Rodeo of the San Luis Obispo Chapter of the Future Farmers of America, will take place Nov. 21 in Collet Arena.

The rodeo, sponsored by the FFA and the Rodeo Club, will get under way at 1:00 pm, according to Charley Simmons, rodeo chairman.

The scheduled events include calf roping, bareback riding, calf riding, steer stopping, steer riding, girl's barrel racing, team roping, girl's goat tying, and junior-senior team roping.

Following the rodeo Saturday night, the Rodeo Club is sponsoring a Western Dance in Crandall Gym from 9:00 pm to 1:00 am.

Frank Barnhart, a transfer from Palomar JC, where he was the outstanding wrestler in the Mission Conference.

Rich Swift will meet Michigan State transfer John Hall in the 177 pound division.

Gary Malolli, 1969-70 regular at 190, will face Ron Lucas. Malolli had a 25-8 record last season.

State junior college heavyweight champion Tim Kopitar, who scales over 300 pounds, will meet Keith Leland, soph from Ukiah who redshirted last year due to a knee injury. Kopitar from Diablo Valley JC had a 27-3 record last year.

Tibbetts places 70th...

a field of close to 400 runners.

Liam Ryan of Cal Poly Pomona found the six-mile event at Wheaton to his liking, and placed ninth.

"I think that we have constructed a very good foundation this year for the next few seasons," long distance coach Larry Bridges said. "This is especially true because we are such a young team."

Seniors Tibbetts, Wally McConnell and Bill Steele along with sophomores Dale Horton and Frank Uher and freshman Rich Walline will run in the College

Division of this week's meet in Fresno. Brian MacPherson and Russ Walline, both freshmen, will run in the Open Division.

15,800,000 COLLEGE STUDENTS CAN'T BE WRONG

By conservative estimate more than fifteen million college students have used Cliff's Notes since we became America's first literary study aid. This preference continues to build - for two big reasons:

1 / QUALITY - The easy-to-understand commentary and explanation you get from Cliff's Notes result from painstaking work by our board of authors. Predominantly Ph.D.'s, these scholars are specially selected for their knowledge of particular works and for their ability to make these works meaningful to you.

2 / AVAILABILITY - Cliff's Notes concentrate on giving you all the plays and novels most frequently assigned in college. If your dealer is temporarily out of the title you need, ask him to call us on his special "Hot Line."
