Bulletin boards provide amusement for students between classes.

Censorship moves in to take over postings?

by TONY SANTOS

"I do not consider myself as a censor. I am just trying to facilitate more space on the College Union bulletin boards," said Randy Donant, student activities trainee. "I dislike removing improperly posted material. In all fairness to campus organizations and interest groups, someone has to do it."

One of Donant's duties as a student trainee is to regulate the use of bulletin boards in the CU. Fortunately, he does not have to handle the task alone. Two campus service organizations, Alpha Phi Omega and Circle K, have offered Donant some much needed assistance.

The team's first concern is ascertaining that materials posted are not dated. Because of the limited space offered by campus bulletin boards, the team requests notices to be posted for a maximum of two weeks or until the event has passed.

Donant believes regulations set for the CU bulletin boards may seem stringent but hopes the plan put into effect will centralize posting in the area. Boards in this area are specifically labeled.

On the CU second floor, the four bulletin boards are intended for events listed in the Pony, student involvement, the Student Affairs Council and the CU Board of Governors. The first floor bulletin boards are oriented toward general student use. These boards are titled lost and found, services and discounts (for non commercial use only), housing, rides and riders, buy-sell-trade, and community and central coast events. Maintenance of these boards will strictly adhere to each bulletin board's intended use.

If material is posted on an incorrect board, it will be removed and possibly placed on the proper bulletin board. Students using the facilities are requested to use thumb tacks only. No written permit is required for posting material.

The CU balcony was described by Donant as "fair game." Any campus organization may use the balcony for promoting activities. The balcony is regulated with a "first come, first served" basis. Again, the maximum of two weeks posting applies.

A display case in the Snack Bar is available for campus organizational use. Individuals desiring to use this promotional method must see Donant or Dr. Dan Lawson, director of student activities. Posters may be placed in the Cafeteria and Snack Bar once a permit is received.

According to Donant the regulation of campus bulletin boards ascribes to Pres. Robert Kennedy's directive for use of state college buildings and grounds. He said the policies are subject to change. Students who may question bulletin board regulations can submit suggestions to Dr. Lawson, Donant or to the CU Board of Governors which meets every Thursday from 3-5 p.m.

Nixon's trip to China set

Washington (UPI)—President Nixon will travel to Mainland China on Feb. 21, the White House said in a simultaneous announcement with Peking Monday.

The brief announcement did not specify how long the trip would be or what cities the President would visit. Press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said that more complete details of the trip would be announced within the next 24 hours.

"The government of the Peoples Republic of China and the government of the United States of America have agreed that President Nixon's visit to China will begin Feb. 21, 1972," Ziegler told reporters that preparations for the visit "continue to go well and the general framework and date" were agreed to when Presidential adviser Henry Kissinger visited Peking for six days in October.

Ziegler said Nixon "shall try in the meetings to seek a new direction in our relationship between our two countries and to end the isolation of our two great peoples from each other." He noted that in the original announcement of the trip on Jan. 15 the President said that he would go to Peking to "seek a normalization of relations" between the two countries which have been estranged from each for 22 years since the communist victory on the China mainland.

The Peking trip will precede by about three months Nixon's visit to Moscow, announced for the latter part of May. Ziegler said the date for the trip to Peking was agreed to as "mutually convenient" by Nixon and Chinese

A China scholar, Mark Mancall of Stanford University, will give a public lecture Tuesday, Nov. 30, at 8 p.m. in the Cuesta College Community Auditorium.

Described recently by Time magazine as "Stanford's most prominent China scholar, a widely traveled historian of Sino-Soviet relations and a dazzling teacher," Mancall will give his analysis of the developing new relationship between the United States and China and its ramifications. The Cuesta College program will be open to the public without admission fee.

leaders. Ziegler said he did not know when Nixon would begin his journey or where his jet liner would stop for refueling. But he said the President would be in Peking on Feb. 21.

At the same time, he stresses that in the talks with the communist superpowers "allied unity would not be sacrificed to relax tensions" behind the bamboo and Iron Curtains. The President's sessions with free world leaders will span a month over the yuletide period. Nixon will meet with French president Georges Pompidou, Dec. 13-14 in the Azores; British prime minister Edward Heath, Dec. 20-21 in Bermuda; West German Chancellor Willy Brandt, Dec. 28-29 in Key Biscayne; Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau in late December and Japanese Prime Minister Eisaku Sato Jan. 6-7. Ziegler said Sunday that no further meetings were planned with other European and Asian allies.

The announcement of the date came after a staccato series of White House announcements of five summit meetings with major allied leaders in advance of the trip to Peking and the journey to Moscow.

Ziegler stuck by previous description of the Peking summit as "a working visit" and indicated that the traveling party would be much smaller than usually accompanies the President on trips abroad.

A White House official told reporters that the Peking trip would help open the way for the President's policy of negotiation rather than confrontation.

NEW MAGAZINE

'Dig beneath the times'

by SANDY WHITCOMB

For several years this school has had the distinction of being one of three college campuses in the state college system still producing a yearbook. However, last year's appreciable lack of demand for the annual meant that the time for change had come. A poll was taken of the student body asking whether the students wanted a yearbook or a magazine. On the tide of an overwhelming majority, Outpost magazine was born.

"We want to dig beneath the apparant calm," said Bruce Kyse, Outpost's managing editor. "We don't like the yearbook style of portraying college life. We want to find out about things relevant to students and that can be done better with a magazine."

Kyse believes that with magazines, writers have the chance to get involved in their work. The staff members will have a whole quarter to work on their assignments and will be able to add more depth to their stories. "They can relate to the readers what is going on. Outpost is a service to inform the people, and we are sticking to topics which affect the campus directly," he said.

"A free type of writing is encouraged for Outpost," said Kyse. "It is more like interpretive writing. It offers a lot more leeway."

Outpost is self-supporting, according to Nancy Seal, editor of the magazine. "We want to make it as professional as possible in the format."

The magazine will consist of about 48 pages with ads and will be printed by a company outside the school.

According to Kyse, Outpost will have information stories, feature stories, entertainment articles, and art work such as cartoons, sketches, and art illustrations, color photographs, and editorial columns. "It will not be a jumble of unrelated subjects, though," said Kyse. "There will be a continuity throughout the magazine."

Many of the stories being investigated were suggested by the staff writers themselves. Other ideas came to the editors while looking through other magazines. Still others have come from Caught in a contemplative mood, Managing Editor Bruce Kyse is optimistic about the success of the new campus magazine, Outpost.

Confused over abortion

Editor:

Re: Dr. Darnielle's letter of Nov. 23.

I agree that people are of far greater value than oak trees. But all I set out to show by my analogy was that just because an x is valuable doesn't entail that an embryonic x is valuable too, a line of argument which I think Dr. Zenk adopted.

I think that Dr. Darnielle and others are confused as to where the burden of proof lies in the abortion controversy: It lies not with me, but with the anti-abortionist. Here's why: No one doubts that people, like you and I, have a right to life which outweighs any amount of inconvenience which our lives might cause others. But I don't think too many of us feel this way about embryos. (Ask yourself this: Do you think that the law ought to prosecute abortionists for homicide? Do you think that we should hold funerals and print obituaries for miscarriages, and send sympathy cards to the bereaved would-be parents? If you don't then that is a sign that you don't take embryos all that seriously.) Because most people aren't inclined to take embryos seriously, anti-abortionists have tried to argue that to deny embryos the right to life is, in effect, to deny that right to you and me as well. All I have tried to show, and all I need to show, is that their arguments aren't any good.

'Legalization is a must'

Editor:

The letters that have appeared in the Mustang Daily over the last few days concerning abortion have centered over one issue; whether an embryo is a human being and when does it start being a human being.

These arguments can go on forever and everybody has his own philosophy and moral judgement. But in deciding whether abortion should be legalized or not, there are other very important factors that should be taken into account.

There are many unwanted children today, no parents, no home, and most of all no love. Kids that end up in foster homes or state institutions are bound to have a miserable life, and chances are many of them will become delinquents and end up in jail (another state institution).

When one talks about whether abortion should be legalized or not in terms of it being murder or not, one should realize that there are a lot of abortions being performed today under the worst of conditions and by completely unqualified people; butchers, as they are rightly called. In many of these cases not only a two month old embryo is killed but a 20 year old desperate girl as well.

These are realities that make legalization of abortion a must.

ECOLOGY

Start at home to stop pollution

by WARNER CHABOT

This Saturday, the recycling center will be opening for the first day of operation. The success of this project will depend on you and your willingness to make it work. The whole idea of recycling is one of the many steps in changing our lifestyles in a direction toward living more compatibly with nature and reducing our impact on the environment.

The following is a list of suggestions on how you can make changes in your own lifestyle within your own home. They are only ideas from many friends and I would like to pass them on. Please use them in the spirit in which they are given.

The Kitchen: This is often the center of the home and therefore a major site of over-consumption and waste. Electrical and natural gas energy can be needlessly wasted if appliances are left on when not in use. Limit the use of electric appliances as much as possible during peak time, between five and seven in the evening. The overload during these hours encourages the building of new power plants for the environment to contend with. Electric appliances may be a little more convenient but increase your consumption of electricity and your Electric Bill. Speaking of electric bills, the next time you get your bill from PG&E and it's full of eco-pornography (like this month's ad for an electric dryer), you might consider returning it with a complaint to their downtown office. It's right next to the Aardvark.

Water is one of our most valuable and most abused resources. It's not infinite. Man is now pulling water out of the earth four times as fast as nature can replenish her supplies. Stop and think about ways you can conserve it. A soap powder is generally less pollutant than a detergent. Avoid products with phosphates or NTA. There are alternatives.

When you shop for food, take into consideration what you can make, bake and grow yourself. Read labels carefully and make it your business to know the ingredients and preservatives. Consult the library to find out what you will be eating today.

Consider the containers you food comes in. Can each container be reused or recycled?

Bread bags and other plastic wraps can be used again as sandwich bags and refrigerator storage. You may even find yourself happily surprised that you can get along fine purchasing only aluminum foil, the one food wrap which can be cleaned then reused. One roll can last all year if you use it right, (and that helps on the budget.) Cottage cheese cartons and similar items are excellent for freezing and storing.

Glass is a reusable source. The best form is the returnable bottle. Demand that your favorite store stock soft drinks, beer and other products in returnable bottles. The stores in San Luis Obispo would starve without the student business. If enough of us ask for returnable bottles we may eventually gain their support in banning all non-returnable containers in this area.

Make sure you know what your dog and cat are eating. Wild mustangs, porpoises, and whales are hunted for use in commercial pet food. This is a perverted and tragic exploitation. A dog or cat can thrive on kibble, table scraps and domesticated animal products.

Get those damn Shell No Pest Strips out of the kitchen. They contain Vapona, a chemical that attacks the nervous system. Roaches (the insect type), and silverfish feed and live in dark places. Clean, light living spaces are unattractive to such pests. Dri-die, a non-residual powder, may be used with relative safety to destroy stubborn roaches and silverfish. If you are invaded by flies be more sporting...hunt them down with a fly swatter.

Just for the heck of it, try eating dinner by candle light. It's relaxing after a long day. If you have never tried it, it might sound corny but give it a chance. Each of these ideas was presented by someone like you. If you have better ones, submit them to me at the Mustang Daily. I'll try to print as many as possible. Now, consider what actions you can change in the rest of the house.

Wife of coach moonlights as 'star' runner

What do you do when your husband is a coach and PE instructor at a State college? A typical housewife Cheryl Bridges runs cross country.

Cheryl Bridges, a 23 year old school teacher from San Luis Obispo, placed third in the National AAU Women's 2.5 mile cross country run held in Cleveland, Ohio, last Saturday.

Cheryl, a graduate student, led the Los Angeles Track Club to a 4th place team finish.

Over the past seven years Cheryl has placed in the top seven in the women's cross country nationals, a race which annually includes over 100 runners. Three times she has represented the United States in the World Cross Country Championships, placing 11th in England in 1968, fourth in Scotland in 1969, and 18th in Fredrick, Maryland, in 1970. In both 1969 and 1970 she led the Wolverine Track Club of Michigan to the national title.

This past track season Cheryl recorded the fastest time in the country in the three mile and 5000 meter runs with times of 16:36 and 17:07. She placed sixth in the two mile in the national championships in Bakersfield in 10:48.2.

Cheryl's daily schedule involves morning and evening workouts with a full day of teaching in nearby Arroyo Grande squeezed in between before she returns home to cook dinner for her husband, Larry, who is a health education instructor here.

people unrelated to the magazine who tell the editors what they think should be covered. "We welcome any ideas or any stories written in a magazine-style and based on fact," said Miss Seal.

More staff members, especially writers, are needed. "Ideally, we would have at least 10 writers," said Kyse. "One complete story of about 2500 words from each person would fulfill all of the requirements for the magazine." As things are now, some people are writing more than one story and some are working on both writing and production, according to Kyse.

Outpost staff members would like to publish three times a year, at the beginning of winter quarter, at the beginning of spring quarter, and at the end of spring quarter.

This year, however, the members got a slow start because of the difficulties encountered in establishing a new magazine. As a result, Outpost will come out only twice this year with the first issue to be published in the middle of February and the second issue coming out around the end of May.

The cost will be $1.25 per issue. Don Holt, a journalism instructor, is the advisor for the magazine, and Vincent Gates, also a journalism instructor, is the editorial advisor.

Students with abilities in areas from layouts to artwork to business managing are encouraged to contribute to Outpost. Students who would like to write for the magazine can enroll in Jour 482 for the winter quarter.

Any ideas for stories or suggestions can be given to Kyse or put in his box, located in Graphic Arts 226.
