Cyclists plan "march" on city

by
Pat Thomson
Staff Writer

Bike riders of San Luis Obispo are uniting tonight at six at the Mission Plaza.

The goal? To take up as many parking spaces in downtown San Luis Obispo as possible. One bike will be parked in one car parking space as a motor vehicle would be normally.

The bike "march" is a direct reaction to the San Luis Obispo Police Department's enunciation of Article Four of the California Vehicle Code. Essentially the law says that every person riding a bike on the roadway has all the rights and is subject to all the laws that apply to motor vehicles.

To demonstrate the cyclists rights, interested people are urged to be at Mission Plaza. However, a few important items should be noted.

Don't chain bikes to parking meters. And because Mission Plaza is considered a sidewalk, don't ride bikes on it. Be sure to have lights on bicycles if they are to be ridden after sundown. Traffic tickets will be issued to violators.

Construction continues

The turnabout in student-housing ratio this fall will have no effect whatsoever on the rate of construction of the new residence hall and dining facility adjacent to Yosemite dorm.

Douglas Gerard, executive dean, explained that the two construction companies in charge of the separate housing and dining projects are under contract and are obligated to maintain the pre-arranged schedule of construction, regardless of how the housing picture fluctuates.

"Unfortunately we've seen these housing cycles before," said Gerard. "It's either a feast or a famine."

Completion of the $1.4 million dining facility, which will include a free-choice cafeteria and a sit-down restaurant, is aimed at next summer.

The $3.3 million co-ed residence hall, which will be similar in appearance to Yosemite dorm, should be ready for use in early 1973, according to Gerard.

Referring to the more-housing-than-students situation, Gerard said the campus concern would not become critical for at least another year.

CU flick on for tonight

Tonight's movie, "The Thomas Crown Affair" will be shown in Chumash Auditorium at 8 p.m. Featured in the movie are Steve McQueen, who plays a rich, urbane type who gets his kicks from robbing banks, and Faye Dunaway, a career crime fighter who falls in love with her victim, McQueen.

When McQueen plans his last crime before reforming, Miss Dunaway tries to dissuade him, but he tells her that if she really loves him, she will not tip off the police. The dilemma leads to a startling and surprising denouement.

Admission price is 50 cents.

Freeze effects "up in the air"

by John Teves
Staff Writer

Along with the rest of the nation, this school has spent the past week up in the air as a result of President Nixon's wage, price, and rent freeze. School officials have been as much in the dark as anyone else since President Richard Nixon's change of policy was announced Sunday night.

When asked what effects the move might directly have upon this school the college's business manager Don Nelson could say very little with certainty. He did find out, however, that the raise in foreign student tuition for all students would remain the same.

A grandfather clause established by the legislature as an exemption to current students from the increase of $600 to $1110 per year and since removed due to budget difficulties was thought to have been a possible price increase, therefore affected by the President's decision. Nelson was contacted, however, by the Chancellor's office Tuesday and assured the grandfather clause would not be reinstated.

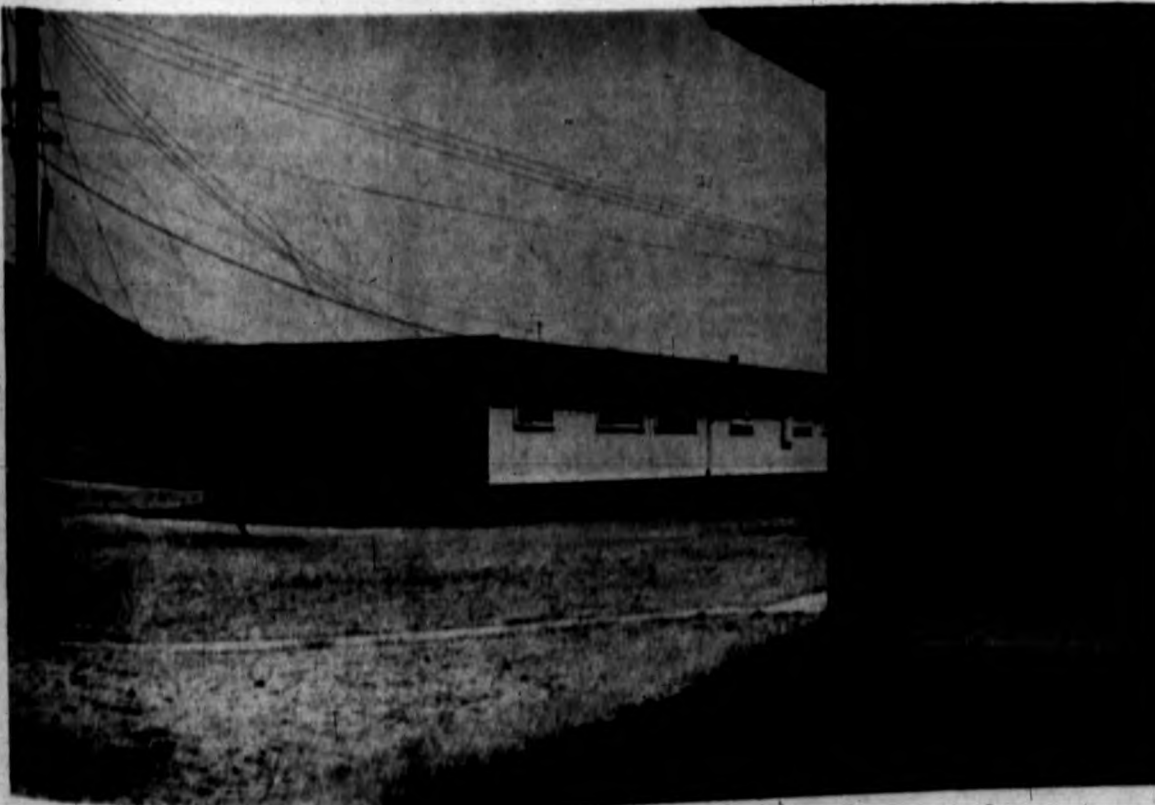

As to other possible areas of effect upon the college, including the state employee's merit of five per cent merit increase, Nelson was unsure. Apparently local offices representing the federal government will have to be established before specific applications can be determined.

Jack Fryer, speaking for the Foundation Association, could only remark that they would have to wait and see what comes "down the pike." In the meantime, said Fryer, all employees were concerned about the possibilities and anxious for more specific word.

Business manager for the student body, Roy Gersten, was sure of only one thing. Whatever happened to the state could be counted upon happening to the student body. Other than that, Gersten was still seeking someone who knew something.

It appears then, that people working for and attending this school will have to hold their collective breaths as they wait for the final clarifying word.

Dilapidated furnishings of these tenements on South St. may possibly be acquired for the student day care center.

Great idea but..

Editor:

Marianne Doahl's endeavor entitled "Child Care?" in the August 12, 1971 issue of the Mustang has stimulated me to write you. I was very interested in the article because I am a full time working wife and we have two children ages 3 and 4 1/2 years old. My reaction to her piece was mixed amazement and irritation.

I was amazed to learn "...that the establishment of child care centers should become one of the most pressing current campus issues." And that, behind this demand are two facts. First, a large proportion of today's students are parents of young children - both parents being students. Secondly, the concern by students that higher education continues to be an "elite social service" from which low income and minority background groups are excluded, and which threatens to exclude even children of the middle class who do not fit the mold.

After rereading the article several times, I became irritated by the fact that one of the most pressing current campus issues students are demanding is the establishment of child care centers. When couples choose to have children, they assume the responsibility to love, rear, feed, clothe, shelter and care for their offspring. I don't feel the state college system should be expected to provide or assist in any way for the care of the children of its students.

The two facts on which the demand is based are not very strong. Granted, a large number of persons with small children attend school and the strain on the financial resources are great. But remember, you made the choice to have children and continue with your higher education. The second "fact" leaves a lot to be desired. I was under the impression that higher education was an earned privilege, not a service. Perhaps we are getting down to semantics, but, the opportunity for higher education was an earned privilege, not a service. Perhaps we are getting down to semantics, but, the opportunity for higher education is made available to all races, creeds, and ethnic groups; and, sometimes, the individual will have to make some sacrifices in order to obtain this goal. I am not suggesting to sacrifice at the expense of your children. But, it may mean that one of the parents might have to work and defer for a time his education if both parents are students.

Yes, Marianne Doahl, it is a good and noble idea to have places where children of students can receive loving care at low rates while their parents attend school, but, don't expect the taxpayer, the state or the school to be involved in any way.

War waged

by
Pat Thorson
Staff Writer

After nearly slaughtering a bike rider on California Boulevard I decided that there must be something that could be done about the war being waged involving the bicyclist and the motorist.

However, my decision came a little late. Bob Newhart, a 22-year-old City and Regional Planning senior had started on this problem over a year ago. With a few fellow bike riders Newhart presented plans for bike lanes around San Luis Obispo to the City Council last year.

It took numerous meetings and discussions with groups such as the Citizens Advisory Committee and the City Council until the riders were persuaded that they could take it slowly.

Alternative to expensive bike lanes which would eliminate parking spaces on one side of major streets was a bike route designation. This, in its essence, would supply signs with pictures of bike riders that would state that the motorist was not only traveling on a street, but a bike route as well.

No warnings, no real place for the bike rider to call his own, just a sign to "help communications" between the motorist and the bike rider.

Well, swell. Now when I nearly murder the next bike rider who has tried to avoid a car pulling out from a parking space on a bike route, I will know that at least, for a moment, that bike rider and I were "communicating."

Hirings for some still continue

The position of the School of Business and Social Sciences has been filled by Edward H. Barker. He was appointed last year but his duties as a member of the administrative faculty were delayed while he completed his appointment as a member of the University of Southern California faculty.

George G. Clucas filled the position on an interim basis during the 1970-71 college year. Dr. Clucas who formerly served as director of research and development, will become a member of the Social Science Department faculty in September.

Burned? — drop it now

If you are getting burned in a class this quarter or just plain don't like it after all, today is the last day to drop class without penalty.

Drop forms are available in the Student Records Office in room 222 Administration building.

Cost for dropping a class is $1. Signatures from one's advisor and the teacher are required, as well.

EOP director up to Stanford

Ricardo Martinez, co-director of EOP, takes the final step toward a long range goal next month when he enters the Ph.D. program at Stanford University.

"I always did want to complete the so called cycle," he said, "because I do want to continue in higher education whether it's teaching or being an administrator. I would like to combine both of them."

Martinez said the program is concentrated in curriculum and instruction with a sub-emphasis in foreign language and bi-lingual education.

Martinez graduated from the University of Arizona earning his B.A. and M.A. from 1962-68. After earning his M.A. he spent six months working for SER (Service Employment Redevelopment), a federally funded project for Chicanos which was headquartered in his hometown of Tucson.

He came here from SER in 1969 to become coordinator of Ethnic Studies and director of EOP. This past academic year he was responsible only for EOP.

"Originally both EOP and Ethnic Studies were not anticipated to grow as rapidly as they have. When I got here there were 20 people on EOP, there will be approximately 300 this fall."

"The Ethnic Studies program is growing. A teaching minor in education has been proposed and more courses are being offered."

"The most rewarding part was being able to accomplish this in two years."

Oscar Quezada will assume his duties. Quezada earned a degree in Agriculture Business here in 1970 and completed his M.A. in education with emphasis in guidance and counseling last June.

Budget ax cuts here—but lightly

by John Spitzer
Staff Writer

Giv'um the ax! Giv'um the ax! Harder! Harder! So goes the old gridiron fight song. It's a little out of season on college campuses now, but in our state capital the "giv'um the ax" theme is just coming into its own.

State College Chancellor Glenn S. Dumke said recently that so much of next year's college money has been chopped away that what remains is a "very austere budget."

Indeed. The new budget provides 250 fewer faculty jobs than last year, but requires that 20,000 additional students be allowed to enroll within California's 19 state colleges. Dumke says that "it is a minimal maintenance budget providing services at a marginal quality level for a maximum number of students under our present operating methods and procedures... we have no funds available for research and development and accompanying risks needed to break out of the spiraling cost cycle."

Dumke outlined the more important and more immediate problems caused by the decreased numbers of faculty and the increased number of students as follows:

1. Classes must be cancelled or postponed at each of the state colleges to save money. What does it mean to this college? Statistically it means there will be 151 fewer sections offered this September than last. Last fall 2343 classes were offered, whereas, this coming fall 2267 are in the making.

According to Donald Coats, Associate Dean of Education Services, the office is responsible for coordinating class schedules, each department determining which of its sections must go.

Coats indicated that in the elimination process experimental classes usually go first. These are followed by elective and special credit types and finally mandatory classes. In some instances classes are dropped because a department can't find instructors to teach them.

2. Some students may be unable to get the precise classes they wish in the term they desire. This may result, in some instances, in delayed graduations and postponed career plans.

Coats says this college should escape that problem. "A certain number of students have always had problems getting the classes they want when they want them. All things considered," he commented, "we have a better schedule than expected. One way or the other we will take care of all of our students."

Where do we register?

by Randall Fry
Staff Writer

Monday night's City Council meeting was quite enlightening. Councilman Keith Gurnee proposed that the council endorse a resolution disagreeing with the State Attorney General and the official "opinion" that newly enfranchised eighteen, nineteen and twenty year old students must register to vote where their parents live, not where they attend school.

Then began a brilliant display of verbal athletics on the part of the rest of the council. As councilman Gurnee, ASI president Pete Evans, and several students from the audience pleaded their case for the validity of the resolution, the council was dazzled as they parried, countered and thrust their way through the debate.

Gleaming through the haze of bucolic cliches and whimsical alliterations, were several crucial points in the exchanges between the audience and the council. Councilman Emmons Blake made some extremely interesting remarks, such as it being unfair to the community to allow young voters to have a say in issues such as school bonds and "other fiscal matters." Yet these same voters can, for nine or ten months out of the year, pump money into the economy of this community, money that eventually pays for such things as school bonds and "other fiscal matters." Yet Blake feels these students should "vote at home where it will count, not where you bed and board for eight or nine months out of the year." Get it? Live here most of the time, spend money, but don't meddle in community affairs.

Councilman John Brown was more simple in his objections, he stated that the council shouldn't take issue with an opinion from such a lofty source as the Attorney General's office. Councilman Myron Graham did disagree with his colleague, stating that the council did have the right to question such opinions. Graham was sympathetic towards the resolution, but only sympathetic enough to go along with the proposal that the council table the matter until it could be reworked to better suit the tastes of the councilmen.

Mayor Kenneth Schwartz put the finishing touches on the debate stating that he felt that the resolution didn't go about solving the problem correctly. The Mayor seemed to think that the only way to effect a remedy was to grant full majority at the age of 18. A beautiful solution but, as Schwartz is no doubt aware, the question of lowering the age of majority has been around so long that it has become a dusty, political platitude. The processes of our government are such that progressive legislation is a slow, step by step operation. Granting the 18 year old the right to vote is a step towards total majority, and should be encouraged instead of hindered.

If students had a say in hiring and firing, would we have a better faculty?

by Pat Thorson

Van Lowe, Math, Grad. It's hard to say. I have a friend going to Stanford who tells me that he has had instructors who are well-known people, and Nobel prize winners. These people are well qualified but they can't teach. Students would have the advantage of knowing the good teachers who can get the material across.

James Neelands, Equip. Technician: I think perhaps the recent graduate could be of help, but the student now in school doesn't have the experience.

Aryan Roest, Bio. Sci. instr.: No. Students might not be any worse but I don't think they can pick them any better than we can. There's a certain amount of luck in any personnel hiring.

Name withheld by request: It depends whether the students were freshmen, seniors or graduates. I don't think freshmen coming here would be qualified enough, maybe the seniors have a better knowledge.

Wende Chan, Psych., Soph.: I think students should have some say. But I don't think that they're qualified to do all the hiring and firing. There are a lot of considerations that students may not be aware of. But I don't think the present system is adequate.

Paul Winner, Ass. Dean of School Relations: I don't think so. I think that the average student would find that he is probably not competent to pick a faculty member. Even to the point that it would be a little embarrassing if he was asked to do it.

Carol Lee, Nat. Res., Soph.: Possibly. They'd have to really look into it. It'd have to be just a few students with a wide variety of backgrounds to choose faculty members. They'd have to be really careful.

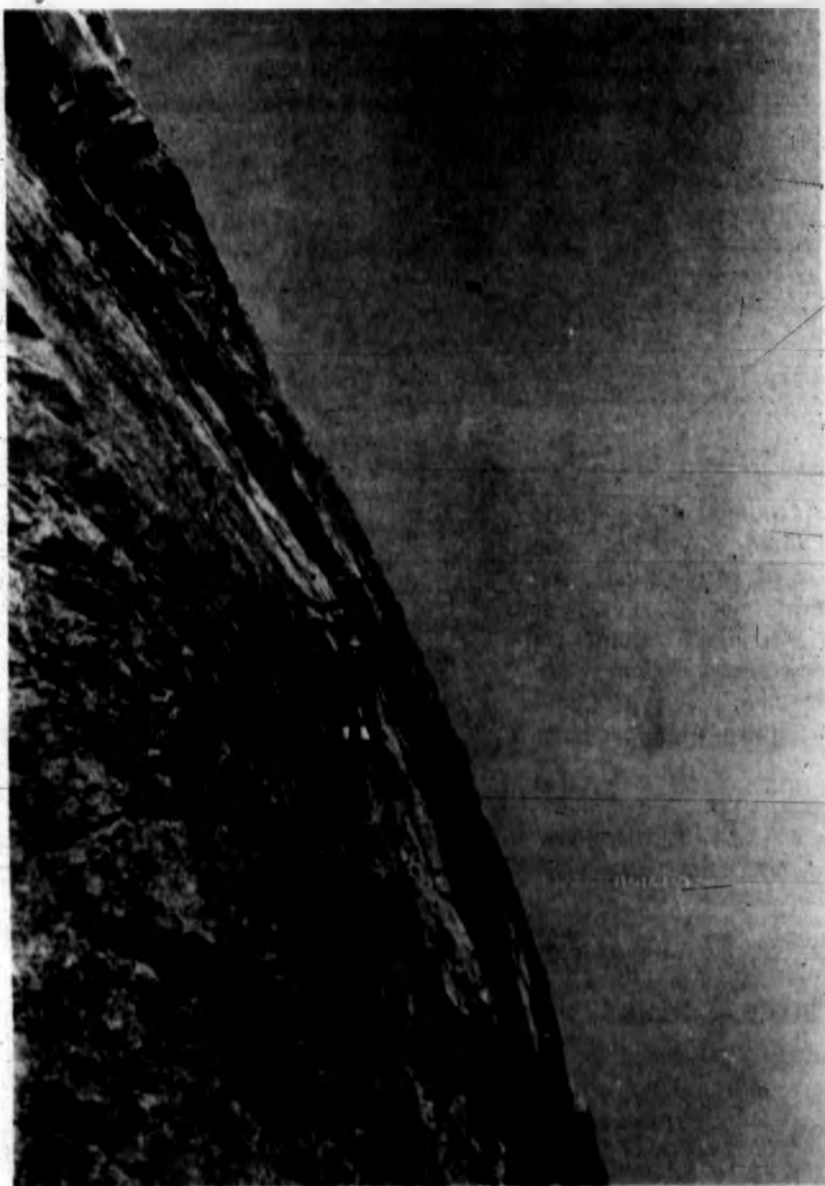

Selly Kennedy, Anim. Sci., Fresh: I think so, because the students are the ones who know how much they got out of a class. I don't know if they know what makes a good teacher, though.

Richard Chan, Arch., Jr.: I don't think so, because I don't think the students are that aware. If they can't get along with a teacher, they think he's not a good one.

Speech prof, family 'Keep faith'

Cynthia Lybarger
Staff Writer

of us may be unaware member of our faculty, Dr. Robert Cleath, has a son of the age who has been in a coma for the past several years. This situation, is one that has done much to the Cleath family emotionally, financially, and otherwise.

Cleath has been here as an assistant professor of speech for four years. At one time he was a member of "Christianity Today" and a previous debate at the University of Santa Barbara, Dr. Cleath has also taught at Whitman and Westmont Colleges. He received his doctorate from the University of Oregon. He also has a theological degree from San Francisco Theological with experience, he and his wife, a third grade teacher in the Mar district, have been married 23 years. They have four children, the oldest is Carolyn, 20, just graduated from Wheaton College majoring in philosophy and psychology. Robert, Jr., 19, is a major at Wheaton and is currently in a coma following a car accident. Their next son, Tim, just completed his first year at Wheaton, in social science. April 16, their youngest son, Rob, was born at San Luis High.

The Cleath family has lived in the San Luis coastal area since 1948. "We enjoy the central coast of California," says Cleath, "for the most part, its beauty, the power of the sun, the beauty of the pines on the hills particularly in the San Luis area." He thinks this is an excellent state college "with a great spirit" and is "delighted to be a part of it".

December, Dr. Cleath's wife and Tim, were hitchhiking home for Christmas and were involved in a one-car accident near Needles, California. Rob and the man who had offered them a ride were thrown out of the car.

The man died four days later and Rob has been in a coma for the last seven and a half months. Tim received a skull fracture and a badly injured shoulder but is now back in school.

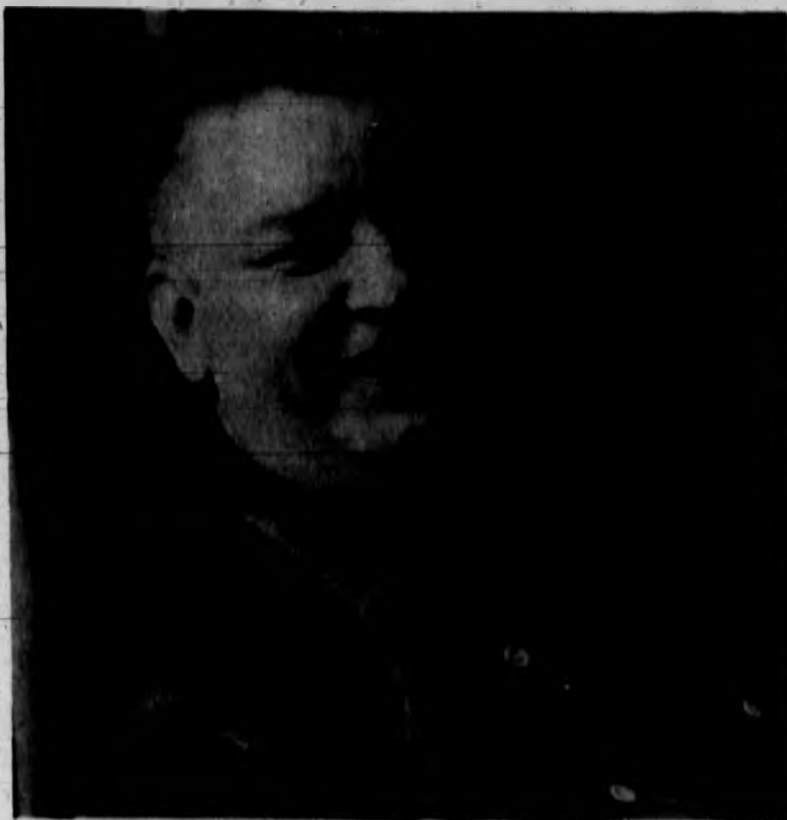

Dr. Cleath describes Rob as having been "near death's door" many times. Following the accident, Rob was flown from the Needles hospital to the UCLA neurosurgical department for treatment. He spent many months in Sierra Vista Hospital until two and a half months ago when he was brought home.

It is unpredictable as to when he'll awaken from this semicomatose state, but he has been improving gradually in the stabilization of vital functions and in gaining weight. Although he is not completely unaware, there is no way of knowing how much he comprehends since he has little ability to communicate.

Medical expenses total $40,000 so far. The major medical insurance through the CSEA provides for 80 per cent coverage, and Dr. Cleath says "fortunately I signed up for it." Now that he is home, the expenses are much less, and a public nurse from the Crippled Childrens Services comes out once a week.

How does the Cleath family react to this seeming tragedy? "Our faith in God," says Cleath. Rob has been prayed for by many people including the evangelist Billy Graham.

Dr. Cleath expresses the feeling that "these prayers not only have been answered in Rob being sustained, but we have found that our own spirits have been constantly lifted and we've been able to go through this very difficult situation where it's a day after day constant care and watching of him, with good stability and great hope and real consolation.

"We haven't been depressed by it to the point of being really down and out, but rather God has given us the strength so that we have great hope and confidence that he's going to be restored."

"Somehow, in a way we don't comprehend, there was a purpose behind this."

Dr. Cleath says that he "believes God is going to use his (Rob's) life" when he awakens. "It's going to have a profound effect not only on his life, but on our family's life and on the lives of many people who will see that God does indeed answer prayer."

This incident has changed the everyday routine of the Cleath family in many ways. Rob must be exercised twice a day and massaged to prevent rigidity of muscles and joints. Numerous drugs are given at various hours of the day and his feeding and personal hygiene must be taken care of.

But these extra tasks don't seem to stop Dr. Cleath from having a very busy summer.

Even though he is not teaching this summer, he has given about twelve speeches at various churches and participated in the baccalaureate services in Wheaton when his daughter graduated.

He did a book review for "Christian Scholar's Review," is writing articles for "Christianity Today," and is in the process of writing four essays for the "Dictionary of Christian Ethics" on public opinion, propaganda, brainwashing, and prisoners of war.

A few months ago, Wheaton College Men's Glee Club was touring California. Rob sang with the group on a European tour last summer. They stopped during their tour to sing to him in the hospital. This event was covered by the local television station.

Dr. Cleath says that the "Wheaton College student body has had for many, many weeks a 24 hour prayer vigil where there was a student praying every 15 minutes of the day."

It is interesting to note that on the day that Dr. Cleath was being interviewed, the draft lottery pertaining to Rob had just been drawn. Rob was number 348. When he wakes up it doesn't look like he'll have to worry about that.

But until that triumphal awakening, the Cleath family is "trusting, and waiting, and learning, too, in the midst of it."

New economic plan affects all

Washington (UPI)— What President Nixon's new economic policies will mean to you?

Tenants: Your landlord may not raise the rent until Nov. 12, even if he had previously scheduled an increase to take effect sometime before then. He could be fined $5,000 if he disregards the directive.

Shoppers: You will be able to buy most goods, except food and some imports, at the same price until Nov. 12. Since grocery prices change little from week to week, shoppers probably will notice little change, but the freeze does permit retailers to charge a price equal to the highest price any item was being sold for during the 30 days before the President stepped in. Violators would be subject to a $5,000 fine.

Workers: Your salary will remain the same, unless you suffer a pay cut, until Nov. 12. Even if you had been scheduled for a raise, it will be put off until Nov. 12 and will not have to be paid retroactively.

Tourists: U. S. travelers going overseas will find their American dollar buys less foreign currency.

Car buyers: The price of a new American car purchased from last Sunday on will drop by an average of $300, if Congress agrees to repeal the 7 per cent excise tax and if the automakers pass the savings onto the consumer as they say they will. Foreign cars will cost more because of the 10 per cent duty and because of the cheaper U. S. dollars overseas, but part of the duty hike would be nullified by dropping the 7 per cent excise tax.

Farmers: Farm prices are not subject to the freeze. For this reason supermarket prices will not remain stable, although the change is expected to be slight during the 90 day period.

Taxpayers: If Congress agrees to it, less money will be deducted from your paycheck starting January 1. The personal exemption, which rose to $650 this year, would increase to $750 next year, allowing a taxpayer to deduct that much for himself and each dependent when he fills out his tax form.

The standard deduction, used by taxpayers who do not itemize their expenses, would also rise from its current 13 per cent or $1,500, whichever is larger, to 15 per cent or $2,000 again whichever is larger.

Bankers: Interest rates, including mortgage rates would not be affected.

Businessmen: If Congress approves, you may subtract from your corporate income taxes this year whatever you spent on new equipment or machinery, up to a total of 10 per cent of your tax bill. The figure would fall to 5 per cent next year and in following years. The President is urging you to freeze your stock dividends at previous levels until Nov. 12.

Gurnee slams council's vote

The San Luis Obispo City Council spent over an hour discussing the 18 to 20 year-old voter's problem of a residency requirement at their assembly last Monday night at City Hall.

A proposal was set forth by councilman T. Keith Gurnee that the council send a formal disagreement to California Attorney General Evelle Younger. Younger's opinion is that 18 to 20 year olds be required to register to vote in the hometown of their parents regardless of their actual residence.

The proposed resolution by Gurnee had already been agreed upon by the Student Interim Council at this college.

In the council member's discussion, a majority of the council thought that the students supporting this resolution were taking wrong steps in differing with the Attorney General's opinion. An alternative would be to start a petition circulating to have the age of majority changed.

After lengthy discussion within the council comments from the audience were welcomed on the issue.

Poly ASI president Pete Evans was among the five who spoke from the audience. "You (the City Council) cannot change any law, but you may have a bearing on the opinions of other cities in the state," said Evans, "and that's why we feel you would serve good purpose in submitting a disagreement with the Attorney General's opinion."

The final vote by the City Council resulted in having the San Luis Obispo city attorney draft a resolution that would suggest a change in the age of majority from 21 to 18.

All council members agreed that they would support such a resolution.

In an interview with Mustang, Gurnee gave his feelings on the Council's final decision.

"I was very disenchanted with it because the other members were quite fearful of having dissent against the law," he said.

Gurnee added, "The whole reaction to this issue by the other members of the Council is just a classic example of this 'status quo mentality' on the part of the council. They just don't want to see anything out of the norm."

If the council's proposed resolution is followed through, the main possible effect would be that of setting a precedent for other cities throughout the state, since there is a sizeable student population in San Luis Obispo.

Gurnee had hoped that his proposal, had it been passed, could have resulted in the city taking litigation action against the county clerk as some private citizens have done throughout the state.

From 'Rags' dale to riches Ray Stevens still charm

by Pat Thorson
Staff Writer

Why not Ray Stevens? It's better than Ray Ragsdale isn't it?

It seems that in 1967 a press agent decided that Ragsdale just wasn't right, as press agents often decide about surnames.

"I told the guy that changing my name was going to make my mother awfully unhappy," explained Stevens, "so he asked me what my mother's maiden name was. I told him it was Stevens and he said that would do."

Did he mind having his name changed?

"If he wanted to change it to King Kong I would have said ok. Anything to help me get a hit."

The 32-year-old singer opened the San Luis Obispo County Fair in Paso Robles last Wednesday night with a sellout performance for the first show.

Constantly on the go, Stevens moved to Nashville in 1962 after five years of recording a variety of songs, mainly his own. "I thought I was going to get a gold record for all the different records I made that never sold."

Ray Stevens as he performed at the county fair.

When Stevens' half-hour break between performances was up he smiled through a tired face saying "I hope you got a good interview."

Although short, it was revealing. And when he onstage he was just as charming as he was backstage.

During his performance mentioned the warm weather the area. "You should have here yesterday," replied a man from the audience. "It was hot here yesterday. You have been here then."

With a rather apologetic the amiable Stevens replied "Well, uh, good. I'm sorry I missed it."

Before one number he plained to the audience that he had many downs in his career. He got a call from Hollywood for a song for a new movie. I was there but decided I didn't want to sing it. But I will tonight. It's one of my biggest downs. With that he broke into "Keep Falling on My Face" the theme from "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid."

Even with a few downs his career has had a steadily upward movement. It was fortunate he found time to perform at the fair. Fortunately, that is, for those who saw him.

Los latins here for el seminaros

Those of you who have heard "diverse kinds of tongues" here and there on campus this week probably ran into a segment of the 30 Latin and South American Agricultural students here for a five day Latin American Agricultural Seminar.

The whole thing is designed to provide our friends from South of the border with an update of information concerning the latest techniques used by production agriculture in California. Experts in beef cattle production, horticulture, row crops, fruit and citrus production will give talks aimed at this goal.

But it won't be all work and no play for the visiting students. Each afternoon the entire group will set the speeches and tours aside and go bowling in the McPhee College Union or head for the soccer field for a couple of hours.

The five day stay is sponsored by the California Farm Bureau and includes students from Chile, Argentina, Peru and Guatemala.

SIC: concert, kids care, files

by Grif Boyce
Staff Writer

At the Summer Interim Committee meeting Tuesday the committee discussed a benefit concert to aid foreign students, the proposed child care center, illegal student directory files used by insurance agents, graduate student tuition and a bicycle park-in.

Marianne Doshi, ASI Vice President, submitted a proposal in support of child care centers. It stated that there are federal funds available to help support a day care center.

The proposal presented received unanimous endorsement by the California State College Student Presidents Association recently at their meeting at Chico state. SIC supported the measure with an overwhelming vote.

September 12 was selected for a benefit concert with proceeds going to the International Emergency Loan Fund. Details concerning the concert are being worked out by a committee appointed by SIC.

Insurance companies using student directory files and Hard book to obtain names of students eligible for life insurance will run into difficulty in the future.

In an attempt to end the noying phone calls which students receive from insurance companies, year designations be deleted from the Hard Book, sign stating that it is illegal to use student files for commercial purposes will be posted above files.

Assembly bill 946 would increase tuition for graduate students. Assembly feels that the $300 fee is a precedent setting matter, the first step towards tuition for all students. It was urged students write State Sen. Donald Grunsky to voice views.

Franklin Munoz, Chile; Samuel Morante, Peru; Enrique Morin, Guatemala; Gabriel Carmona, Chile; and Luis Man, Peru seem happy to be here. They are members of group of 30 Latin and South American students on campus the Latin American Agricultural Seminar being held this week.

Riles' goal: coordination

State Superintendent of Public Instruction, Wilson Riles, is convinced that Californians want good schools and are willing to support them if a more equitable way is found and they feel they are getting their money's worth.

"In every way possible, I will be trying to improve the image of education and the people committed to the job," he declared, in an interview with the Education News Service. "I'm not going to use my position to denounce and blame."

Riles noted he has already taken action and suggested a list of priorities for improvements next year to the State Board of Education. His priorities stress improved services by the State Department of Education to local school districts and an accent on the positive service already in effect.

He noted that in the curriculum development area, the state board has approved task forces on early childhood education, basic skills, career education, bilingual and bicultural education and drug abuse preventative education.

The aim, he said, is to coordinate these areas, find out what's working, what's not working, and to move toward adopting the best programs. In this, he said, he hopes his department can provide leadership.

The superintendent noted he will emphasize that his department help local school districts with fiscal management. This is to make sure, if they are in financial trouble, the cause is not due to poor management.

"We need some kind of equalization of local wealth for school purposes and increases in state support," Riles said.

"Some districts have a high tax base and some do not. So the quality of a child's education depends primarily on whether or not you live in a district with a high tax base, regardless of what the individual pays in taxes. 35 per cent in state support for local schools is not enough. This means the majority of the money comes from local taxes," Riles concluded.

Less freshmen enrolled for Fall

A drastic change in new student composition this fall is being felt in areas all over the campus.

One of the traditional organizations strongly feeling the effect is the Week of Welcome Board.

In the past the Week of Welcome (better known simply as WOW Week) has primarily been directed at orientating new freshman and welcoming them to their strange, new life away from home.

This year, out of 2,200 new students, only 800 are freshman, according to Bob Walters, WOW Board advisor.

Rob Erickson, WOW Board chairman, says that WOW Week consists of two phases—a two-day camp program away from campus, and several days of social activities and orientation on campus.

This year WOW Week officially runs Sept. 17-24. Films, dances, a parents' reception, hootenannies, and a "gambling" night, as well as two two-day camps near Cambria, have been planned. Each new student has a choice of whether he wishes to attend camp during the early or latter part of the week.

Erickson said WOW Week Dairy, Poultry now combined

J. Cordner Gibson, dean of the School of Agriculture and Natural Resources, announces the Dairy Science and Poultry Industry Departments at this college have been combined into one department.

The new department is known as the Dairy and Poultry Science Department. Harmon Toone, head of the Dairy Science Department since 1962, is head of the newly-created department.

Bachelor's degree majors in dairy science and poultry industry will continue to be offered separately by the department.

staffers, counselors, and helpers volunteer and are selected in Winter Quarter. He added that this year's staff includes approximately 180 students.

Erickson also said that although sign-ups for this year's WOW Week have been slow, due mostly to changing student population, the board continues to plan on a total of 800 new students attending the camp.

Miss Ross is the pick

This week the starred album at KCPR is "Surrender" by Diana Ross.

Miss Ross has once again presented herself in her familiar form as a domineering vocalist supported by a harmonizing background of high female voices.

Her accompaniment is one of the traditional orchestra-type that, together with the vocal support, provides the liveliness in Miss Ross' unique soul presentation. The orchestra uses a reed section together with piano and drums to set forth distinctive pace that is apparent in all of Miss Ross' works.

On this album, the former lead singer of the Supremes sings recent top songs, "Remember Me" and "Reach Out, I'll Be There." The title song, "Surrender," is already number 66 on Billboard magazine's "Hot 100" after only two weeks on the chart as a single. It is also marked as a star performer, which makes it one of the records that has shown the greatest increase in retail sales over recent weeks.

The album itself is already number 80 on Billboard's top 200 list after having been listed for only three weeks.

Diana Ross has done it again with another solid soul album on the Motown label.

Fat City makes crowd whoop

by Bruce Judson and Jeanne Wiles Staff Writers

It could have been a bunch of Aggies whooping it up on Saturday night with three shots of moonshine, or it could have been a church choir on Sunday morning; instead, it was Jim Kweakin and the Fat City String Band last Sunday night.

Jim Kweakin was handicapped by a bad sound system and an audience unsure of how to respond. "The crowd was ready to be turned on and I was ready to turn them on, but that sound system put a wall between us," said Kweakin.

Four hundred potentially-responsive people sprawled on the floor of Chumash Hall in the CU. For a while almost everyone there tried to follow Kweakin's "choir-directing." The mood was relaxed and right for a "love-your-neighbor" type concert.

A problem, in addition to the sound system, was the unfamiliarity of the audience with the songs. Kweakin tried to encourage people to sing along, but the majority of the audience either didn't know or didn't care about the songs which were, for the most part, obscure.

A few songs were readily recognized by these reporters, among them "Love in a Bottle", previously heard on a "Lovin' Spoonful" album, and "Colors", originally done by Donovan.

Kweakin had the charisma, ability, and voice of a superb showman, yet the ailing sound system poorly transmitted his mellow, tenor voice and fine guitar-pickin' style.

At the intermission several people left, thinking the concert was over. Those who stayed anticipated being awakened. Fat City tried. "Come on—we know you people have all this pent-up energy, so get up and move around and let it out," they coaxed.

Some people got up and freaked around, stomping and clapping to Fat City's barn style. Others slept on the floor and wondered when the record would stop repeating.

Fat City is really pretty skinny, consisting of two young freaks who dig country music. Mac Benford plays the banjo and guitar. Bob Potts plays the fiddle. Both try to sing well.

The death of the sound system around eleven o'clock provided a chance for many people to make their escape. Fat City did not have too much in the way of original music, and no works were ever distinctly heard by these reporters, but its repetitious music was able to stimulate the entire audience to loud "yee-haws."

All in all, the concert was, at best, fair.

However, more concerts of the audience-participation type are to be encouraged. Next time, the audience will be aware that it is not supposed to sit there and ask "Where is the music?" Instead, the audience will become the music as it did in Kweakin's final number, "Leaning on the Everlasting Arms," when Chumash Hall rang out with their surprisingly good church-choir harmony.

Negotiation agreements climb; strikes sluff off

Teacher strikes dropped nationally 27 per cent in 1970-71, while written negotiation agreements between teachers and school boards continued to climb, rising about 7 per cent, according to the National Education Association (NEA).

NEA estimated 133 strikes in 17 states this past year compared with the all-time record of 181 strikes in 26 states in 1969-70. A year earlier there were 131 strikes, at that time a record high. Before 1964-65, there had never been more than five teacher strikes in one year.

Students enrollment to increase

Student enrollments from high school through college are expected to increase again in September. This is the indication from enrollment projections for California's schools and colleges which expect some 6.5 million regular, special and adult students, with the California State Colleges expecting an increase of about 20,000 full and part-time students, giving them a new total of 280,000.

The enrollment statistics were compiled from reports made by the Population Division of the State Department of Finance, the California State Colleges, the University of California, and the Special Education Division of the State Department of Education.

This increase, according to the system's chancellor, Dr. Glenn S. Dumke, will occur in spite of a cutback of about 250 faculty positions due to inadequate state financial support.

According to Dumke, "The faculty-student ratio will increase more than 11 per cent. This will be translated into more crowded classrooms with necessarily more limited personal contact between faculty and students and a decrease in the amount of time faculty have available to counsel and advise students."

Job experience conference

Secondary school teachers from throughout California are in the midst of a week-long workshop on accountability in work experience education, which opened Monday, August 16 on campus. The program, which will continue through Friday, is being co-sponsored by the Education Department and the State Department of Education.

One of the early phases of a year-long effort by the college to help upgrade work experience education programs in California high schools, the college effort is being made possible by a recently-announced grant of $72,376 from the State Department of Education.

Teacher for the workshop is Norman B. Eisen of Whittier. Dr. Eisen is director of educational services for the Whittier Union High School District and a member of the University of Southern California Faculty.

Louis D. Pippin, of the education Department, who is coordinator for the workshop, said Dr. Eisen is discussing such topics as goals, evaluation, and student performance in work experience programs.

Dr. Eisen is a past president of the California Association of Work Experience Educators, the California Association of Distributive Educators, and the Los Angeles County Work Experience Education Association, and is the author of a number of articles published in professional journals.

CTA director claims large classes mean quality loss

Students who are planning to go into teaching should be interested to know... that after a steady decrease for four years, class sizes in California public schools suddenly got larger in 1970-71, the California Teachers Association (CTA) reported.

The report, "Class Size in California School Districts, 1970-71," was compiled by CTA's Research Department with the cooperation of the California State Department of Education. It includes only the size of academic classes.

Major findings in the report are:

Average class size for all elementary districts in 1970-71 was 28.3 pupils per class. This was an increase from 28.0 the previous year. It was still down from 1965-66 school year.

According to Jack D. Rees, executive director of CTA, the situation is causing teachers to have more pupils in their academic classes. In many instances teachers are being forced to baby sit large classes instead of being able to give the pupils the individual attention required for quality education.

Rees added that the heavier class loads, rather than fewer pupils, is the major cause of a so called oversupply of teachers. "School districts are not hiring the teachers they could to fill vacancies. Thus, the so-called oversupply of teachers is in actuality an educational shortage for the pupils."

Rees declared that California's high class sizes are deplorable when compared with conclusions of the most recent study on the issue. This is a 7-year study recently completed by Columbia University's Institute of Administrative Research.

The study pointed out that the high breaking point for elementary classes should be 25 or fewer pupils, depending on the subject taught. At the high school level, it should be 18 or fewer students.

"This study supports the contention of teachers that class size does make a difference in pupil performance and is directly related to individualization, interpersonal regard, the effectiveness of group activity, and creativity," Rees said. "As the study concluded, 'Any way one tries to slice it, the smaller class sizes produced significantly higher scores.'"

Rees warned that class size will continue to increase in California as long as the state neglects its responsibility for local schools. State support, he said, has not kept up with rising costs of inflation, and is now about $400 million less than it should be.

Consequently, although trying valiantly, local districts have not been able to raise property taxes fast enough to keep up. Among the detrimental results are larger class sizes.

"Rees said, the hard fact is that our school boys and girls are the losers by being crowded and jammed into larger classes, while the governor of our state seeks political credit for so-called tax saving. It is a 'tax saving,' however, subsidized by our pupils and teachers are having unmanageable class loads forced upon them.

McGhee: 'Impossible for blacks to gain power'

by Malcom Stone
staff Writer

Doyle McGhee has got it together. McGhee, president of the Black Students Union here, has struggled with the "Movement" ever since his birth in Boley, Okla.

Boley an all Black town, was established after the Civil War by blacks who hoped that it would some day become a black runs until January. He is an organizer and coordinator of BSU programs, and a representative on the State BSU Council.

He said the BSU serves as an organization for black people which aids in solving some of the unique problems faced by black students.

"One of the main problems that exists is the raping of the black man's culture so that he is not able to function in this society," metropolis. McGhee said these hopes were destroyed by whites.

McGhee, as a result of this background, has very positive opinions about the needs of black people in the United States.

"Looking at the total picture in black America, I see it as impossible for blacks to gain power unless our struggle is intensified and united with the struggles of black people all around the world," he said.

"Because of laws like the McCarran Act and the King Alfred Plan which seek to eliminate black people, we must develop a better offense against the institutions that suppress black people."

McGhee has been a member of the BSU since it was organized in the fall of 1967. His term of office

McGhee said. "One of the examples of this would be the name Negro—having no relationship to our past culture it serves to cut us off from it."

"The other problem is the covert and overt institutional racism which does not allow the black man to receive power."

The Return

'Zuke' the scholar

by Steve Gale
Staff Writer

The Journalism department on this campus presents a unique faculty member: Ed Zuchelli. Why?

He's just begun his first quarter in the capacity of a student at Cal Poly.

Known to his friends as 'Zuke', Zuchelli is normally a journalism instructor, handling the broadcasting students of the department. He is the advisor of KCPR and teaches broadcasting, broadcast news writing, and other related courses.

Zuke has begun his masters program in English, taking four English graduate courses this summer for a total of 12 units. These classes are regular standard graduate classes and are in no way arranged specially for him.

"I have some of my own students in these classes, which makes it a distinct challenge for me," he noted.

His present classes include American Writers with Dr. Willard Pederson, Romantic Poetry and Modern Novel with Dr. Mona Rosenman, and English Literature Survey with Dr. James Simmons.

What's it like starting back to school after a 20-year layoff?

"Well, this is the first time in my entire life that I've ever been motivated in school, and I'm enjoying it very much. I feel I'm doing pretty well—it's a matter of discipline when you have other responsibilities such as a family to worry about along with other business matters. When my youngsters want to go to the ball game or to the show or beach on my days off, it's sometimes hard to force myself to do the necessary reading involved.

"Not having studied for over 20 years, I'm really pouring the wood to it, and when I've got four classes in one day and they're all reading, it's requiring a lot to get back into the swim of being able to study."

"I've got some doggone good teachers in these first four classes, and they really whet your appetite.

Zuchelli lives in Santa Maria, where he's a member of the city council. He's been in broadcasting for over thirty years, ranging from high school reports over KMPC radio in Los Angeles, to free-lance sports announcing, to television work for KHJ-TV 9 in Los Angeles, to ownership and management of KCOY radio and television in Santa Maria. He is one of the leading public figures on the central coast.

Sports editor conducts workshop

by
Pat Thorson
Staff Writer

To some people, being the sports editor for 'Life Magazine' at the ripe young age of 28 may not seem like much. But to thirty young journalists participating in a two week workshop in communications it was really something.

Bill Bruns, the sports editor for 'Life Magazine' was at this college two weeks ago teaching classes in the art of sports writing and magazine writing.

The tall, slender boyish-looking Bruns is rather atypical of sports editors. With a quick smile he involved in a variety of writing jobs introduced the impressionable newcomers to the possibilities that the future holds for them as graduates of the Ralph Alexander workshop in journalism. Ralph Alexander, veteran news reporter is the co-founder of this workshop.

"This program has a high degree of success," says Bruns. "People are always calling Ralph up and asking him to recommend potential employees for writing positions. If they have been successful graduates of this program, the job is almost sure-fire."

The Southern California-born journalist is a 1969 graduate of the program. He has a mile-long list of credits to his journalistic name. After his senior year editorship in high school he went on to become editor of the University of Redlands newspaper until his graduation in 1964. To top off his education, he received his masters in graduate school at the University of California at Los Angeles.

It seems like he's done everything that a journalist would want to do. He's been a stringer, written for the Los Angeles Times' magazine "West" and been a correspondent for "Life Magazine" in Florida and New York.

interviews to Bruns. Although unhappy with him, they need the publicity.

He felt that Lew Alcindor was very aloof. Alcindor, the Milwaukee Bucks basketball star, is black and very proud of it. Bruns thought Alcindor might be more expressive with a black interviewer.

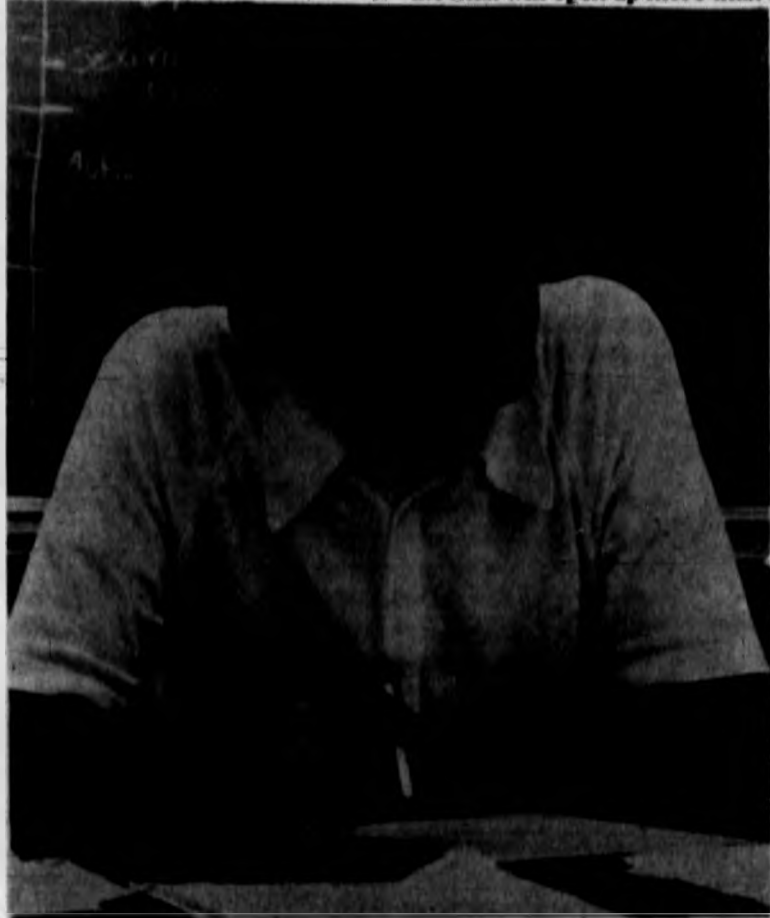

Mickey Mantle is indeed the bad guy of baseball as reflected by Jim Bouten's "Ball Four," a book on the "real" personalities of the baseball stars.

May take up teaching

Bruns related a friend's experience with Mantle that occurred some twenty years ago. The friend, about 15 at the time, had handed Mantle a few self-addressed post cards. He asked the baseball king to please autograph them and drop them in the mailbox. After walking a few feet away with the cards Mantle proceeded to tear them up as the young admirer looked on. "The guy has never forgotten that," said Bruns.

Bruns was planning a trip to Helsinki, Finland last week, Japan this winter, and Germany this next spring. All the trips are covering sports events.

His life sounds ideal to a budding young journalist. Ideal, yet it has its drawbacks. "I live in New York right now. It's not so

After about four years of various writing jobs Bruns became the sports editor for "Life."

"I wasn't exactly handed the job. The editor before me was fired and I was made acting sports editor temporarily." The job stuck, however, and for the past year and a half Bruns has been working with and meeting all the top sports figures.

The obvious questions to ask such a person would be what "so and so" is like. And he can tell you about many of the "so and so's" in the sports world.

Muhammad Ali and Joe Frazier are both nice guys in their own way, according to Bruns. Ali is a bright guy and very personable. Frazier finds only two things in life really important: his family and boxing.

He likes many of the people he writes about. When he is to in-Bruns just asks him shot-gun questions and expects shot-gun replies.

There have been those that haven't impressed Bruns very much. To name a couple, Johnny Bench of the baseball Cincinnati Reds, and soccer star Derek Sanderson.

Sanderson, for example, was pictured in "Life" with his girlfriend on a large bed in his apartment. He didn't, however, expect Bruns to put in the story that the girlfriend had also been living with Sanderson for the previous ten months.

Bruns wrote some uncomplimentary things about baseball's Bench, too. But both players are still willing to give

Bowling tip: fit of the ball

This week's bowling tip from Gino Legari, bowling lanes manager, is on the proper fit of the bowling ball. It helps greatly to have a ball that has the proper span for your hand. The span is the distance from the inside edge of the thumbhole to the inside edge of the finger holes.

To find the proper span for you, insert the thumb all the way into the ball and stretch your fingers out over the finger holes. A correct fit of the fingers must have the center of the second joint one quarter inch past the inside edge of the finger holes.

So, for a proper fit, the finger span will be approximately one eighth inch longer than the span of the middle finger. When looking at your hand it appears the opposite should be true, but by inserting your thumb into the ball, you can see how the ring finger moves farther away from the thumb.

Coach Hitchcock. . .

Calls time out for vacation

by
Rick Knepp
Staff Writer

Vaughn Hitchcock, Mustang wrestling coach, called time out Tuesday when he began a one week vacation. This will be Hitchcock's first "real" vacation in his nine years at this campus.

A usual summer for the state's most successful coach consists of traveling the nation, instructing in workshops, clinics and camps. Although this summer he has limited his schedule to seven weeks of such work, he will have appeared in Wisconsin, Michigan, New York, Oregon and California. He is one of the most sought-after guests at these wrestling sessions in the nation.

Hitchcock has led the Mustangs to five N.C.A.A. College Division national titles, including a record four in a row thus far. He has coached 11 College Division national champs and one in the University Division, has run up a string of nine California Collegiate Athletic Association mat crowns and has a cumulative record of 135-24-1 in dual meet competition. In short, he is one of the top wrestling mentors in the Nation.

Hitchcock will also spend two weeks at the Paso Robles School for Boys, a school for delinquent youths in this county. He is what is called a "permanent-intermittent" employee, and acts as a coach for the period when the regulars take a vacation. "I would rather work with those boys than attend all of the workshops. They (the workshops) are enjoyable, but, in the summer, I tend to over-wrestle." This is Hitchcock's term for thinking so much about the sport that he worries about what hold to use on his steak at dinner. At the School he gets a chance to get away from the mats to coach some other sports.

Hitchcock is an all-around athlete. While at Washington

State, he was a fullback on the football team as a soph, and was converted to the guard spot on offense and drew additional duties as a linebacker. In his senior year, he was voted "Football Player of the Year." While all this was going on he was also wrestling, and put in four years on the varsity squad, losing only two of his 40 decisions. This, along with his gridiron heroics, earned him the title of "Athlete of the Year" as a senior.

He began his coaching career at Castro Valley High School. There he led the grapplers to two championships in the Hayward Area Athletic League and placed first both years at the North Coast Sectionals. In 1959, they ended up as state champions.

Moving on to his alma mater, Hayward High School, his wrestling teams compiled a dual meet record of 35-1, and his football efforts netted a 16-7-1 mark, from 1959-1962.

Asking about future Poly efforts, Hitchcock said he sees the possibility of "the best team in the history of the school." This will be a sophomore-junior team, which he feels is often stronger than a junior-senior team. Last year our team was 4th in the country at the gate. Unfortunately this will be a sparse year for home contests, due to the budget cuts undergone by all schools.

Hitchcock feels that there is a chance of seeing "honest wrestling" become popular professional sport in the future. "Today's fan grew up in the age when baseball, basketball and football were 'the games.' The current students are the buying public of the next 15 years, and now interest in wrestling is moving to an all-time high. It once was a popular professional sport, but its periods of inactivity caused it to evolve into today's 'T.V. wrestling'."

Variety spices '71 county fair

by Bruce Judson
Staff Writer

Clowns, hot dogs, fried chicken, entertainment, displays and exhibits combined to make the 1971 San Luis Obispo County Fair in Paso Robles last weekend.

Fairs are for kids of all ages. Rides and attractions were scaled according to size and the daring spirit of the individual.

Entertainment came in a variety of form for a variety of spirits. For the youngsters there were clowns and dog acts in the Young World section. For the teenagers there were bands and several varieties of music on the amphitheater under the giant oak trees of the grounds.

In the evening Ray Stevens sang on Wednesday, Tammy Wynette and George Jones on Thursday and rodeos on Friday and Saturday nights.

Tammy Wynette put on a fine show of country music as did her banjo and fiddle players. The strummers, however, stole the spotlight with homespun jokes, shenanigans and excellent music.

To each his own. The county fair had all the touches of home. There was something for everyone in display sections, whether it was beef, chicken, or apple pie. Yes, to each his own because it was all there at the fair.

Freshmen eligible to play varsity football for first time since 1957

A change is occurring in football eligibility at this campus. Freshman are eligible for varsity football competition for the first time since the 1951-57 era. Eighteen freshmen will be bolstering the Mustangs.

"We are extremely pleased to have these athletes in our program and think that they have an opportunity to help us right away," head Coach Joe Harper said. The Mustang mentor has fashioned a 21-9 record in Harper's first three seasons at Poly and has brought the school three straight campaigns for the first time in more than a decade.

A third of the 18 freshmen recruits will be participating in a

KCPR fills 'gaps' with new show

KCPR has initiated a new program entitled "Open Channel". The program is designed to eliminate communication gaps between the students and the student government on this campus.

The program will be presented one night every week. It will feature ASU president Pete Evans and vice president Marianne Doshi. Listeners will be invited to call in and discuss current issues in student government.

"Open Channel" was presented last evening and will be aired again next Wednesday evening at 8:00 o'clock.

The station's frequency is 91.3 FM.
