FROZEN FUNDS

Day Care fate cloudy

by LIANE LUCIETTA

The decision to freeze $8,000 for a campus day care center has been postponed by Student Judiciary.

A "Complaint Petition or Petition for Action" submitted by Greg Williams, a Student Affairs Council representative, requested that the "Student Judiciary file an injunction to hold up use of ASI funds for the financing of Cal Poly Children's Center."

Former ASI vice president Marianne Doshi said that the (student) child care center people were not given adequate notice of the Student Judiciary meeting, had not been informed of the charges and were not prepared to defend themselves. She asked for adjournment till a later date.

The grounds for complaint were "that pertinent information concerning day care center alternatives were withheld from the SAC, the Child Care Center policy is an unfinished item from the past year's SAC and there were questionable procedures taken on SAC's policy decision concerning the center."

Most of the discussion centered around the questionable procedures clause. Larry Alcorn, associate justice from Communicative Arts and Humanities asked which bylaws or specific areas were violated.

Williams said Article 25, Section A of the ASI bylaws states that, "An initiative shall be held within 90 days of the receipt by the SAC of a petition signed by active members of ASI election." Section B of the same article states that, "Results of such an initiative shall be a policy directive and binding upon SAC."

Williams said a petition was submitted to SAC in Spring Quarter "with 450 names (150 over the required 300)." The petition was to put the question of subsidizing the day care center on the ballot for a general election. The election was not held.

"There were several questionable procedures in the way SAC handled the child care center matter," said Williams.

Alcorn made a motion that Williams take back the petition because it was improperly filed since it did not state the specific bylaws violated. Also that the court receive minutes of the SAC meetings in question and that there be a full hearing.

Alcorn changed the motion to say "preliminary hearing" and the measure passed by five votes with Chief Justice John Lange and associate justice Gary Wright the dissenting votes.

The preliminary hearing on the injunction will be at 7:30 p.m. December 5 in the College Union room 316.

EOP stability rocks as bill dies in committee

The last hope for financial stability for the Educational Opportunity Program during the 1972 session of the state legislature was squelched Nov. 16, according to lobbyist Joe Hay.

The measure needed seven votes to pass in the Senate Finance Committee, but received only six votes in favor and five votes against passage.

AB 1708, carried by Assemblyman Willie L. Brown Jr., would have established formula funding for EOP within the State University and Colleges and Community Colleges system.

The bill would set a dollar figure for financial support based on the full time equivalent number of students multiplied by a precise amount for each higher educational system, according to Brown.

The formula of funding for the State University and Colleges is established at an amount equal to five percent of the number of full time equivalent students enrolled in the prior fiscal year multiplied by $800.

If the measure had been enacted for this current fiscal year, the bill would have guaranteed an amount of funding slightly above the current level, according to Hay.

Opponents argued that the bill would not allow for an annual review of the program, Hay said.

Hay urged students to write to those senators who voted no, encouraging them to change their minds. The bill could then be reconsidered and brought before the committee once again for a vote.

Those voting for the bill included Senators Grunsky, Largomarsino, Rodda, Short, Collier and Bellenson, according to Hay. Those voting no were Senators Alquist, Cusanovich, Way, Marler and Holmdahl. Senators Teale and Stern were not present.

Scientists support case for divine intervention

by ROBIN SHEFFIELD

Creationism - fact or fiction? Was the earth made in six days? Or did the impersonal plus sons of time plus chance somehow "get it all together" without any divine intervention? Huxley once said that science is "an act of faith", and last Friday and Saturday an estimated two-hundred people gathered in Chumash Auditorium to hear men of science proclaim that their evolutionist colleagues have acted in haste in rejecting creationism for evolution.

Speaking on "Creation Miracle or Mutation?", Dr. George Howe, a professor of natural sciences at Los Angeles Baptist College, disputed the beneficial effects of gene mutation which he said are "by and large cited as the fuel for evolution."

"Genes usually do not change," he said, and then quoted Theodosius Dobzhansky, whom he called "the high priest of evolution," as saying the "99 per cent or more of all gene mutations are harmful."

If genes are the means of evolution, asked Howe, "how could harmful changes cause simple early cells to change into complex plants and animals of today?"

Dr. Donald Chittick, a professor of chemistry at George Fox University, defended the creationist belief in a young earth.

In evaluating the helium-uranium dating method Chittick said that the amount of helium in the rocks places the earth's age at "less than 10,000 years."

Scientists themselves have demonstrated the feasibility of a speedy creation in such recent events as the conversion of manure and garbage by low-pressure cooking into high-grade oil in a matter of hours rather than centuries, and the manufacture, in a period of weeks, of artificial fossils identical to the real thing, said Chittick.

New facility a 'maybe'

by LAURA LAMPSON

Rick Nelson, ASI representative to the Student Planning Commission (SPC), has announced the SPC is investigating the feasibility of an outdoor activity facility on this campus.

The idea for this project was the basis for a senior project a few years ago and the Student Planning Commission decided to adopt the idea as a project at their Nov. 10 meeting.

The facility would be used for storage of ASI-owned equipment

Stop and go

The stop sign at the Yosemite Hall pedestrian crossing will soon be removed, according to Executive Dean Douglas Gerard.

It will be replaced, possibly by the beginning of Winter Quarter, with a pedestrian-activated traffic signal.

The light will allow a steady flow of traffic along Grand Avenue, according to Gerard. It will remain green except when activated by a waiting pedestrian.

A pedestrian wanting to cross the street will press a button which will cause the light to turn red.

such as that owned by Outings Committee, the Corinthian's sailboat, and athletic equipment. Hopefully, the hobby garage would be expanded and moved to this new location and a coin operated car wash would be installed. This facility would be under ASI jurisdiction completely, owned by the students much the same as the college union is.

Nelson reported that funding is presenting problems at this time. "There is no possibility of receiving state funds, but the plan has been approved in the university's master plan" Nelson said.

The location of the facility would be on the road to Poly Canyon, behind the transformer. A paved area approximately the size of a football field would be used. The area would be fenced for security reasons, and clusters of buildings would be built inside for storage and activity areas. A single apartment would be included in the buildings to provide for a live-in student.

The proposal for this facility will go before the Campus Planning Commission for concept approval. Nelson will present the plans.

According to Nelson, "It is up to the Student Planning Commission to take charge of this project, after approval from the Campus Planning Commission. What is needed now is input from students and club members interested in the implementation of this program and who feel they could use a facility of this type."

Who's for Who's Who?

The ASI Awards Committee is now accepting nominations for students who qualify for Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges Award.

Any Senior graduating by September 1973 who is a member of the Associated Students, Inc., shall be considered for this award.

The candidates shall have a grade point average at least equal to the university average which is 2.45. Selection is also based on the university affiliated involvement, through clubs and similar activities, the last three years of college.

This year the quota from this college is 36 students. The recipients of the award will receive a certificate, their name will be printed in the Who's Who Magazine and there is also much benefit associated with recognition for jobs.

Nomination forms are now available in the Activities Planning Center and should be returned to ASI Box 22. The nomination forms are due Dec. 8. Any questions should be directed to Laura Lampson or Bob Walters, Committee Advisor, 846-2476.

'We can control lives'

Editor:

Last week we read a sermon by our beloved editor on how we, as students, are going to get screwed over. We are going to be forced to shell out vast sums of money to take care of a few brats some freaks on campus had the misfortune to begat.

Then, keeping up with our illustrious paper, we heard a point by point rebuttal from someone who was involved with the organizing of the Day Care Center. We hound our editor reacting hysterically to a proposal that would see to it that our children, society's children, would be properly cared for in those formative years when their characters are so drastically developed.

Is Kathleen afraid we might divert some of the funds, such as we pay for our pom pom girls, to something as petty as caring for a bunch of kids?

It seems that there are some people who are completely satisfied with the status quo and are terrified by the prospects of change. To those I would suggest they pull their heads out, from wherever they may be, take a look around and act progressively towards a better world. Yes, believe it or not, we can control our lives if we act with our minds and not simply react.

Play review questioned; theater-goer applauds

Editor:

As an avid theater-goer, a professional journalist and a novice scholar of Shakespeare, I must take issue with Joan Campbell's review of the Cal

Poly's Speech Department's presentation of "King John."

It is customary for a drama critic to comment on all aspects of the production under scrutiny, including the author's script.

In her failure to comment on William Shakespeare efforts, Mrs. Campbell indicates a possible lack of knowledge on the subject.

Shakespeare was first and foremost a playwright, and as such his prime concern is entertaining the audience, not relating historical facts. However, many of his "historical" plays are also highly entertaining. "King John" is not one of these gems. It is not a particularly good play and it is noticeably poor Shakespeare. No doubt that is why it is relatively unknown—it deserves obscurity.

Therefore, if a viewer is entertained while watching this play, it is the direction, the production and the performances that must be credited.

I had the pleasure (yes, pleasure!) of attending both the Friday and Saturday night presentations of "King John" last weekend. The total effect both nights was most enjoyable and individual efforts on each evening must be lauded.

The cast as a whole performed well both evenings with Nancy Anderson as "Constance" especially fine on Friday and Paul von Rots vivid in the title role and Mark Koba sparkling as the Bastard on Saturday. Barbara Harris was consistently, charmingly superb with her "Lady Falconbridge" cameo.

The curtain fell so abruptly—and so very finally—at the play's conclusion each evening, I am grateful I may herein applaud a difficult play well done.

Evans sparks reaction

Editor:

Re: Pete Evans' latest (Nov. 16), which was too good to pass up.

Dear Pete,

Your letter is very free with terms that seem to absolve you of any responsibility for Vietnam and-or maimed orphans, i.e. this quote "Spread a little of your affluence to those your affluence have maimed..." This sounds like you either don't feel affluent or don't share the blame. Nothing like the reformed sinner, eh? Where do you get off pointing the finger at us? Way back when we first got involved in Vietnam, I could barely talk coherently. I have never paid Federal Income Tax and therefore my "affluence" (such as it is) has never supported this or any other gov't policy. Do you think you're the only student who ever protested with your mouth and letters? That's a pretty arrogant presumption.

this slaughter has always been perpetuated by greedy industry (and labor) solidly supported by more selfish and power hungry politicians—all of them joyfully slaying thousands of Asians in the name of AMERICA, FREEDOM AND MOM." I seriously doubt that this is the case, but I am sure that no one joyfully killed anyone. Some people do not enjoy killing even "those dirty commies." Remember, the preceding generation composed in large part of industry, labor and politicians produced this generation. Like father, like son and you've already guessed that I don't believe any of us are that awful.

I am aware that the children of Vietnam are in great need. However, your letter is so offensive that many people will probably buy Hallmark. UNICEF and others work to help these children and others in distress everywhere. They manage to solicit funds without sounding like Jonathan Edwards (you might read his "Sinners in the Hands of an Angry God"—you'd have liked each other).

There has been discussion of aid to Vietnam similar to that which rebuilt Europe after WW II. I am writing my Congressional representatives in favor of it. For God's sake, though, Pete, and for the sake of the children of Vietnam, if you write, try to be nice. Better still, don't write. Your letters leave such a bad taste in the mouth that you may help scuttle any bill considered, even if you mean well. Thank you.

Believer: try to refute Bible

I would like to reply to Peter Mortinson's charges that Christianity is non-intellectual, and that it is not a worthwhile subject to be dealt with at the college level.

Peter, if these charges are true, then it should be very easy for you to historically negate the central point of Christianity—the resurrection of Jesus Christ. Also, if you feel that Christianity does not appeal to intellectual thought and logical reason, please read "Revelation and the Bible," edited by Carl Henry and "The New Testament Documents, Are They Reliable?" by F.F. Bruce.

If you still aren't convinced that Christianity can intellectually maintain itself in a college environment, please try to refute the Bible archeologically.

But Peter, if you are one of those who jokingly discard Christianity without investigating it thoroughly, please read I Corinthians 1:18.

'F' does not stop students

Editor:

Referring to your article "Archies win," Nov. 16. It was most interesting and gratifying to find out that even though a student may get an F grade, for a design course in architecture, he can always go ahead and win a major international competition.

It is also gratifying to find out that foreign students can still represent this school and for that matter this country in such competitions.

My congratulations to Mr. Bertoli from Argentina and Mr. Ariscorreta from Mexico for their success. If I could only say congratulations to their instructor who failed them for such a project?

MOVIE REVIEW

Bronson: human killer

by Rick Goulart

The talents of Charles Bronson and director Michael Winner (Chato's Land) now team again with their latest effort "The Mechanic," playing locally at the Fremont. It is an entertaining expose of the anxieties of murder within the Mob by an all to human hit man.

Bronson portrays the mechanic or hit man, Arthur Bishop, in fine style. Bishop is a man unhappy with the only work he knows how to do well. He has a calculating criminal mind with a "100 ways to kill." Yet he is sensitive to the finer points of the world: classical music, a lavish home, a sleek Mach I Mustang.

He sees in the son of an associate he had been hired to kill, played by Jan-Michael Vincent (Tribes), a little of himself long ago and decides to train him as his partner. Together they form a workable team until greed and power steps in.

"The Mechanic's" cast is very well acted, from the cocky punk in Vincent's performance to the cool, self-assurance of Bronson's. Like "Chato's Land," Bronson is again a man of few words. He is gifted with an uncanny ability to carry across a mood to the audience with only the look in his eye. It is certainly one of his greatest assets and is tremendously effective in this film.

"The Mechanic" equates heroes with killers, something our society does quite naturally from the likes of Jesse James to Bonnie and Clyde. You find yourself rooting for the bad guy, not too uncommon in this type of film.

But you are left with a great sympathy for the killer with the statement that "murder is only killing without a licence and everybody kills." Again, there is the typical ending to the film that is nonetheless very satisfying.

The film has a rapid pace and is loaded with action that is reminiscent of the James Bond thrillers. Particular credit must be given to Jerry Fielding, who composed and conducted some fantastic music that helps speed along that action. It is eerie in the

Trembly looks at visual speed in latest pamphlet

by JOHN TEVES

Dean Trembly's latest is "Clerical Speed: The Visual Dexterity Factor In Learning."

Dean Trembly is the school's Testing Officer. He's written a dozen papers on various aspects of learning. All of them have been published.

His latest concerns itself with the idea of visual dexterity. Visual dexterity refers to the agility with which a person can disengage focus on an object, a phrase of words for example, move to another object, and re-establish focus. Clerical speed is another name for the same thing.

Clerical speed is considered a factor in intelligence rating. People who have low clerical speed ratings are slow when it comes to paper work and make mistakes of that sort.

A visual dexterity deficiency requires that the student compensate for this drawback by excelling in other aspects of learning.

In his paper, published in the Fall, 1971 edition of Academic Therapy, Trembly recommended several attacks the student might take in dealing with the problem.

An increase in vocabulary, a more active part in class discussions, carrying fewer units, tape recorders and calculators, and getting along with the instructor were other areas where the student might balance the clerical speed hamperings.

Asked how a student's visual dexterity could be determined true sense of the word and set some great moods.

Also at the Fremont is Lee Van Cleef in the "Return of Sabata" a sequel to "Sabata." It is equally boring, an Italian, English-dubbed film that is torturing to sit through. It is not an adequate companion feature to an adventure film the likes of "The Mechanic."

Trembly mentioned special eye cameras, and clerical tests such as the Self Guidance Test.

Trembly was asked if a student was stupid if he had a low clerical factor. "Intelligence," he replied, "is no longer thought of as a single entity. Experts have come up with as many as 80 different factors which interact to produce what we refer to as intelligence. A student could have a low visual dexterity rating and still have plenty of ratings in the several other variables involved."

Trembly, who holds a doctorate in guidance and counseling from the University of Illinois, was asked his opinion of the theory now being expounded by some scientists, that Blacks were inferior in intelligence to the rest of the human race biologically.

"There are two types of intelligence factors," he explained, "the inherited and the acquired. Legitimate scientific tests have shown that blacks are equal to and in some cases greater than whites in natural factors of intelligence. It is in the area of acquired factors, influenced greatly by the lack of educated parents, that blacks have trouble."

Ranchers' field seminar

In addition to hearing presentations such as "How to Use Your Veterinarian," "Immunisation—Economy through Medicine", and "Beef Grown with Environmental Concern", cattlemen attending the annual Cattlemen's Field Day will get a chance to taste some "organically grown" beef.

The Animal Science Department and the San Luis Obispo County Cattlemen's Association are sponsoring the one-day presentation Wednesday. The seminar will begin at 10 a.m. in the Livestock Pavilion at the Beef Unit.

All interested cattlemen are invited to attend the program which will include demonstrations of intravenous vaccinations, treatment of pink eye, and a discussion of the senior project of Mike Hall and Susan Wayland.

Miss Wayland and Hall combined their senior project efforts and raised steers without using additives or hormones. The palatability of the meat produced in this manner will be tested at the barbecue which will follow the seminar. The price of the 1 p.m. barbecue at the Odd Fellows Hall will be $2.

Jennings leads varsity past frosh, 91-65

by Mike Smith

A week ago tonight there was a pre-turkey day warmer as the annual varsity-freshman teams got a taste of each other with the more-experienced varsity team coming out on top of the frosh team, 91-65.

With an estimated crowd of about 300 spectators on hand, the game seemed to get off to a very slow start as both teams seemed to have their share of bad passes and turnovers which neither teams could capitalize on.

The first quarter also gave the crowd a look at the new 1972 basketball rules regarding fouls made in the start of the first quarter.

The rule now states that the first six team fouls committed against each team goes to the sideline to come back into play instead of the usual free-throw shot for each penalty. On the seventh team foul the player then shoots the free throw.

This new rule didn't seem to have any bad effects for either team as the second quarter got underway. The varsity started capitalizing on the Colts' mistakes. Bad passes by the frosh team were usually picked up and scored on. But this didn't stop the Colts as they kept coming back each time with the help of excellent play-making and dribbling by freshman guard Paul Ratto, along with the superior shooting of guards Gale Leage forward Dave Erickson.

At the half the score stood at 35-29 with the varsity controlling the lead but the frosh team was not that far behind.

Individual scoring for the frosh was again Erickson with eight and Leage with six. Bob Jennings and Lamar Anderson had the same individual scoring with eight and six.

The personal fouls are what hurt the Colts as Leage already had four personals and Chris Simmons had three, keeping the frosh guard on and off the bench in the second half.

From the very start of the second half the vets seemed to come alive defensively as they put on a scoring drive led by the tough backboard handling and clutch shooting of Jennings, who netted 20 points, taking scoring honors as high man for the match.

The Mustangs then made some key steals and points. This made it hard for the Colts to catch up as they had two of their top men on and off the bench in foul trouble.

James Coleman also had a good night for the more experienced varsity, scoring eight points for the winning effort. Lamar Anderson, Rick Reed and John Parker also had eight points a piece for the vets along with junior guard Pinky Williams' six.

For the frosh the big scorer was forward Erickson with 14 points to lead the frosh scoring. Leage had a good night even though the home-town freshman had foul trouble, scoring 13 points for the losing effort. Forward Simmons and sophomore center Chip Weasberg each had nine points for the frosh.

The varsity team will be starting their regular season on November 28 at Cal State Hayward.

The frosh will also begin their season on November 28 at Taft Junior College.
