Shaw controversy splits SAC

Shaw to travel to conference

by KATHLEEN BEASLEY

Wayne Shaw will be going to New York after all.

The sports information director will be covering the college wrestling championships despite difficulties in obtaining travel and expense money.

"The Wayne Shaw Crusade" and the Board of Athletic Control (BAC) have combined to raise the $486 necessary to send Shaw east. Both groups acted following an ASI presidential veto of a Student Affairs Council motion to grant Shaw a budget extension.

On the heels of a failure to override the veto, agriculture student Gene McClure said, "If they won't give the money, we'll get it ourselves." McClure corralled some sympathetic students and began a crusade.

"It's a crying shame that SAC will not approve money to support a team which has been the national champion for five out of the past six years," said McClure. "If SAC and ASI won't support us, we'll have to do it ourselves—they don't leave us any alternative."

Action passed to ban use of discriminatory facilities

by TONY SANTOS

Student Affairs Council banned the Elk's Lodge — and other facilities owned by discriminatory organizations — from campus club use.

In another SAC action, an attempt to override Evans' veto on a motion failed. The ASI president vetoed SAC's decision to grant Wayne Shaw, sports information director, $486 to championships and pay excess publication cost.

The action taken against the Elk's Lodge was passed (13-4-3) Wednesday night in the form of a resolution which read "that, all clubs recognized by ASI, Inc. (sic) and all ASI, Inc. related activities avail themselves only of those facilities and services under the auspices of organizations which possess open membership policies that are non-restrictive and non-discriminatory with regard to race, color, or ethnic origin."

"My intent is to prohibit patronizing discriminatory organizations on a group basis," Evans said in support of his resolution. "I oppose discrimination on any grounds."

"Discrimination is only natural to all men," said Brown opposing the resolution. "We should live with our differences instead of destroying ourselves with our self-esteem. It would be facetious for this body (SAC) to speak for the entire student body."

Joe Martinez from the School of Agriculture and Natural Resources said, "You can pass this resolution, that is understandable. Racism is the 'in thing' now. I think it is wrong to mandate where people can or can't go. That is a left-handed form of blackmail."

"I have never seen a law work that said: You cannot do this," said Tim Pine, representative for engineering and technology.

"I am disappointed in so much opposition to this," Evans said. "The only reason we've seen any legislation, any progress at all, is because of mass student pressure."

Martinez voted in favor of the resolution with the clarification that he supported it, but did not support sanctions against any groups who do not comply to the Study program hearing

The alleged mismanagement of the overseas study program for state college students is being investigated by a legislative subcommittee in Sacramento next week.

According to Assemblyman Charles Warren, the students in the program have been overcharged $310,846 in recent years.

Many students from this campus participate in this program, the greatest number of which are from the School of Architecture and Environmental Design. The students pay their own transportation and living expenses while the state pays for their tuition.

According to Fuad Tellew, an economics instructor who is in charge of the program at this campus, the tuition paid by the state is the same amount it would be paying to the state college if the student stayed at home. The students were charged a little more money for a contingency fund in case of emergency, and this has resulted in a surplus of money.

The hearing was requested in order to review alleged irregularities in the program having to do with Thomas Lantos, director of the international program.

Tellew stated that he "had been aware of this problem since before June of last year," and that a legislative committee had investigated the improprieties and decided that they did not involve criminal interest.

He further stated that the blame was placed on "poor business procedures and poor management philosophies."

He said he hoped that this would not hurt the program that has always been regarded as successful as far as students were concerned.

According to Tellew, Lantos has resigned and the shortcomings have been corrected.

Last year this campus had 73 students in the program, more than any other state college. There are currently 28 students overseas from here, most of them in Italy, Sweden, and Denmark.

ISSUES ARE EXPLAINED

Evans and Doshi sponsor rally

by DE RUSSELL

In an effort to make themselves available to the entire student body, ASI Pres. Pete Evans and Vice Pres. Marianne Doshi sponsored an open-air rally Thursday in the College Union plaza.

Evans began the rally by encouraging the audience to ask questions concerning any or all student affairs.

A student asked what chances there might be of establishing a legal aid service on campus.

"We are working on plans for such a service," said Evans. "It's difficult to convince the student body of the need for a legal aid service."

He said that it is a basic right of all Americans to have legal counsel but that unfortunately the service is not free. He suggested that funding for such a project might be done on a collective basis similar to the funding of the health center.

Evans reminded students that ASI Corporate Lawyer Richard Carrel's services pertain only to legal matters of the ASI and not to those of specific students.

A question was raised about the funding of operations of the College Union.

Evans said that approximately $40,000 a year must be paid in the way of utility costs of the college union, but that deficits have occurred.

"The bookstore which usually provides $30-40,000 a year in revenue is having trouble making ends meet due in part to thefts and extremely high prices of books," he said.

Evans explained that the maximum student fee for the college union is $30 per year but that the charge recently has been $16.

"I have personally come out in favor of a fee raise," he said.

Mrs. Doshi was asked a question concerning the future opening of a campus child care center.

She explained that the Children's Center Code was approved last week by SAC but that the major hassles now involved finding an appropriate building site. She said that a facility consisting of many small nursery areas would be constructed to handle approximately 100 children.

A student asked what percentage of the student body would benefit from such a center.

'Inconvenient as hell'

by DE RUSSELL

"I am disappointed not to represent our wrestling team in New York," said Sports Information Director Wayne Shaw just seconds after Students Affairs Council failed to override ASI Pres. Pete Evans' veto of his planned travel expenditure.

"I feel that SAC did not represent the feeling of the entire student body," he said. "I appreciate the support I was given by certain SAC members. I realize the decision wasn't unanimous."

Bail posted to free Davis

San Jose, Calif. (UPI) — Angela Davis spent her first day of freedom on bail Thursday, while legislators moved to change the law under which she was released and the attorney for Juan Corona, accused killer of 25 persons, demanded bail for his client too.

Miss Davis was cheered by a crowd of 50 supporters Wednesday night after a $102,500 bond was posted by her attorney and a Communist-leaning farmer who signed over his $320,000 farm as collateral.

She was whisked away to a private residence in San Jose which had been approved by Superior Court Judge Richard Arneson but kept secret by her lawyers "for security reasons."

Shaw is inconvenienced . . .

Shaw added that they (SAC) knocked $3,000 out of his budget without his even knowing about it and that he has had to travel with the teams this year at their expense.

"It's inconvenient as hell to not have travel money to go on these trips," he said. "This expenditure should have been part of my budget."

Concerning what affect this action might have upon his future work, Shaw said that there would be no affect because he has pride in what he does. He added, however, that there probably would not be as much incentive in the job as in the past.

Defending his veto, Evans told Mustang Daily that it is his responsibility as chief executive officer to restrict whatever he feels to be unnecessary expenditures of funds and that this was the case with Shaw's request. He added that this was the second override attempt and that both had failed substantially. "I hope no damage was done to Shaw personally," he said. "I hope he sees it not as a slap in the face but rather as a consequence of hard economic times."

SAC member Joe Martinez of Agriculture and Natural Resources, who walked out of the meeting just after the decision had been made, told Mustang Daily that the failure of SAC to override the veto was probably one of the worst decisions it had ever made.

He said that the veto and the actions of SAC say to him and every other student interested in wrestling that SAC doesn't care about the team.

"I was so moved by the action that I felt the only thing morally to do to show my indignation was to sit out of the meeting," said Martinez. "It was my way of standing up and defending what I feel is right."

Students lead alarming lives

Would you like to live in a comfortable house within walking distance to all your classes, pre-register before 12,000 students, eat steak in front of a television as often as you like, and get paid $50 a month for it?

Your other important duties would include painting curbs and bicycle lanes, setting up barricades for registration and football games, and keeping the house clean.

Such is the job of the student firemen. They must be on call every other day and every other weekend, practicing drills on Saturdays. The students live in the house year round, staying an extra week and a half during Christmas and living there during the summer.

This year's firemen are still recovering from last September's 7-acre brush-fire, located in the hills behind the Ornamental Horticulture Unit.

The most recent blaze occurred in the Swine Unit, and was considered a false alarm. Most of the fire-fighting hours are spent washing down oil spills around campus.

Though not resembling Smokey the Bear, this sober fireman is ready to stomp out the next campus fire and to display his hose squirting capabilities.

Wilhell, Scott McMillan, and Steve Stockebrand. The Fire Dept. supervisor is George Cockrell, who doubles as head of security.

While waiting for the fire alarm to sound, the young men often practice their hose-squirting techniques on a showering victim, who if prepared, retaliates by drenching the prankster with the contents of a fire extinguisher.

The only drawback to living at the campus firehouse would be waking up to a false alarm early in the morning when you'd planned to skip classes and sleep in.

Nixon meets with Chou In fourth series of talks

by STEWART HENSLEY

Peking (UPI) — President Nixon and Premier Chou En-lai, holding their fourth working session behind a silk curtain of secrecy, sought a formula Thursday for sidestepping the crucial issue of Taiwan in a way that would permit expanded Sino-American diplomatic contacts.

As the two leaders concluded a three-hour meeting at the Great Hall of the People, followed by a small, two-hour dinner with their wives, the major sticking point appeared to be the long-standing deadlock over U.S. diplomatic recognition of Nationalist China and Peking's claim of sovereignty over its Taiwan stronghold.

China refuses to consider full diplomatic relations with the United States as long as it recognizes the Chiang Kai-shek regime, relations which Nixon affirmed before he left Washington. The problem, it was understood, involved finding a way to set the Taiwan issue aside for the time being and implement the Nixon - Chou agreement in principle to maintain continuing contacts, possibly in the capital of a third country such as Canada.

Shaw going east . . .

Students Mike Diamond and Denny Johnson are putting up the capital, according to McClure, and will be repaid by student donations. The donations, which are needed by Monday night, are being collected in the Mustang Daily office, the Erhart-Agriculture lobby on the first floor, and Shaw's office in MPE 104.

McClure pointed out that SAC was quite willing to send two architecture students east for a conference and another student to a history symposium (the last was cancelled when a student could not be selected before a deadline for reservations).

"But you have to consider how many people Wayne Shaw will affect, in reporting the wrestling news, as opposed to how many people are affected by those two architects or a student going to a history symposium," said McClure.

In an emergency Thursday morning meeting, SAC acted on a motion by golf representative Robin Baggett to provide Shaw with $250 from that board's reserve fund. The motion passed unanimously.

Shaw is grateful for the support he has received. "It's certainly flattering to think that students care that much," he said. "I tried to emphasize that students care last night (Wednesday night's SAC meeting)."

"I tried to emphasize that on Friday we could be wrestling as many as 20 matches. There just isn't time for the coach or one of the players to call in the results."

McClure said that Shaw's job is sports information and that not giving him the budget extension was obstructing the purpose of his job.

"I think I know what's right and what's wrong and I think I have some common sense," said McClure. "It's time people start waking up to see what a small minority is trying to do to the majority of students. It's too bad that some of the SAC members don't have something called common sense."

McClure's last words: "If it's a fight they want, it's a fight we'll give them."

"There are about 2,000 married students at this college which is about one-sixth of the student body," said Mrs. Doshi. "We plan to start small with only 30 to 50 children."

Later in the rally, Mrs. Doshi defended the establishment of a child care center in response to a letter printed in Mustang Daily against such a center.

"I think if we are ever going to have a quality society, we will need good quality education (for our children) during childhood," she said. "The children's center will provide this type of education."

Mrs. Doshi also discussed her column in Mustang Daily which attacked Gov. Ronald Reagan's

Nixon accused by Viet Cong

Saigon (UPI) — The Viet Cong, commenting President Nixon's Peking visit, accused him Thursday of trying to split the Communist world by capitalizing on "internal disagreements in the Socialist camp." It said Nixon was a long standing enemy of Peking.

1973-73 budget for state colleges.

She said that Reagan has cut back college appropriations and completely cut out the Economic Opportunity Program (EOP) with zero expenditures.

"This is a racist attempt to weed out minority groups from the campuses," said Mrs. Doshi. "Reagan must feel very threatened by these people to want to get rid of them so bad."

A student asked that Evans give his reasons for the recent veto of Sports Information Director Wayne Shaw's travel expenditure.

"I felt that the expenditure was not warranted," said Evans.

"Anyone on the team could provide the same service, perhaps not as proficient and with a time delay, but the same service."

He added that the veto was not part of an anti-sports move, as some have advocated, but rather an attempt to conserve ASI funds.

Richard Denier and Greg Williams from Agriculture and Natural Resources Council approached the microphone and announced that a crusade for Shaw had been started by concerned people since SAC would not support him.

MOVIE REVIEW

Cisco Pike makes a fair shake

by RICHARD GOVE

Making a movie actor out of a pop singer works about as well as turning an idiot into a nuclear physicist. The result is nearly always disastrous. Kris Kristofferson and "Cisco Pike" is the exception to the rule.

Kristofferson, in his screen debut, conveys all the power and form of a veteran actor in the title role of "Cisco Pike", now at the Obispo Theater. One of the "New wave musicians" out of Nashville, his lines are impeccably delivered, his actions free and definite.

The movie is about Cisco, his music, chick and problems, though not necessarily in that order. Playing an over-the-hill folk singer (which probably made the acting a bit easier) with two dope busts against him, Cisco is conned into pushing 100 kilos of grass for the nar (narcotics officer) that busted him before.

Karen Black plays Cisco's woman, Gene Hackman plays Sgt. Holland (the nar) and the 100 keys play themselves. While Miss Black's job as a sexy, intelligent woman seems contrived and fake, Hackman's expert handling of a paranoid officer just substantiates what he has shown in "Bonnie & Clyde", "I Never Sang For My Father" and "The French Connection".

Moral issue notwithstanding, the wheeling and dealing of the 100 bricks is approached honestly and without cliches that marred so many ventures.

Throughout the movie Cisco is haunted by the memory that at one time he was atop of the musical pile, but now he is struggling to stay even.

Kristofferson sings four of his own compositions, including "Lovin' Her Was Easier". The Sir Douglas Quintet add a selection, but musically the show is all Kris'. The lyrical quality of his tunes are poetically exquisite.

"Cisco Pike" moves rapidly to a breathtaking climax. Judging by Kristofferson's professional debut he'll be around again. "Cisco Pike" should be, too.

Jack Nicholson directs, helps produce and tries a bit of screenplay writing in his initial film from behind the camera. Nicholson, of "Easy Rider" and "Carnal Knowledge" fame, brings "Drive". He said to the screen. Along the way something must have fallen out of the package.

The movie tries hard to be relevant rebel-on-the-campus flick but radicalism (sorry Che) is getting (yawn) to be rather (yawn) trite in movies.

Ironically, Nicholson's film is relevant in an area he probably never considered. College basketball. From the violent fight scenes to the pro scout, they could have been lifted from today's sports page. Shades of Marquette and Jim Chones.

William Tepper sells the role of Hector Bloom, All-American jock. Karen Black, however, traipses in to mangle another performance. Michael Margotta pulls off the best draft induction glimpse since "Alice's Restaurant".

SAC prohibits use of Elks . . .

intent of the resolution. In another SAC action, an attempt to override Evans' veto on a motion failed. The ASI president vetoed SAC's decision to grant Wayne Shaw, sports information director, $855 to championships and pay excess publication cost.

Shaw said the football program budget should realize close to an over income of $2,000 when all outstanding bills are paid.

"There is more money there because of more work of my own volition," Shaw said.

If the override on the veto failed, Miss Beasley said, "Mr. Shaw wouldn't overwork next year. He would be a fool if he did. If one program in athletics overproduces, we should encourage that overproduction."

The veto override failed 12-8-1. The actions needed a two-thirds majority vote.

Dan Cook from science and Curt Lester initiated a discussion on the unauthorized line transfer wrestling funds.

math moved to allot $370 for excess publication costs for publishing a program for the national championships and to congratulate Shaw for his efforts this year.

"I vote against this," Martinez said. "As long as we're doing a rape job, we may as well do a complete rape job."

The motion passed 12-0-7. Denier, from the agriculture and natural resources school declared himself absent during the voting. SAC Chairman Marianne Doshi, Piyush Shah, Elizabeth Duprey, Miss Beasley, Depper, Imadahi, and Williams abstained.

"Why all the abstentions?" asked Budd Dressler, representative from communicative arts and humanities. "Do they consider this a game? Is that what they think this is?"

"It is rather childish," Evans said.

"Just putting him on the head and telling him he (Shaw) did a good job turns my stomach," Miss Beasley said.

Other SAC action included: Curt Lester from Finance Committee initiated SAC discussion on the unauthorized line transfer of $600 from Wrestling (Xher to Wrestling Travel. He said Finance Committee approved the transfer after the $600 had been spent.

Dressler moved the $600 transfer by the wrestling team be recouped from the Board of Athletics Control reserve fund and placed into contingency for future availability. The issue was postponed for one week.

The council agreed to spend $270 each for two architecture students to attend a national conference in Detroit.

Chumash Indian reflects on tribal heritage and hopes for the future

by JOYCE LYNN WILCOXSON

There is no hate, revenge, or bitterness visible in the face of the small, dark Indian woman for the people who cheated, raped and diminished her race to the point where they are almost extinct.

Juanita Centeno, a Chumash Indian from Lompoc, spoke to sociology students and a sprinkling of members from minority groups informing the students of the life she's lead and the hardships and prejudices the American Indian endures.

Mrs. Centeno, accompanied by her two grandchildren, Tina, 10, and Barbara, 9, was colorfully dressed in the traditional Sioux regalia. The Chumash's clothing, inappropriate for public appearances, consisted only of a grass skirt for the women and a breech cloth for the men.

Before beginning any discussion, the Lord's Prayer, sung and recorded on tape was played while the two girls translated in Indian sign language the meaning of the words.

A tomahawk, intricate beadwork, and beautifully hand-crafted baskets were displayed. Materials used to make these Indian crafts were discussed briefly to acquaint the students with Indian work.

Though Mrs. Centeno and her two grandchildren teach beadwork, among numerous other things, she explained that her Chumash ancestors did not do beading, but mainly concentrated on pottery and basket making.

The Chumash language, spoken fluently by only a few, was accounted for by Mrs. Centeno. She said that while attending the white man's schools, the Indians were ordered to speak only English at all times.

They were forbidden to speak their own language when they were near the whites. The forceful abandoning of their inherited language over the years took its toll.

The Chumash children today do not even hear their tribal language spoken. Instead Mexican and English have intermingled to serve as the basis of the Chumash's present language.

Mrs. Centeno said that it "really wasn't our fault we didn't learn our language." This one cultural heritage, along with countless others have been choked out of them by the white people.

One of the greatest insults she feels occurs when discards brought by the whites and given to the Indians are useless to them. Yet, she said the white luxuries that most people enjoy and take for granted.

She has been taught since childhood how to walk barefooted in the mountains, how to grow food without the aid of modern technology, and how to cook and survive in nature's rugged world.

The love and respect of parents and family came first in the teachings she received in her youth and she believes that "children come first."

Her grandchildren, who live with Mrs. Centeno, are never left alone and are always with her except during school session. Mrs. Centeno believes that "if you don't get kids in their first five years, you're doomed to misery."

Talking about her reservation, Mrs. Centeno does not see any future for it. Indians need people's help, she said, but not useless discards or anything that cannot be used in a useful way.

Ireland snipers

Belfast, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Gunmen shot and seriously wounded a British soldier Thursday in one of a series of shooting incidents in Northern Ireland. Raiders set the Strabane Town Hall ablaze.

In the Bogside district of Londonderry gunmen fired at least five times on army observation posts during the day.

people expect gratitude for the cast-offs they have thrust at the Indians. "Whites make Indians lazy by giving them stuff," said Mrs. Centeno.

Names like "Braves," "Indian Redskins," and other names that have been attached to athletic teams throughout the country also offend her. She regards this as another needless insult inflicted upon her people.

Mrs. Centeno said she's "been very happy being poor." She's never had the comforts and

She would like to see a place built on the reservation at Santa Ynez where the "kids can learn what they want" and also she thinks the "kids should be taught something useful."

When people visit the Santa Ynez reservation, she feels proud. Yet time and again their land and property has been vandalized and abused by outsiders who hold no respect for the Indians' properties.

Mrs. Centeno explains that she does not live on the reservation because it is too small and she "doesn't want to be locked up any more."

Indians, like other minority groups usually find it almost impossible to get a good job.

It is "too late to go on by ourselves," said Mrs. Centeno. "We can't get along without the whites." She doesn't hold a grudge against the white people. She "doesn't feel cheated enough to get even."

Four-way meet to open track year

Friday, February 26, 1972

by MALCOLM STONE

The Mustang track team makes a shakedown run tomorrow morning at the new track in a four-way meet. The visiting teams are Hancock, Westmont, and Monterey Peninsula colleges.

Field events are scheduled to begin at 11 a.m. while track events are set for noon.

Coach Steve Simmons said the meet is an annual non-scoring event. "We use it to see where we are at the end of our winter training program. On the basis of this we get our relay teams (440 and 880 yards, mile, two-mile) ready for the season," he said.

Simmons said he did not know much about Hancock or Monterey Peninsula. "Westmont is traditionally strong in the Everyone is going to be on about the same level."

Hancock does have one of the nation's leading decathlon prospects in Kenney Kring, the coach's son, and Westmont's Jean Louis Ravelamantsoa from Morocco is one of the world's best sprinters with times of 9.2 seconds for the 100-yard dash and 1.9 for the 60-yard dash.

The Mustang's Reynaldo Brown is competing at the AAU's indoor championships. He may join the team in time for the Easter Relays.

Simmons plans to enter his athletes in several events both as a conditioning exercise and to evaluate their performances. At this point the team has been concentrating on weight lifting and distance running for conditioning.

"Our sprinters won't be real sharp, because they have been working over distance. We haven't done any speed work. Our sprinter, hurdlers and distance runners will be under the clock for the first time this season."

Simmons expects the freshman mile relay team to set a new record, and he thinks they should run better than last season's team.

"I expect our quarter milers, especially Kerry Gold and Arthur Markham, to do well," said Simmons. "I think our two freshman high jumpers, Tom Murphy and Randy Zimmer, will also do well."

Last season the Mustangs finished second in the California Collegiate Athletic Association dual meet race. They also finished second in the National Collegiate Athletic Association's College Division national championships.

Mustangs face Titans in CCAA baseball opener

The Mustang Baseball team, with a 5-2 pre-season record, open their league play today with a game at Fullerton State College. Southpaw Dennis Root, 1-0 on the year with an excellent 0.69 ERA, will be starting for the locals.

After sweeping the series with San Francisco State last weekend, Coach Augie Garrido had these comments to make. He said, "The team was sharper in this series than in the games with St. Mary's. Our nervous edge that we had in our opening games was gone in these games."

Garrido was very pleased with the play of freshman first baseman Ted Bailey, who stepped in for the injured Gary Knuckles and did a very fine job in the series. He was also pleased with reliever Dave Brunell, who was impressive in his relief job in the first game of the doubleheader. He complimented these two players when he said, "We have players who can step in and do the job at any time."

After seven pre-season games, the Poly nine are looking forward to California Collegiate Athletic Association play where they finished in second place with a 18-5 record last year. The locals have been hitting an impressive .295 as a team. The pitching staff has a glistening 2.33 ERA through these pre-season games. The defense is fielding at an excellent .969 clip. One interesting statistic is that the team has 24 stolen bases, while the opposing teams have failed to steal on Mustang catcher Doug Radican.

The Mustangs will be in good health going into their games with Fullerton. According to Garrido, the pitching staff will be well rested since the game with Fresno was rained out. He said,

"All of the minor injuries have been taken care of and we'll be going at full strength for today's game."

Fullerton State, which is coached by Bill Fulton, finished low in the CCAA last year but looks stronger this year. They are led by Steve Follmier, a transfer from Cypress, Kent Roselle, a shortstop who led the league in home runs last year, and first baseman Ted Preston.

According to Garrido, Fullerton's strength is in its hitting attack. They are a very aggressive team with the bat.

Cagers ready for UCR

Only two weeks ago, Neale Stoner's Mustangs were fighting just to stay in the California Collegiate Athletic Association basketball race. But they fought hard enough to emerge as league leaders with the chance to win the title outright tomorrow night at UC Riverside.

The league finale is set for 8 p.m. with a freshman game to precede the varsity tilt.

On the line is the conference title. Going into the game the locals are the only team assured of at least a share of the title with Valley State and Riverside breathing on the Mustangs' back.

Should Riverside win, a three-way tie would exist. If the Mustangs win, the title belongs to them.

But momentum will play a key role in tomorrow night's battle. The Highlanders have tailed off to lose to the bottom two teams in the league while the locals have fashioned a seven-game winning streak.

Also, the Mustangs have been winning the close games under pressure as was not the case earlier in the season.

"Our players have learned how to play better in close games," Stoner commented. "We're doing things in the last couple of minutes of play the way they should be done and that's been the difference in our five overtime victory over San Fernando and our win over Cal Poly Pomona last week," he continued.

But winning will not be easy. "It will take an outstanding performance on our part, but that's what I'm expecting," Stoner continued.

In the two previous meetings, the Highlanders came out on top—but not by more than two points, 78-77 and 79-77. "We could have won either of the first two games and the third meeting should be every bit as close as the first two," the head mentor added.

Defensively, the Mustangs have improved in covering the big men as was seen in the Pomona game. Billy Jackson and Bob Jennings gave strong second half performances to stop Alan Smith and Lee Roy Williams to only three points in the second stanza after they combined for 26 in the first half.

Riverside will throw Sam Cash and Howard Lee at the locals, both excellent rebounders and scorers. Cash leads the league in rebounds averaging 17 a game while Lee, 12. Jennings is the top Mustang averaging 9.1 while Jackson, 8.7.

In individual battles, the scoring title will be on the line between Riverside's Bobby Walters and the locals' Billy Jackson. Walters has a 20.1 average to Jackson's 21.7. Jennings is not far behind with an 18.6 average.

Stoner had special praise for Jennings. "Bob has been an outstanding player for us at both ends of the court all season and we've come to expect outstanding defensive efforts from him," he added.

John Parker has been an added spark plug to the locals' attack. He has come up with outstanding back to back league performances against Valley State and Pomona. It was he who sank two free shots with three seconds remaining to put the Mustangs alone in first place.

Guard Pinky Williams has provided excellent ball-handling and has improved greatly defensively in recent weeks. Joining Williams at the other guard spot will be Mike Jackson, who has come on recently to aid Williams with good ball-handling.

The Mustangs will need the kind of rebounding exhibited here by Bob Jennings (34) and Rick Stickelmaier (40) when they meet UC Riverside Saturday night.
