

Parking police

by ROBERT CASTRO

Dow Willel, one of the parking police on campus came across a student complaining of a ticket he received. The student told Willel that he was cited for not having a parking permit.

According to the student his permit was in the car's glove compartment. When he showed the permit to Willel, the parking officer quickly noticed the student had stolen the permit.

That situation does not occur everyday, but most of the parking violations that Willel comes across deal with students without parking permits trying to park on campus.

As Willel would say, "These students are trying to beat the system." Usually they receive citations from him.

One such student was lucky to not get cited. Willel came across a pretty blonde in an expensive sports car pulling out of the parking lot. Though she didn't have a parking sticker Willel let her go.

She told him that she couldn't afford a sticker but would be kind of enough to watch her car when she parked in the future? Noticing that she wore expensive clothes and had an expensive car Willel told the girl to consider herself lucky at not getting a ticket and to get out of the parking lot.

ALUMNI

Association is active

by DEBBY STONE

On the second floor of the Administration office building there is an office called Information Services. In this office is Charles Mendenhall, who runs this office with its many duties. One of his duties involves being director of Alumni Affairs.

"I became director a year ago. I am an alumnus from the class of 1943. Naturally, I am pleased to help the alumni association and participate in its plan for growth and development," he said.

The purpose of the association is to promote welfare of the university in all its phases, to perpetuate the friendships made, to encourage worthy young people to attend the university in their hopes for higher education, to encourage young people of good scholastic ability, and to cooperate with the administration in the establishment and implementation of the program of "continuing education, and extension work for the alumni.

A history of the organization dates back to 1906. It has been in existence constantly. The Alumni Board of Directors consists of President Lew Litzle, two vice-presidents, a secretary-treasurer, and 16 regional directors.

One of the goals of the association is to maintain a list of the students who attended the university. This effort has been continued since 1960. The current mailing list includes 22,000 people.

The Alumni Association works with many of the different organizations on campus, such as donating money to the short term loan program, and different improvement programs. The association assisted with athletic program for two different years. Operations are financed through memberships. Annual membership fees are $5, life memberships after the first year out of school is $37.50, and then becomes $50 from then on, annually. Half the membership dues go into trusts and the other half goes back into the organization. The budget for '72-'73 is $9,000. Expenditures include office supplies for communication, Home Coming, donations to different organizations on campus, and the publication of the magazine Cal Poly Today. Considering new memberships from the 1972 graduates, it is expected the income will rise to $12,000 a year.

The association is involved in many different projects such as bringing faculty members to groups of graduates for a professional seminar. The purpose of the seminar would be to inform the graduates of information they now need that they did not have on their curriculum in school to better equip them in the business world. Every other year a student who graduates from farm management comes to campus for a symposium. In this event the graduating students are informed about some of the new techniques being used in business.

In 1964 a program to honor the outstanding alumnus was originated. This is still a tradition. Each school of instruction nominates three candidates they feel deserves the honor and from that selection the board of directors chooses one person from each school. This year there will be nine people honored at homecoming half-time ceremonies.

The organization is planning for more input and ideas from the students on campus who wish to get involved with the association.

Tuition questioned

A lawsuit was filed in the Alameda County Superior Court demanding that millions of dollars in student fees be returned to state college and university students.

The suit charges that many of the fees actually amount to illegal tuition. This applies to all 19 state colleges and universities in the state system.

Here a student carrying twelve units or more is required to pay $39.00 per quarter which is an average of $117 for "materials and services" during an academic year. This fee covers the cost of student services that are provided such as personal servicecost, operating expenses of equipment. Everything in student affairs division such as activities, counseling and testing, health services etc. are included in this fee.

"The suit alleges that some of the M and S fee is a tuition charge and that there is a legal provision which limits tuition charge to $25 per year," said James Landreth, director of business affairs.

The suit charges that the schools are in violation of Education code section 23753 which states, except as otherwise provided, the total tuition fees charged any student in a state college shall not exceed $25 per year or $12.50 per term. It charges that the state has been collecting "tuition from students in the guise of materials and services while maintaining that the educational functions provided tuition fee."

The charge itself stems from the word tuition which in general means salaries for faculty and staff benefits such as retirement, social security, health and welfare, etc.

"I feel it is quite clear none of the materials and services fee goes for faculty salaries or what we call staff or fringe benefits," said Landreth.

New referral system helps answer questions

by TOM MARSHALL

The Student Roundhouse, a new student information service created by the ASI officers of this university, was launched last week, but it will require student support and involvement to reach its full potential.

According to Denny Johnson, ASI vice-president, the new service is aimed at answering any question, solving any problem or investigating any complaint a student on this campus might have. It is not for handling emotional problems. The telephone number is 546-2011.

"If you've got a question about where to get your shoes repaired or how many pizza parlors there are in San Luis Obispo, we'll have the answer or find out for you," Johnson said.

The service is based on a referral system in which a form is completed for each call received. Space is provided on the form for the question, problem or complaint and the action taken.

"Our present schedule is from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday, until we get more students to volunteer to man the phone. We hope to extend the service schedule to 8 a.m. to midnight, seven days a week, or even 24 hours a day, if there is enough interest," Johnson said.

"This is good for people who want to be close to student government without becoming too involved. You can get as involved as much as you want. We need volunteers and help," Johnson added.

The ASI is in the process of sending out questionnaires to the local merchants requesting a list of their hours and services.

"We also plan to expand the service to include information about instructors and landlords," Johnson said.

One slightly controversial aspect of the service is a merit system which will be incorporated into the referral system. The system will be based on a plus-minus structure, with pluses being awarded for complementary comments received from the students and minuses for complaints. There is some question as to whether the results of this merit system can legally be disclosed to an inquiring student.

"If we receive too many complaints about a certain merchant or landlord, we'll look into it," Johnson explained.

John Holley has been named Student Roundhouse Director and will be responsible for scheduling and all other aspects of the new service.

ASI NOTES

Youth power at polls

In 1972, 25 million Americans between the ages of 18 and 24 will be eligible to vote for the first time in a presidential election. Considering the fact that two of the last three presidential elections were decided by less than 500,000 votes, the youth vote will have a considerable impact on the upcoming election.

This newly won right to vote will give young people a real chance to voice their opinions on the needs and concerns of this country. On this campus there should be a deep concern for the student voter, and I feel that these voters should have an integral part in American democracy. A registration drive on this campus is necessary.

I am establishing a "Voter Registration Committee." The appointed chairman is Terri Vanierberghe and she can be contacted at the ASI office. This committee will consist of about five members (none of which have been appointed yet) with the purpose of organizing a complete voter registration drive. The drive will be conducted in a non-partisan manner. The top qualifications for membership in this committee would be the motivation to do the job and the time to do it.

The target project of this committee will be an attempt to reach three groups on this campus: 1) unregistered, incoming freshmen; 2) upperclassmen who did not register last year; and 3) students registered at their parent's address who wish to change their registration locus.

There is a national non-partisan organization conducting and assisting in voter registration around the country. It's called "The Student Vote." Cal Poly's committee will be working closely with this national organization which will give assistance in the way of supplying materials (posters, etc.), media spots, as well as advice.

The Voter Registration Committee's work will not end with the registration drive. The name and function change—it will be the "Get-Out-The-Vote" Committee. The entire registration drive will be futile unless people get out and vote. Remember, you're now a voting citizen.

Yellow journalism

by MALCOM STONE
Editor-in-Chief

The test of any publication is how well it is read. That is whether or not you the reader merely skims through the pages or settle down for intimate perusal.

Great commercial publications go up or down on the basis of professional readership surveys. Vast sums are spent to determine if you readers read the whole thing, part of the thing or none of the thing.

In the journalism department student journalists often wonder if their efforts are read. Discussions go into great depth on the alleged readership of the Mustang.

I have often taken part in those discussions, arguing vehemently that the newspaper has a large and loyal readership. Until last week I had little proof that it was so, but now I do.

By last Thursday afternoon it must have been pointed out to me at least 50 times that I had run essentially the same story twice in the same edition.

One of the problems an editor has is making his paper a bright appealing package. You may have noticed that I solved that problem very nearly this week.

Yellow newsprint makes for a bright highly visible newspaper. For weeks now I have been searching for the solution to my problem, and it has been neatly rolled up and waiting.

The only problem I have now is how do I follow this act? I suppose I could try fuchsia or something like that, but it is only luck that yellow was available this week.

Taxes rising for students

by RUSS ALLEN

An open letter written by ASI Pres. Robbin Baggett, printed in the Aug. 3 issue of Mustang the reasons against the proposed five percent utility tax.

This new five percent utility tax will give the owners of apartments, and houses the justification to round off rental prices a little higher. It will be built into the overall rental fee, and the usual practice of refunding tax utilities to those making less than $5,000 per year will not be given.

During most of the year students make up half of this community's population. Students are allowed to attend city meetings, voice and opinion, or object to one. Baggett did just that in his fight against a five percent utility tax, but in reality they had already made up the budget. So what is there to fight.

Baggett says, "It's futile to go down to these meetings when they have already made up their minds. This is a very insufficient, and superficial way to run city government when they have already decided how they're going to balance the budget one or two years before."

After the local papers have printed the new tax proposal for two weeks there will be a second chance to rattle their cage again. That's all we're really doing is rattling a cage filled with back door political decision makers.

There have been no specific plans or guidelines for the use of said tax. Improvement of city parks was mentioned, but the City Planning Commission has tried to set off-limit signs to students for social gatherings.

A student's budget is tight, and any additional cost to them can make a difference.

The city government has brought out a five percent utility tax that the students had literally nothing to say about.

The students of this state university are being treated by the city government as if they were on a long lunch hour, watching the things they need go up in price.

Wallbanger's whooping weapon

by PAUL SIMON

A young researcher named Dr. Harvey Wallbanger at the University of Wino, Walla Walla, Wash. has produced what I consider the most equitable solution to the vast ideological differences that threaten to split the nation during this election year.

He calls it splitting the nation. To discover the secret of this enterprising enigma, I visited Dr. Wallbanger at his top-secret research center.

"What is your plan, Dr. Wallbanger?"

"It's really simple, you see. We divide the country along ideological boundaries, providing liberals and conservatives their own states."

"What about moderates?"

"Ah-ha! I'm glad you asked me that question. A 50-mile buffer zone would be established along all borders for fence-straddlers; sort of a CLZ or Conservative-Liberal Zone."

Thinking the good doctor a little touched, I asked why in Spiro T. Agnew he would want to perform such a surgery.

"Just think of it," he replied. "Isolationists can practice that philosophy in the 'liberal' state without endangering the national security of the more conservative elements of society. And conservatives can continue sending enormous sums of money to police the world and uphold their prestige without endangering their own national security from liberals."

"Now I think I've got to you. Sen. George McGovern would lead the 'liberal' state and Richard Nixon would preside over the 'conservative' nation."

"Not exactly. It's true McGovern would be president of his dictatorship so they couldn't kick him around any more..."

Rubbing his grape-stained hands in glee, Dr. Wallbanger shouted, "Just think of it. Jack Anderson would be able to circulate at will in the 'liberal' state, but, of course, since everything will be in the open he find nothing to muckrake about. Then he'll sneak into the 'conservative' state and within a month he and all other troublemakers will be stashed in prison, with the help of the FBI and Martha Mitchell."

"Imagine, an entire state without internal dissent; full of loyal, patriotic citizens giving all their income to the good of their government—and loving it. And imagine both countries would be satisfied. In the 'conservative' state, there would be no protests because the government wouldn't allow it, and in the 'liberal' state dissenters could protest to their heart's delight."

"Your ideas sound pretty far-out, Dr. Wallbanger. But how do you propose to achieve the division. And how will you convince those who won't do anything that isn't on their own, like George Meany?"

"That's easy. The November elections will continue. The states that McGovern carries will belong to the 'liberal' state and those that Nixon carries will go to the 'conservative' state, and Meany will simply cease to exist."

"Holy Goldwater," Dr. Wallbanger, there don't seem to be any drawbacks to your plan."

"Well, to make myself perfectly clear, there is, in fact, one slight problem that I have anticipated. You see, if the 'liberal' state has become isolationist and is spending money for social concerns rather than for defense, there is a possibility the hawkish "conservative" state will wish to spread its sphere of influence and at the same time protect the "liberal state" against the threats of Communism and the domino theory."

"In other words, the United States could become the newest Vietnam."

Wolf is spared not the coyote

The cancellation of a Department of Army procurement of over a quarter of a million parka hoods with wolf fur ruffs may have saved Americans over $1 million in tax money and the lives of approximately 25,000 wolves.

The Army earlier halted contract negotiations to purchase the wolf fur ruffs after the National Wildlife Federation charged that it would take nearly 25,000 wolves, or "about one-half of the total estimated North American wolf population," to fill the huge order.

Car survey slated soon

The San Luis Obispo County Engineering Department has announced the county will be conducting origin and destination surveys within San Luis Obispo County. The dates and locations are: on August 20 and 22 on State Route 1 northerly of Cayucos and on State Route 41 easterly of Morro Bay; also on August 20 and 23 on Nacimiento Lake Drive westerly of Paso Robles. Only one direction of travel will be interviewed at each location.

The purpose of the survey is to determine present traffic patterns within the county. The information will be used in the preparation of a county-wide transportation plan.

by SUSIE FRENCH
Hopefully, most of us won't accomplish the feat of meeting Larry Wolf, head co-ordinator of student discipline. But for those of us who stumble into his office by chance, and under better circumstances, we are sure to wonder how he got stuck in the discipline department.

After meeting Larry Wolf you might wonder why he would chose to be head of student discipline. Jobs like this one seem to be reserved for ex-Marine drill sergeants rather than quick-to-smile individuals who can actually make you feel comfortable during an interview.

warnings are issued

Truth of the matter is that he came to Cal Poly from the aerospace industry with a bachelors degree in both English and history. He is now working for his masters in English so he can leave student discipline and become an English instructor.

"Prior to last fall," said Wolf, "each residence hall had their own student board and I just reviewed the cases. However it was terminated because of too much inconsistency between halls."

Wolf also said many of the disciplinary measures undertaken depend on the circumstances and the attitudes of the surrounding students.

"I prefer that the student resident advisors have discretion over whether or not the students are violating the rules because they are closer to being part of the peer group."

When a student is concerned with major violations against state regulations security is notified. Even if the student is taken down town to the police department and charged the university still has the prerogative to take administrative action.

For example, most cases dealing with possession of marijuana have resulted in suspension for a period of time.

One way to meet Mr. Wolf that would be less serious than most would be to accumulate a number of parking tickets. With an excess of five tickets you would receive a formal notice. That would be a good place to stop because any more might find you with a cancelled parking permit.

Most of the smaller discipline problems are sifted out in the two main functions

various stages before they become part of the shuffled paperwork on Larry Wolf's desk.

He performs two main functions: investigating if the misdemeanor has violated either the State Penal Code or the student conduct regulations, and presenting such cases at the hearings.

These cases usually deal with theft, abusive behavior, possession and use of drugs, and possession of marijuana which fall under violation of the state penal code. Violations dealing with alcoholic beverages are part of the student regulations established by the school.

When such a case is brought to Wolf's attention he must determine if it is deserving of a formal charge. If the case is not dropped it is presented to Pres. Kennedy and at his consent a hearing is set. At the hearing Wolf presents the case and acts as prosecutor.

However most cases are taken care of more simply. Usually warnings are issued for violations of campus regulations unless there have been multiple violations and a formal complaint has been received. In these cases a hearing is held.

Student input on evaluations

Plans to develop a university wide student evaluation of faculty members were discussed at the first meeting of the Ad Hoc Student evaluation of Faculty Committee.

The committee will make guidelines which will set general standards and procedures for each department to operate its own student evaluation of faculty program.

Hilary Findley, ASI representative, said he would like to see the faculty evaluated "yearly or perhaps more" and the evaluations to be "used in personnel considerations for the university."

Another student member, Pam Brown, said she was pleased to see that "steps are finally being taken to allow students to have an effective input in the evaluation of teachers."

violators are usually cooperative when confronted face to face. Still it is not at all uncommon to come across an angry violator screaming profanity because of a two dollar fine. Fortunately for Willie these individuals are always all bark and no bite.

One year the parking officers and the security police issued 25,000 tickets. According to Willie these tickets are given out because of the students' carelessness instead of an officer's quota. There is no such thing as a quota but there is such a thing as carelessness, he said.

The other parking officer seen driving the Pushman scooter is Officer Carlos Ramirez. Though his job is to check the parking time zones and bicycle lanes he occasionally does other work.

Recently Ramirez found two dogs suffocating to death because their owner had the window shut completely during the hot day.

Acting quickly on the situation, Ramirez notified the Security Office to get in contact with the Humane Society. Ramirez somehow was able to get the car doors open to help save the unconscious dogs.

Carlos Ramirez scores two more dollars for the county's road development.

ASI cash livens office

by PAULA QUALLS

Orange and yellow-orange are the colors making for a bright and pleasant atmosphere in the ASI office this year.

ASI Pres. Robin Baggett sits in an office decorated with a new wall-to-wall bookshelf constructed by the Foundation Carpenters, (a maintenance group on campus) an orange two-seater couch, several chairs, and a beige desk. From the windows of his office Baggett can take in a view of the Administration building and the Santa Lucia women's residence hall.

The outer office is equipped with four desks for the other ASI officers which includes one full time secretary Peggy Keep, Paul Tokunaga, co-ordinator of communications, Mike Meiring, head of the Finance Committee, and John Lange, Chief Justice over the student judiciary.

Across the hall into what was once a conference room is now ASI Vice-President Denny Johnson's office also in the same decorum as the main office.

Expansion of the ASI office was done, it was explained, to make it possible for more students to become active in the student government.

The ASI office last year with Pete Evans as ASI president was very similar to what it is now, except the Malcolm X, Angela Davis and Women's Lib posters are no longer hanging on the walls.

A special fund set aside for furnishings and decorations was started several years ago by the Student Affairs Council.

Roy Gersten, director of Business Affairs for the ASI said, "Of the $5,000 in the fund approximately $3,000 has been spent."

The $3,000 dollars has been dwindling since the ASI office moved into the College Union. Some of the money has gone for Johnson's new office and for three new desks in the ASI office.

Tutor program is successful

The tutorial program started this summer by the ASI is working "as well as could be expected" according to Robin Baggett ASI Pres.

The program offers free tutoring in chemistry, physics, math, statistics, economics, accounting, and computer science daily from 2 to 5 p.m. in C.U. room 220.

The daily turnout averages 45 people, with one or more tutors helping in all subjects. Chemistry and math are the biggest in demand.

Foreigners' fees hiked

by ALFRED RUCKER

At one time the state of California had the most attractive and lowest tuition fees for attending college than any other state. This was the opinion of one foreign student who came to this country to get an education that was unavailable to him in his home country.

Kuria Manyore from Kenya, Africa graduated from this university with a bachelor's degree in general agriculture in the Summer of 1971. In 1972 he received his master's degree also in general agriculture.

Manyore is one of the foreign students saddled with increased tuition fees imposed by the state in the fall of 1971. Although he has graduated he is still in debt to the university.

Manyore said, he came to this school because the tuition was at that time about $85 each quarter. He recalled that at the time he was contemplating attending college he was in the state of Washington when he ran across a college catalog from the state of California. The tuition was so low he could not pass up a chance to attend school here, he said.

Manyore said he could not attend college in his country because only students who have straight A's can attend.

Manyore recalled that when the talk of increasing tuition first started he was concerned. At that time he was president of the International Club which is made up of foreign students.

Most of the students were told when they left college at the end of Spring Quarter because most of the legislature was on their side the chances were very slim that the increase was forthcoming.

Such was not the case however, Manyore said. When students returned tuition had been increased. All was not lost because a loan fund was established to aid the students, he said. Many could not afford to pay the increase and so some dropped out of school, while others transferred to different colleges where they could get a job to finance their schooling.

When asked what he felt was the purpose of the increase Manyore said "the tuition increase was I feel to prevent more foreign students from coming to school and to cause others to drop out."

He said "If it was not for California I could not have finished college but the way things are going now only the wealthy can afford to send their children to school here."

Manyore said he feels the American people wanted to get foreign students over here and exchange cultures, but that has now reached a peak and the demand is over.

Pay raise and health benefits for instructors

by JOHN TEVES

Now is the time to lean on your instructor for a break if you're going to. They finally got a raise.

The Federal Pay Board announced Monday that faculty members in the University of California and California State University and College systems would be granted requested pay raises.

The board approved a 7.5 percent increase in wages for instructors at the California State University and Colleges. The figure met the demands submitted by the schools.

In arguing for the payraise, which exceeded the board's own guidelines, school spokesmen maintained that instructors in California colleges and universities had fallen in standing in relation to their colleagues in the rest of the country.

The board apparently granted the excess increase to compensate for the two year period the instructor's had gone without a raise.

Instructors also received an increase in health benefits. The state will pay $14 of the instructor's health insurance policy now instead of $12.

According to Director of Personnel, Larry Voss, an additional $2 will be paid on the policies by the state should the Governor sign a bill now on his desk.

Voss said that instructors will receive the new pay adjustment in the September pay warrant. The payraise is retroactive to July 1 and instructors will receive a special adjustment check for the month of July prior to the September check.

As an example of the payraise's actual effects, an assistant professor in a state college or university in the third salary step would receive an increase in his salary from $900 a month to $968.

Instructional deans and librarians received an equity adjustment in other payboard action. Instructional deans received an additional 9.7 percent increase and the librarians 1.7 percent to 10.2 percent, according to classification, in compensation for past inequities.

Baggett goes to convention

ASI Pres. Robin Baggett will attend the National Republican Convention next week in Miami.

Baggett is scheduled to fly out of Los Angeles Friday morning with a contingent of two hundred young people put together by the Young Voter's for the President.

The group will be billeted in a hotel with other groups from throughout the nation who will make up the army that assists attendants to the convention.

"I talked to some people about it and I'll probably be working as an aid to a delegate or a legislator," explained Baggett in when asked what he might be doing.

Asked if he might invite some of the more notable attendants to the convention to visit this school, Baggett said "Yes there's several people, including Nixon, whom I hope to get to come to the school to speak."

ROCK REVIEW

Foghat shakes 'em up

by CYNTHIA LYBARGER
Just because it's summer doesn't mean that we aren't entitled to a good rock concert. This was proven true Saturday night with the appearance of Foghat and Victoria in Chumash Hall.

Victoria, a long-haired lass with a vibrato voice, opened the evening's fun with a personality and talent described as uninhibited—to say the least. She accompanied herself on piano and guitar along with two other persons on electric bass and cello.

On the whole she produced a refreshing sound that seemed to rise up from the very depths of her personality. Her music often began softly, then swelling to reach a height of inner emotions and then just as quickly diminishing.

Victoria truly is an excellent female performer on stage and appears to have a much-needed ability to handle audiences. She stated once on stage that she wanted to bring the audience from "your up-down to your up-up" in the series of songs she sang.

A sad thing about her performance was the attitude of a small minority of the audience that often shattered the mood she was trying to create and therefore hindering the enjoyment of other people. Too bad some of the people who insisted on talking during the concert and getting up and walking around didn't come in later when Foghat performed — then it would have been completely permissible.

Foghat, an English rock group with members from Savoy Brown, succeeded in "turning on" the audience after only about 20 seconds on stage. Their boogie beat acted as a kind of electricity that brought nearly everyone in the near-full auditorium to their feet vibrating and literally "rocking out." This pace continued for what seemed like an extremely short time, (but actually we'd just lost track of time) and the group was brought back on the stage by the enthusiastic audience two times before the concert ended.

For those who attended Saturday night, it was an evening of fun and excitement which left you a little breathless. If you didn't go, all I can say is you missed a fantastic experience, and you still have a chance this summer at a good rock concert on September 8 when Cold Blood makes an appearance here.

RUNNERS

Least known athletes

by WILLIE RAMIREZ

As summer school rapidly comes to an end, athletes begin getting into shape for their respective sports.

You can see guys knocking each other down in intramural basketball games, some players looking like imitation Pete Maravich's and others trying free-throw line stuffs a la Julius Irving. Other players look like themselves, though, and they should be the tough ones on this year's collegiate squad.

The football team goes through its strenuous workouts, and they're ready to kill anybody in an opposing jersey.

While passing by the football field the other day, I viewed a game in progress. It was flag football, and each team was pretty well-matched. On one play, the shirt's quarterback threw a 20-yard pass to his ace receiver, and he had his man going in circles. Thirty yards away from the goalpost, he turned around to see where his defender was.

One of the non-shirts on the sidelines saw his big chance to impress his teammates. He tackled the runner on his blind-side. Well, at least he was aggressive.

There are numerous other intramural sports going on, but I'd like to discuss one in particular. This sport isn't in the intramural program, although you do see people in a variation of it. The sport is called cross-country. Members of the university's cross-country team can be seen in different places at different times for different workouts.

If you're ever up at 5:00 a.m., you'll see a few guys running near Highway 1. If you walk to school past the railroad tracks, you'll usually see this one cat running barefoot over all of those sharp rocks. Look to him for good races this season.

I see one runner in particular that runs on the track for hours upon hours, with no stops in between. I'll go to my 9:00 class, and he'll still be running when I get out at 10:00. Keep in mind, these are only the workouts that we see! These guys all probably run on an average of 15 to 20 miles per day, with two or three different workouts.

It takes a lot of skill to throw a pin-perfect pass to a receiver, it takes a lot of strength to hit a home run 420 feet into left field, but it takes a lot of guts to run 6-mile races.

You've got to have a certain amount of stamina to keep up the same pace throughout each mile, and then still have a fast finishing kick at the end. It makes one wonder: just why do they go through all of that endless torture?

I was jogging on the grass field adjacent to the tennis courts the other day. I was attempting to make a comeback, as I used to be a runner-of-sorts. At my running weight, I was down to 150 pounds. A few hundred six-packs of Olympia later, I was up to 190.

If you were to ask me just why I am running again, I just couldn't explain. The feeling is still in my head, and although I am handicapped (to say the least), there is still something that is driving me on. I remember all the fierce man-to-man competition, but that's all gone now. I also remember the joy of running, and believe me, that's what's still driving me on.

When I read about Jim Ryun's (the world record holder in the mile and 1500 meter runs) great comeback, I couldn't help but give it a try.

He has to be one of the greatest comebacks in sports history. As an 18-year-old high school senior, he competed in the 1964 Tokyo Olympics. In 1966-67, he set world records in the mile 3:51.1 and 1500 3:33.1, as well as in the 500 1:44.9 and an American record in the 2-mile 8:25.2.

Entering the 1968 Mexico Olympics, he had a bout with mononucleosis and finished second to Kipchoge Keino of Kenya in the 1500. He had some horrible races in 1969, wherein he dropped out or finished dead last quite a few times. He quit running altogether in 1969.

In 1971, he decided to make a comeback, although he was thirty pounds overweight. After constant workouts, he made it back to 160 pounds, and then ran in a few races in 1972. His progress was up-and-down, but in his last two races he has run extremely well.

His last mile race was 3:52.8, third fastest of all-time. Only he has run faster in this event, with Keino fourth at 3:53.1. He is now the favorite going into his third Olympics, this time in Munich, Germany.

After all this writing, I hope you've gotten a better outlook on cross-country, since most people consider it only a pantywaist sport. Runners put a lot of hours into their workouts: whether on the track or over cow-pastures. They're a unique breed.

Bonds sell

The San Luis Obispo County Board of Supervisors today awarded the sale of 4,100,000 in construction bonds for Cuesta College to Bank of America on a low bid of 4.6257 percent average annual interest.

This is the balance of the $5 million bond issue approved by voters in November 1970. The first series of $900,000 in bonds was sold to the Bank of America at 4.6437 percent in November of 1971.

Dr. Merlin Eisenbise, President-Superintendent of Cuesta College, said the College's building program appears financially optimistic, but it will be heavily dependent upon voter approval of a statewide community college construction bond issue of $160 million on the November ballot. San Luis Obispo County residents obligated themselves for their share in the local bond election of 1970, he said, but a promised 63 percent ratio in state matching funds will be forthcoming only if the November statewide ballot measure is a success.

"As a result of today's sale," Eisenbise said, "the average annual bond redemption tax will be approximately 11 cents per $100 of assessed valuation for 15 years, considerably lower than the 16 to 18 cent average rate projected when San Luis Obispo County voters were asked to approve the 1970 measure."

Intramurals

Intramural action in volleyball and basketball moves to the Men's Gym for the first time this summer.

The move was delayed by work on the gym floor and the annual Physical Education Workshops.

The results the intramural swim meet are as follows:

Men: 50 yard backstroke, Dave DeGrasse

60 yard breaststroke, Bill Julius

50 yard butterfly, and freestyle, Bob DeGrasse

100 yard freestyle medley, Dave DeGrasse

Women: 25 yard breaststroke and freestyle, Teri Swan

25 yard butterfly and backstroke, Donna
