School is more than just books

by MIKE CONWAY

The school colors are blue and gold, the student government president has first meeting jitters and the talk on campus is on who is going to be elected Homecoming King and Queen. Avila School is in session for Spring Quarter.

Shunning the label "mentally retarded" and all the associated connotations, the Functional Living Program for developmentally disabled adults at Avila School in Avila provides people with more than just a place to spend the day. As the name implies, the teachers attempt to help these disabled adults function in a world that has ostracized them for so long.

Right now the big interest at Avila is in the Special Olympics. Most of the 33 students are going to participate in the Olympics with those who aren't in the games busy organizing themselves into cheerleaders, complete with yells. Their joy is evident.

"I'm going to be a cheerleader," one coed beamed. "I've always wanted to be one."

Wearing the Avila School sweatshirt and blue shorts, she and her six companions will root their team on to a hoped-for victory. Sitting next to them, dressed in their royal robes and regal crowns, will be the winners of the Homecoming King and Queen contest.

But like any other school Avila has its problems, too.

"We need more volunteers out here," said Greg Zaller, the student volunteer coordinator. "It's a real problem. We have a lot of projects we'd like to do, but we don't have enough people."

There are four volunteers at Avila now but Zaller would like to see about 20. He pointed out that

Archies offer print service

"Your imagination is the only limit on what you can do with the materials we have," said fourth year Architecture student, David Brannon in reference to the print room.

Located on the second level of Engineering West, the School of Architecture and Environmental Design offers through its print room a variety of services to Cal Poly students ranging from quality prints to simple hole punching.

SCARAB, the national Architecture society to which Brannon belongs, runs the print room as a service project. It is a non-profit service, said Brannon, and the small prices charged are used towards repairing the machines and replacing paper.

The printing service allows a student a choice of four colors of paper and four types of mylar, a plastic material, on which to run his print. The only charge is for the materials involved and students "will save money by doing their own work," said Brannon.

Other services include a xerox machine equipped for two-sided copying, a book binding machine for notebooks and reports, opaque projectors available for outside use, holepunchers, paper-cutters and staplers.

Presently, the print room offers students dry mounting for their photographs.

The print room is open on Monday thru Friday, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday and Thursday nights from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

For Poly Royal, SCARAB will let people run a small print at no cost to acquaint them with the service. Brannon expects a lot of visitors to the print room at Poly Royal this year.

Nixon's confidential communications on the matter and found that "the words are different but the end result was the same as in public statements."

On Capitol Hill, Jackson called the White House explanation "obviously not satisfactory." He demanded disclosure of "the specific language of the communications" between Nixon and Saigon officials.

Shortly after Nessen's news conference, Ford conferred with a group of congressional leaders, including Anderson.

"We were assured that there are no private, off-the-record assurances on the part of this government to the government of South Vietnam" regarding the 1973 Paris accords, Anderson told reporters.

He said Ford assured the congressmen specifically that there was no commitment for U.S. military intervention under any circumstances.

Housing head is announced

by Mary Anne LaPointe

The assistant dean of students Bob Timone, announced Tuesday the appointment of the new Cal Poly off-campus housing coordinator.

Walt Lambert, currently a sales manager for KSLY, KUNA FM, will assume the newly created position on Wednesday, April 16. Lambert will be responsible for making contacts in the community in regards to student housing. Timone said. He will also educate landlords and students what is expected in a model lease Timone said.

Prior to working as a sales manager, Lambert was the manager of Tropicana Village in San Luis Obispo. Currently he is also the chairman of the Human Relations Commission and a member of the City Housing Task Force. He has worked in the field of student housing for the past three years.

The new off-campus housing coordinator said his first step will be to take a survey to find out what housing is available in San Luis Obispo. "I want to come up with some answers for the students," he said.

"I plan to talk with the city officials to see if there is any housing construction plans for the near future," Lambert said. He said he will also speak with developers about their plans for housing.

Lambert sees his position on the Human Relations Commission as an aid to his new position.

"The commission gets to the bottom of the housing problems. It should be a direct tool to help off campus housing," he said.

Lambert says there are communication problems between tenants and landlords. It will be his responsibility to help bridge that gap, he said.

Timone said Lambert will be paid by the state until July 1.

"We are uncertain about state funding after July for this position," Timone said. "Assuming that the state can no longer support the position, we hope the ASI can pay the salary for one year," he said.

"Lambert is a super choice," Timone said. "He has been involved in city government positions involved with housing. The position is almost tailor made for him," he said.

Lambert, a 1962 graduate of California State University, Long Beach, received his bachelor's degree in sociology and minored in Education. He is married and has an 11 year old daughter.

Evangelist harangued by crowd

"No student has the right to think right or to do right before he knows Jesus Christ. He needs to know Him to value everyone and everything equally," claims "Holy" Hubert Lindsey.

"Holy" Hubert spoke Wednesday to a large jeering crowd in the University Plaza. Lindsey, dressed in plaid pants, red checkered shirt, white belt, brown buckskin shoes, a multi-colored tie and carrying the "New Testaments and Psalms," waved his fist at several people and verbally attacked everyone in the audience who let his presence be known to him. He also attacked many commonly held Christian views. As one student said, "he looked like an old, red-faced Christianity peddler."

Lindsey, author of "Bless Your Dirty Heart," yelled "The drunkard loves his wine bottle more than God. The student loves his books more than God", to the crowd.

His basic philosophy is that "All men are fallen and only through Jesus Christ can you get back to God. Also God will never use you until you open up your heart to Jesus Christ and tell God you accept Jesus Christ, you are not saved until then." At this point several students in the audience commented that he was wrong and wasn't saved.

With Lindsey were Ray Chrisholm, Ron Lopes and John Moe. Lindsey said "No one group sponsored us but Campus Crusade knew we were coming to speak". Someone knew, as there was a small billboard in the plaza with "Holy" Hubert Lindsey advertised with such slogans as

Hope seen for HEP

There may be space on campus suitable for conversion into faculty offices that was overlooked by administrative officials according to Fred Heaton, SAC representative from the School of Architecture and Engineering.

The discovery of possible available space could free the air conditioning lab for continued use by the High School Equivalency Program (HEP). HEP is scheduled to be evicted by July 1, 1975, so that the facility can be turned into faculty offices.

Heaton discovered two metal storage buildings behind the fire station that had been used in the South Pacific in World War II.

Both buildings contain furniture belonging to residence halls, some of which may be used in Tenaya Hall when it is opened to students next fall.

Douglas Gerard, executive dean in charge of facilities planning, says he would be "extremely surprised" to find "surplus space rattling around," but he would check into the possibility raised by Heaton.

"Almost anything is possible," said Gerard in response to the idea that persons interested in sparing HEP could donate their labor to remodel the storage buildings and turn them into faculty offices.

Private agreements denied by President

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Ford assured Congressmen Wednesday that no "private agreements" exist between the United States and South Vietnam, Rep. John Anderson, R-Ill., said after a conference with Ford.

Anderson's summary appeared to sharpen the White House response to Sen. Henry M. Jackson's charge that the United States entered into "secret agreements" with Saigon in an apparent effort to induce it to sign the Paris peace accords.

In the first White House response to that charge, press secretary Ron Nessen disclosed earlier Wednesday that President Richard M. Nixon had confidentially promised Saigon the United States would "react vigorously" to any major Communist violations of the peace accords.

Nessen stressed these confidential assurances merely reflected public U.S. policy, often stated by Nixon. Nessen said he had read

Center aids children

Head Start is a program that assists in the social development of children from families below the federal poverty line.

Primarily, Head Start orients its program toward the development of positive self-concept in the children. Individualized attention is given according to the need of the child.

The parents have a lot of input into the curriculum, said Miss Jorgine Allan, head of the Head Start center on this campus.

The program receives 20 per cent of its funds through the community and donations. The other 80 per cent comes through the department of Health Education and Welfare.

The Head Start center is located between the Health Center and President Kennedy's house, in a building donated by Cal Poly. The center has been operating there for several years.

Six volunteers work at the center with 15 boys and five girls. The children are there for three hours a day from 12:15 p.m. to 3:15 p.m. and are served lunch during that time.

"At least three volunteers are needed each day. The ideal ratio is one instructor to three children," said Miss Allan. There is a need for volunteers and Miss Allan stressed that men are needed as much as women.

Bob Cox Vietnam war: 'a bitter pill'

Somebody, I don't remember who, once said: "War is hell." He was right, and in more ways than one.

The events of the last few weeks in Southeast Asia have been hell on the minds and consciences of an entire country, the United States of America. Lord knows they shouldn't be.

Vietnam will probably go down in history books as the greatest mistake the U.S. ever made.

It cost somewhere in the range of $150-200 billion, or maybe even more. Who really knows?

More than 56,000 American men never saw their homeland again; least not alive. Another quarter of a million came back with Purple Hearts, and a lot of them with lifetime disabilities. No one really knows how many came back with mental problems, habits to drugs, or just back to broken lives.

Another 1,300 (or so) haven't come back, been declared dead, or been listed as captives.

It's kind of sad and sickening to sit here and watch the South Vietnamese Army crumble and its government do nothing but accuse the United States of failing to keep its word.

After all this country did all the sacrifices the American people made, in the name of patriotism and freedom; its pretty tough to watch it all go down the drain. And that's where the South Vietnamese government is headed. The only question is: How soon?

Where do we go from here? What do we do now?

Personally, and I think in the minds of many, many Americans, the answer is not a whole lot.

It's for sure we don't need to reintroduce combat troops. I hope we finally learned our lesson. Most military men since World War II have warned against getting involved in Asian wars. Now we know why.

And I'm not very high on handing out a few billion more taxpayer dollars in military aid. After seeing the South Vietnamese leave behind their artillery, tanks and aircraft, and lose three-fourths of the country in the process, I think it's a little late for more Vietnamization.

The time has come to face reality. The South Vietnamese government cannot hold on much longer, even with mass infusions of aid. And even if it does, for how long? Six months, six years? Can we afford to prop it up forever?

Also by throwing in still more weaponry and other materials of war, we would just prolong the agony of the people of Indochina have been suffering ever since World War II and even before that. Maybe, if we let things alone, the Vietnamese peoples can work out some solution of their own.

We could try and encourage a negotiated settlement, so the population laden areas of Saigon and the Mekong Delta will not suffer the ravages of all out war. The Viet Cong and North Vietnamese have talked of negotiations and coalition governments, but only if President Thieu is removed from the scene. And they can't be blamed, for he is and always has been, essentially an American puppet.

We can also continue to allow South Vietnamese orphans to be brought to this country for adoption. Many, if not most of these children are of mixed parentage—that is fathered by Americans, and are therefore not highly thought of by their own people. That's the reason many of them are orphans—their mothers abandoned them.

These kids would always be outcasts of society there, much more so I imagine than here. They are the debris of the American presence in Vietnam. Unwanted debris that can't just be abandoned. And with so many people in this country willing to adopt, well, why not?

There are those who are totally against the orphan airlift. To them I can only reply, better the money be spent on babies than bullets and bombs.

And hopefully, if the fighting comes to an end, maybe we can finally get the lowdown on those 1300 or so American fighting men, who are MIA's (missing in action). Some were known to be alive and captive at one time. Yet the North Vietnamese never listed them as dead, nor do they admit to holding them captive. Their families, and indeed all the American people deserve to know of their fate.

The time has come for this country to admit defeat in Vietnam, a bitter pill though it may be for the tough American pride to swallow. We made a horrendous mistake, let's not make it worse.

Now let us try and make the best out of a bad situation.

Musicale

A jazz and a barbershop quartet, along with the Men's and Women's Glee Club and two smaller vocal groups will be featured in Cal Poly's Home Concert April 12.

The 34th concert is under the sponsorship of the Music Department and the Music Board of ASI. The program will begin at 8 p.m. in the gymnasium of the Physical Education building.

Tickets, priced at $1 for students and children and $2 for adults, are available at the University Union and Brown's Music Store in San Luis Obispo. They are also being sold at the door on April 12 and from members of the performing groups.

WITH GOLD IN MIND

Avila School tries... but needs volunteers

Poly students can earn units for their work at Avila. Depending on the department and type of work done, credit can be earned for research papers, special problems and senior projects.

"One guy in Industrial Technology came out here and built a beer can crushing machine for our ecology center as his senior project," Zaller said.

Robin Weber, in charge of the Adult Basic Education at Avila elaborated on the kinds of volunteers needed. "Basically anyone, as long as they have some free time. We can use people in all majors. The other day we could have used someone out here to show some students how to water the garden right," Ms. Weber said.

"In Basic Education we need volunteers to help students one to one. We need people to show students how to make their numbers properly. We need them to help tutor students in reading at all different levels. We have two students here who want to get their high school diplomas and we need people to guide them through the process," Ms. Weber said.

Avila School has a number of programs to attain its goal of teaching the disabled adult to live on their own in the outside world.

Avila Snack Shoppe is run by the students on a profit sharing basis. The store not only teaches students how to handle money but it also teaches them how to assume responsibility.

Everyone participates in the student government. It plans activities, allocates funds, makes policy and iron out any personal disputes that may arise.

At his first meeting the new president had the same jitters that any newly elected official has but he overcame them. There wasn't much business besides that of the Special Olympics on May 9. At the meeting it was decided to elect the Homecoming King and Queen and to have cheerleaders.

Vocational education is a big part of the activities at Avila. In the sewing center students work on a variety of projects. At Christmas-time baby quilts were made by the students and sold as part of the profit sharing program. The present project is the construction of bike bags which will also be sold.

Out of this the students learn to make their own clothes. Their pride in their work was evident at the fashion show they held at the school.

The current excitement in the woodshop revolves around a three wheeled toy that propels itself by wind power, like the Southern California sand sailers. The prototype tested well at the Avila Beach proving grounds.

Tentatively called the "Sand Scooter", Larry Steffen, the Director at Avila, has dreams of it becoming a fad "as big as the Hula-Hoop."

The woodshop also produces bi-planes, boats and trucks which the school sells in kit form. But again, the lack of volunteer help has hindered production.

"We need people here to show the students how to operate the power tools. We could also use an electrician," Steffen said, pointing out the extension cord that snaked across the room. Because there is no outlet, the cord provides all the electricity to the workshop area.

All kinds of help is needed to give the Avila students a chance of making it in the outside world. If you can spare a few hours a week or if you can only help out once in a while supervising on outings like the Special Olympics it would benefit everyone.

If you are interested, contact Greg Zaller at 546-2476 or in the Student Community Services Office in the University Union Rm. 217 or call Avila School at 595-7393.

"I wanted to get involved in something positive," Greg said.
Don't you?

Camera buffs exhibit work

An exhibit of 55 photographs made by students in the Journalism Department is on display this quarter in the lobby of the Vista Grande Restaurant.

Students in the advanced, creative and color photography classes shot the photographs. Mrs. Helen Kelley, photography instructor of the three classes explained the techniques studied and applied by the students.

She said the emphasis in the advanced class is on the techniques used to produce quality black and white photographs that best communicate the photographer's statement.

In the color photography class, the emphasis is placed upon reproducing color prints, and the color of the original subject matter.

Most of the academic scholarships awarded at Cal Poly go to majors in the School of Agriculture, but more money is spent on athletic scholarships than on academic scholarships.

According to Mary Eyer, assistant director of the Financial Aid Office, between 250 to 350 students are receiving scholarships at Cal Poly.

"This doesn't include the students who have gotten them from outside sources, which might be as many students or even more," she said.

Out of those students, 127 of them receive Wrasse Scholarships of $500 a year. Mrs. Eyer said the primary requirement for the Wrasse Scholarships is that the student be enrolled in some field of agriculture.

The creative photography class stresses upon choosing and mastering creative techniques that will allow the photographer the greatest amount of self-expression and communication through abstract presentation.

The exhibit was designed and set up by Mrs. Kelley and Vik Savara, Coordinator of Marketing and Production for El Corral Bookstore. Kenneth Chen, David Abrahams and Mitri Muna, Cal Poly students.

Funds available

The total amount of academic scholarship money available for this school year was $125,000, she said. Of that, $63,000 came from the Wrasse fund.

Approximately $150,000 was available for athletic scholarships this year. Mrs. Eyer said the money was distributed to about 150 students.

(Director of Athletics Victor Buccola is in charge of athletic scholarships. Because of other business he couldn't provide accurate figures at this time.)

The funding for athletic scholarships is independent of the academic scholarships. Mrs. Eyer said the Mustang Boosters provide the scholarship funds through individual donations.

Academic scholarships are funded by various means, she said. Some are memorial funds, some are from individuals, some come from service groups, and some are financed through companies. All of the contributions are tax deductible, she said.

"The maximum amount we have for scholarships is $600, although we might have had one or two for $1,000 this year," Mrs. Eyer said that while the minimum amount awarded is $50, the average is $500.

The Scholarship Committee, headed by Mrs. Eyer, determines the eligibility of scholarship applicants." Four basic requirements must be met in order to get a scholarship, she said.

The requirements vary with each scholarship but they depend on the person's grade point average, financial need, extracurricular activities, and a written statement about their educational goals.

Although the deadline for next year's scholarships was April 1 interested students are encouraged to contact the Financial Aid Office in the Administration Building, Rm. 107 or call 546-2927.

Textbook

Any student who has a used copy of the textbook for Conservation 311, "Environmental Problems," by Mason and Folkert, has a market of about 50 student who are enrolled in the class this quarter.

Students who wish to sell their books can contact the teacher, Dr. Lee Barclay, in Science C34, extension -2725. Students can also leave their telephone numbers on the book board in the University Union.

Desjarlais homer beats Gauchos

by JON HASTINGS

In perfect comeback fashion the varsity baseball team overcame a 2-0 deficit in the bottom of the sixth inning Tuesday to setback the UC Santa Barbara Gauchos 5-2.

Behind the heroics of outfielder Paul Desjarlais and some help from a controversial call in the top of the seventh inning, Berdy Harr's Mustangs avenged an earlier loss to the Gauchos and upped their season record to 21-8-1.

In the bottom of the sixth inning with the Mustangs trailing 2-0, Desjarlais hit a three run home run to propel them into a lead they never relinquished. Centerfielder Mike Ongarato had walked and first-baseman Ted Bailey had singled to set the scene for Desjarlais' game-deciding blast.

In the top of the seventh inning with the Mustangs holding on to a slim 3-2 lead, Gaucho shortstop Tom Conklin led off with a single and after one out first-baseman Randy Robinson singled Conklin to third.

With runners on first and third, Mustang shortstop Ozzie Smith fielded a sharp ground ball and flipped it to second-baseman Jim Conlan forcing Robinson, who promptly ran over Conlan in a rather unpolite fashion.

Everyone in the meager crowd of 50 thought the Gauchos had tied the score, since Conklin had long since crossed the plate. But umpire Alan Ashbey had a different version.

He ruled the runner out at first base on the grounds that Robinson had interfered with Conlan in an illegal manner. This erased the apparent tying run and the Gaucho bench descended upon the umpires.

Ashbey contended that Robinson did not make an attempt to slide into the base and that his only objective was to maul Conlan. After a five minute rhubarb the game resumed.

The Mustangs added some insurance runs in the eighth inning when Desjarlais drove in Ongarato with a long sacrifice fly. Then leftfielder Dave Fowler doubled home Bailey who had singled. Fowler collected three hits on the afternoon and he is hitting over .520 on the year.

The Mustangs used three pitchers Bud Papadakis, Dave Ehrhardt, and Gorman Helmueller. The three combined to scatter nine hits in nine innings.

Papadakis coughed up a run in the second inning when Conklin and Robinson put together back to back doubles. Ehrhardt, who picked up the win, allowed the only other Gaucho run when Conklin greeted him with a tape measure shot in the fourth. Heimueller registered a save as he worked the last three innings with out allowing a run.

Harr said that he was very pleased with the win since UCSB is a division I school. Cal Poly is currently ranked number two in division II behind Florida Southern.

Friday the Mustangs will host Pomona for a CCAA crucial and Saturday they will play the same Pomona team in a doubleheader.

Harr is expected to start pitching ace Bruce Freeberg on Friday and then comeback with Sam Solis and freshman ace Dave Pencille on Saturday.

Sunday the Mustangs will play host to a powerful Santa Clara team at San Luis Obispo stadium.

Mustangs confirmed best defensive squad

The National Collegiate Sports Services final statistics have confirmed Coach Ernie Wheeler's basketball team as the number one defensive team in the nation this past season.

The Mustangs also finished No. 2 in team free throw accuracy for NCAA Division II schools. Poly made 412 of 526 free throw opportunities for .783 accuracy. The national leader was Alabama State with .807 efficiency—456 of 565.

Defensively, the Mustangs limited opponents to an average of 61.2 points per game.

The Mustangs finished with a 15-11 record, the same as defensive runner-up Cal State Bakersfield which held foes to 61.4 points per game.

Two other members of the California Collegiate Athletic Association also finished among the top 20 teams in scoring defense. League and Western Regional champion U.C. Riverside finished fifth with a 64.8 allowance and Cal Poly Pomona, twentieth, yielded 68.7 points per game.

Only CCAA member that did not rank among the nation's top 20 defensive teams was Cal State Northridge. The Matadors were close, however, giving up just 70.6 points per game.

A year ago Wheeler's team ranked No. 3 nationally in NCAA Division II scoring defense. The Mustangs yielded an average of just 59.9 points in 1973-74 to rank behind Steubenville, O., at 51.4 and University of Wisconsin Green Bay at 55.6. Neither Steubenville, or Green Bay finished in the top 20 this season.

The Mustangs were one of only five teams to rank in the top 20 nationally in scoring defense in both 1973-74 and 1974-75. The others with 1974-75 figures first were:

Philadelphia Textile fourth at 64.3 and seventh at 62.3; C.W. Post seventh at 65.9 and 11th at 64.2; North Dakota ninth at 66.4 and 17th at 66.8; and Kings (Pa.) fourteenth at 68.0 and fourteenth at 66.1.

Women rackets host first match this Saturday

The Cal Poly Women's Tennis Team will host their first home match of the season this Saturday, April 12. They will face Pomona Pitzer at 1 p.m.

Terry Poor, the spokesperson for the team, feels Pomona Pitzer should be a good competitor.

"It should be a good match since both teams are pretty evenly matched," she said.

Cal Poly has a 2-3 record in the Southern California Women's Intercollegiate Tennis League.

The Cal Poly lineup:

The match will be held at the courts behind the Men's Gym and the public is invited to attend.

"God loves you," "Repent," "You don't have to die," "Christ has risen" and "Christ is here."

When questioned on Lindsey's controversiality, Chisholm said, "One reason is because of his views on homosexuals. A homosexual is running away from guilt and he condemns the heterosexual. There is also a high suicidal rate in the homosexual's society. And they aren't gay in the sense of being happy as no homosexual is totally happy."

Lindsey often turned his back on those who questioned him, failing to satisfy their questions. He did get support from a few spectators.

Lindsey has traveled all over the United States and has visited over 500 college campuses preaching the gospel. He's told his audiences "My church is the body of Christ, God the Creator and Redeemer." "I am connected with no one church. My group is self-supporting and we work with anyone that names Christ or represents Christ."

He has been hospitalized several times by those who have disagreed with him. Lindsey told the audience, "I love the man who broke my jaw, I love the man who hit me. I love the people who have put me in the hospital."

Lindsey now operates a Bible teaching center in Berkley, California.
