CALIFORNIA STATE POLYTECHNIC COLLEGE

Vol. XXXIII No. 117

San Luis Obispo, California

Thursday, May 6, 1971

Two of the demonstrators in downtown San Luis Obispo were arrested yesterday.

Two dozen march

Downtown protest

Some of the citizens smiled, others scowled, while some even joked—and the police kept their eyes on the demonstrators.

The police actually outnumbered the two dozen demonstrators, who were canvassing San Luis Obispo's downtown, trying to get merchants to close down in protest of the Indochinese War. Although the theme of the march was "no business as usual," downtown SLO experienced "business as usual."

Student Dave Reichart said that the group would be walking around the downtown area, talking to merchants and explaining what the demonstration was all about. The protesters met at Mission Plaza and then began their march, which was planned to pass the Selective Service office and Bank of America.

Singing, "Give Peace A Chance," the group marched into the courthouse, followed by a bevy of reporters and photographers from the various media.

SLO Chief of Police Ervin Rodgers said that there was a normal compliment of police on hand, and many of this normal compliment circled around as the group marched up and down the halls singing and chanting.

People came drifting by to join the demonstration while a proportional number were leaving.

The demonstration was in conjunction with similar protests all over the country. Some of the students were boycotting classes in an effort to protest the Indochina war.

It, as well as similar demonstrations nation-wide, came as a climax to some 17 days of marches on the nation's capital. The marches were designed to bring Congress to act immediately to end the conflict in Vietnam. Since the demonstrations began there have been some 11,500 arrests.

Though most of the demonstrators in Washington were young, white, and long-haired, there were exceptions. This little old, gray-haired lady, who gave her age as 84, drew a cluster of cheers from the anti-war demonstrators when she was arrested.

Peace treaty gets arrests

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The arrests by hundreds of helmeted policemen followed presentation of a People's Peace Treaty to four congressmen who addressed the cheering, whistling crowd over a hastily constructed public address system. They were Reps. Bella Abzug, D-N.Y.; Parren J.

Mitchell, D-Md.; Charles B. Rangel, D-N.Y., and Dellums.

After the speeches, Dellums, a 6-foot-6 former Marine, shouldered his way to the bottom of the steps to protest the arrests, and a policeman blocked the way when Dellums summoned a staff aide.

Annexation faces trouble

A bill pending in the Assembly Ways and Means Committee could hang up the annexation of this campus to the city of San Luis Obispo.

The bill, entitled AB338 Parking Fine Return Bill, would reappropriate 50 per cent of the revenues derived from parking violations in the county of San Luis Obispo into a state college parking fund. This would affect all California State Colleges and the monies would be pooled to benefit the entire college system.

Estimated revenue for one year from parking violations issued on this campus is $40,000. The bill, if passed, would enable $20,000 to go to the state college parking fund.

However, the college has already proposed to the city of San Luis Obispo that if it were to annex this campus the $40,000 would go to the city as part of an $82,500 package.

The city would also receive $32,500 from an increased gasoline tax and $10,000 from a one percent sales tax on all goods sold on campus which currently goes to the County of San Luis Obispo.

The major condition of the proposal also calls for $40,000 of the money, or $12 per campus resident, which ever is greater, to be put into a committee made up of city and college officials. "The money," according to Executive Dean Doug Gerard, "would be put in committee to be used as security for subsidies. With this money the college could make renovations on Mustang Stadium, subsidize a public transit system in San Luis Obispo which may not be able to pay for itself, and do things to benefit both the college and the city of San Luis Obispo."

If the Parking Fine Return Bill is passed, it will override any deal between the college and the city and the chances of annexation will be slim. According to Gerard, "If the bill is passed, I doubt if the city fathers will look with quite so much favor on the annexation."

11,500 arrests in Capitol as demonstrations stop

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Wearry, hungry demonstrators, their ranks thinned by homesick defectors and 11,500 arrests in three days, marched on the Capitol Wednesday for a final organized demand that the United States get out of Indochina immediately.

An advance contingent of 50 long-haired protesters clapped and yelled "Right on!" as a high school band from Lincoln, Ill., entertained tourists on the steps of the House of Representatives and the Wausau, Wis., school safety patrol smilingly posed for photographs in brilliant spring weather.

The 17th and last scheduled day of antiwar protests in the capital coincided with the first anniversary of the Kent State killings, and thousands of other demonstrators rallied in New York City, Boston, Chicago, San Francisco and at the Kent State campus in Ohio.

At least eight persons were arrested when about 200 antiwar demonstrators, including students from the University of California at Santa Barbara, ignored police orders to disperse from a "research park" at Goleta, Calif., where a number of defense contractors are situated.

In New York, several thousand high school and college students demonstrated throughout the city.

While Washington authorities processed several hundred remaining protestors held in the famous Washington Coliseum on disorderly conduct charges, rush hour commuters rode to work without incident past federal troops, National Guardsmen and police guarding the capital's major bridges and thoroughfares.

Blemishes in Almanac

Editor:

Perhaps it is fortunate that Randall Fry didn't observe Saturday's Almanac from the front row. If he had, his accurate report of the event would also have included some unfavorable commentary on the behavior of the audience.

John Jackson deserved apologies from the drunk and foul-mouthed people who were impatient for Charley Musslewhite's "rock" music, and thus would not listen to Jackson's superb and individual blues.

Ray and Ina Patterson deserved much praise for coping with the rude girls three rows from the front who persisted in mocking the performers' un-Western accents.

Charley Musslewhite and his group also deserved apologies from the large group of people who were too intoxicated and too busy using their knives on the rope to appreciate his music when their hero finally came on stage.

Lastly, one of the Morris Brothers and Jack Elliot deserved a soft and sincere sigh of thanks for doing what the otherwise good ushers could not do, quieting the boorish groups to the south and the inconsiderate girls near the front of the stage, so the excellent music could be heard.

The one mistake the ushers made was in not eliminating the small group of drunks before their numbers increased. I didn't enjoy being fallen and trampled upon by members of this group. I was also profoundly embarrassed by the members of the audience surrounding me, and could see the disturbance in the faces and performances of our guests.

But thank you, audience, (and ushers) for the perfectly green, clean football field left at the end; and thank you, Fine Arts Committee people, for all your hours and hours of hard work which culminated in a memorable, 90 per cent successful, and hopefully repeatable event.

Peace treaty

"Let him alone," said Del-lums, grabbing the the policeman's arm. "He's on my staff."

"I don't care who he is, and you get your hand off me," the officer snapped, shoving Del-luma's hand away.

The protesters then swarmed past police lines chanting "One, Two, Three, Four —We Don't Want Your F——War!"

A weak ahead

The ASI elections campaign is barely a week old and already the same old political rhetoric is being spewed forth for student consumption.

This year there is an added twist in student election: one candidate is openly espousing a platform that fairly shouts for student unity. At the same time, he is attempting to get student support by placing fliers in strategic areas about the campus that proposes a concept that is nothing short of blatant discrimination.

Student government is already in enough disfavor without generating even more student apathy by questionable campaign methods. It only leaves one to make the decision that the individual is acting only in self-interests and not in the interests of the students, which is his function.

Cal Poly cannot afford another year of student government which allows students to become so alienated that they choose not to vote.

Cal Poly cannot afford another year of student government in which individuals become politicians first and watchdogs of student interest second.

Cal Poly cannot afford another year in which student government fails to have a cohesive group of students behind it so that they are able to effect change when it is necessary and needed.

Cal Poly cannot afford a year of weak student government. It only spoils the chances of having a government which is meaningful.

In short, Cal Poly cannot afford to have more of the same. They will lose a lot more than student government, they will lose their voice in the affairs of the college. They will lose their attempt to gain a voice. They will lose their rights as students.

Indian announcer spans cultural gap with music

Vijay the DJ is such a perfect title that any disc jockey would be happy to have it. But only one does—Vijay is his real name.

Vijay Pendse, a senior business major from Bombay, India, has stepped into the KCPR spotlight to host 45 minutes of music from his homeland of India. The program is called International Sounds and is aired every Tuesday from 6:00 to 6:45 p.m. While talking with his friends from India, the question arose as to why Indian music wasn't played on the campus radio. Vijay volunteered to investigate the reason and even offer his services to the station. KCPR accepted Vijay's offer and the first program was aired last April 20.

Since Indian records are hard to come by, Vijay has been borrowing records from his Indian friends and using the few he owns for the show. The program is taped ahead of time and then played in the Tuesday timeslot.

Vijay said that he hoped the music would "bring two cultures together and show the music of different countries." In the future Vijay hopes to bring two instructors from the campus on the show where they will speak on the cultural exchange and industry of India.

SAC sets evaluation conditions

The Student Affairs Council voted overwhelmingly in favor of a faculty evaluation proposal submitted to it Tuesday night by its Faculty Evaluations Committee.

The proposal listed five major conditions for the evaluation: all faculty will be required to be evaluated on a quarterly basis; evaluations will be put into a faculty member's personnel file; all personnel matters will be open for students to present their views; all results of the evaluation will be published; the evaluation should use the same questions as the Assist program did.

According to ASI vice-president and committee chairman Tony Turkovich, "The proposal now has to go in front of the Academic Senate and Pres. Robert Kennedy for approval before it can be implemented."

The proposal is the direct result of the referendum which SNAP initiated last month and was voted on by the students of this campus.

A similar proposal was turned down by the Academic Senate earlier last month. Col. William Boyce, chairman of the Student Affairs Committee of the Academic Senate explained then that there is a legal technicality which prohibits any unsigned data from going into an instructor's file.

The only difference between the new proposal and the one which had been previously rejected is that the new one provides for a uniform evaluation of teachers in all departments and for the results of the evaluation to be published.

The defeated proposal called for each department to set up a committee of its own to look into a procedure of evaluation and the results were not to be published.

Pen vs project

Opposition to the proposed Highway 1 construction began yesterday when the Citizens Committee to Save Our Valley circulated two petitions aimed at halting the project before it begins.

The petitions, addressed to the San Luis Obispo City Council and the county Board of Supervisors request that officials refuse to sign freeway agreements with the Division of Highways that would initiate construction.

The 7.1 mile road was originally proposed to bypass congested areas of Highway 1 within the city limits.

The Citizens Committee contends that the freeway, which will run along the east side of Los Osos Valley and across the volcanic peaks, will open up those areas to development of housing, motels, restaurants and gas stations.

Errors hand Valley State conference crown

In a championship match mistakes usually take away your chances of winning. That was just the case Tuesday as the Mustangs lost a doubleheader and most likely the championship to San Fernando Valley State.

The diamond men started out as if they were going to shove the Matadors past the Mexican border as they scored five runs in the first two innings. But the Mustang batsmen were silent for the rest of the afternoon except for an occasional hit or two.

Three errors were committed by the Mustangs in both games, allowing the Matadors five free runs total.

Glenn Egusa and Dave Oliver opened with walks to start the four-run burst. Steve Freeborn continued his hot hitting streak by singling in Egusa. Dave Kline smashed a ball that was fumbled and allowed a second run to score. Dave Snow extended his RBI lead by blasting a two-run single to left.

Egusa and Oliver were the main characters in gaining the Mustangs' last run of the afternoon. In the second inning of the first game, those two singled and pulled off a double steal. Freeborn collected his second of three hits to score Egusa. That was the final run to be scored for the Mustangs.

For the rest of the afternoon the Matadors pounded away at the Mustangs. Errors contributed to three of the Matadors runs in the five-run third. The verdict: the Mustangs beat themselves.

With one out pitcher Bob LoPresti reached first on an error. The next two batters got aboard to fill the bases. The big blow came when Matador catcher Dan Ravare belted a double of the fence to clean the bases. He then moved to third on a wild pitch and scored when the next batter singled. The inning tied the score and allowed the Matadors to capture the game in the tenth inning.

The Mustangs had two more scoring opportunities in the sixth and seventh as they advanced men to third but were unable to score.
