Peer help now going in center

Peer counseling, under the direction of two professional facilitators from the Health Center, is available to Cal Poly students Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Health Center lobby.

Ken Ruggles, one of the 22 student counselors involved in the project, said peer counseling is done by students with other students. "We can offer something immediate there eight hours a day," he said, explaining that professional counselors are not always available when students need help.

Jeri Waite, another student counselor, said peer counseling was developed at Cal Poly because of the concern over the number of student suicides that have occurred during the past year.

Ruggles said the problems that students have are often derived from authority figures (parents, teachers) and that talking to an older counselor is threatening to the student.

"I would rather go in and talk to someone my own age if I have a problem," Ms. Waite said.

All peer counselors are juniors and seniors drawn from various schools in the university, Ms. Waite said.

"We're students who have gone through what they're going through, so there is no reason to be afraid to come and talk to us," Ruggles said, adding that it is not necessary for students to give their names when they seek peer counseling. "No records are kept," he said.

The 22 peer counselors went through a three week preparatory course to learn about confidentiality and problem solving techniques before the peer counseling began on April 28.

"We don't profess to be professionals," Ruggles said. "Our purpose is to solve someone's immediate problem."

Lt. Governor gives talk tonight to FFA

Lieutenant Governor Mervyn M. Dymally will address the banquet of the California Association of Future Farmers of America, today in Chumash Auditorium of the University Union.

The FFA are here for their 47th annual convention. More than 1,000 FFA members from all over the state compete for achievement awards, state farmer degrees, and chapter awards.

Some 1,800 FFA members will participate in the state judging finals on the Cal Poly campus Saturday, May 10.

At the convention FFA members will hear such speakers as the presidents of Arizona and Oregon Association FFA, Ken Lockhart, student representative on the State Board of Education; Peter Giacomini, national FFA Missy Green, spokeswoman for the Women's Collective, pauses from her work to wonder if their group will obtain office space they desire to help clear up student problems.

Collective fights sexism

by ANNE ZERRIEN

"Many women students have had professors make passes at them, ranging from subtle hints to the extreme," says a staff member of the Counseling Center who prefers to remain anonymous to protect the confidentiality of her clients.

"This hasn't happened to just a few, but to hundreds of women," says the counselor. "It has caused women to drop out of classes or worry about how their grades will be affected. The sad thing is that although this has happened so many times, women aren't talking about it. Right now there's no place for them to go."

A woman Biochem major reports she was driven out of Animal Science by the "sexist jokes and putdowns I encountered in the classroom."

Complaints like these have prompted the Women's Collective to set up a grievance procedure for women to report discriminatory experiences, with double objectives of helping the individual women, and defining the extent of sexism on campus so that the university can begin dealing with the problem.

In addition to fielding complaints about specific incidents of sexism, Women's Collective is also handling complaints about the curriculum.

Missy Green, a spokeswoman for Women's Collective, says that both women and men are being victimized by such things as "archaic lecture material" that perpetuates traditional sexual stereotypes without offering information about alternatives.

An example cited by Ms. Green is the course titled "Dating, Courtship, and Marriage". She feels Cal Poly should also offer a course that would specifically define and discuss alternatives to the dating-courtship-marriage syndrome, since traditional lifestyles are now undergoing changes.

Missy sees the grievance procedure as a way for students to change sexist attitudes in the campus community.

"It is definitely an effort to change behavior, to help people

Discount card deal possible

A merger of Cal Poly and Cuesta College discount card programs will be the major piece of business before the Student Affairs Council tonight.

SAC will meet at 7:15 p.m. in Rm 220 of the University Union.

According to SAC Chairman Mike Hurtado both institutions have been running separate discount programs with San Luis Obispo County merchants.

Cal Poly band hosts Modesto at benefit show

The Modesto Junior College Wind Symphony will perform a benefit concert today to help send the Cal Poly Symphonic Band to the International Youth and Music Festival in Vienna, Austria this summer.

The concert will begin at 8 p.m. in the Cal Poly Theatre. General admission tickets are $1.50 and $7.50 for students. Advance tickets may be purchased at Brown's Music and Premier Music Company in San Luis Obispo, and the Ticket Office in the University Union. A limited number of tickets will be available at the door.

Heralded as one of the nation's finest junior college bands, the Modesto Wind Symphony recently performed before the National Conference of the College Band Directors, National Association in Berkeley and will present two performances for the National Wind Ensemble Conference in May.

There is a need for people in the community to house members of the Modesto band today and to provide an evening meal and breakfast the following morning. Cal Poly's director of bands, William V. Johnson, said hosts will be given complimentary tickets to the performance. Anyone interested may reach Johnson by telephoning 546-2556 or 546-2607.

NBC official plans address at banquet

The National Broadcast Company's West Coast vice-president of public information, Henry (Hank) Rieger, will be the featured speaker when Sigma Delta Chi holds its annual banquet May 29 at Trader Nick's in Shell Beach.

Tickets for the dinner, scheduled to begin at 7 p.m., will be $4.95. Seafood cocktail, salad, roast beef, potatoes and vegetables will be served.

Rieger joined NBC in 1965 and assumed his present position in 1972. Prior to joining NBC he was employed by United Press International for 20 years. With UPI he served as bureau chief in Phoenix, Ariz., San Francisco, Los Angeles and as Southern California-Arizona manager.

Rieger's last position with UPI

However, fear of glutting the discount market with different discount card programs has prompted Cal Poly and Cuesta student governments to consider merging the programs.

This was tried a year ago but the joint effort ran into snags when Cal Poly learned that Cuesta students were getting their cards two weeks earlier than students here—giving them a jump on the discounts.

Cuesta students were also receiving their discount cards for free. Cal Poly students pay $1 for a card that offers similar discounts.

The new merger plan calls for tighter supervision of the distribution of Cuesta cards by their student government so that only one card will be given to students. This will eliminate a potential discount card black market, according to Hurtado.

The vice-president also said there is a possibility SAC will choose tonight to give the discount cards away for free at this campus. He said this would eliminate a profit for the ASI but provide students with a helpful service.

The only other important action facing SAC tonight will be the discussion of the tow-away policy at this university.

Hurtado said illegally parked autos have been subjected to possible tow-away for one full year and it is time to reevaluate this program.

He said the council should determine whether the tow-away policy has helped alleviate the parking crunch here.

Slides

The Thursday May 8 meeting of the Sierra Club will feature a slide presentation by Ralph and Florence Welles on "Twenty years in Death Valley."

The meeting will be in the fellowship hall of the Methodist Church at 1515 Fredericks Street in San Luis Obispo at 7:30 p.m.

Editor:

After reading Marji Nieuwama's "no-endorsement" editorial I feel I must respond to her claims on monetary expenditures.

I have not spent an "exorbitant amount of money" on my campaign. (Marji should have added that it was in her opinion). Each one of my signs, including the paint on it, cost about five ($5) dollars. The metal stakes supporting my signs were lent to me by my father and I have to return them immediately after the election. For Marji's sake this is what is commonly referred to as "maximization of available resources." How can she fault me for this?

In addition, Dan Lambert, a Cal Poly graphics art major, donated over 12 hours of his time in designing all my posters, buttons, and brochures. Perhaps that is why they look so professional. Likewise all my outdoor signs were carefully hand-lettered and hand-painted by students. I think that the quality of these signs is evidenced by the time and effort they put into making them. And I would further like to compliment them on the professionalism of these signs.

Marji also states that my "one concern" is for men's athletics... Yes it is one of my concerns, but certainly not the only one. I am concerned for every program on this campus. She apparently did not take the time nor the effort to read the brochure I gave her.

Finally, and for the record, I am putting myself through school with my own money and it is with my own money that I am running my campaign.

If time was money then Marji Nieuwama would be justified in saying I spent an exorbitant amount of money on my campaign. As evidenced by my platform I have taken the time to find out what the students want. How can she fault me for that?

If Marji had only taken the time and effort in researching her accusations of me, then I am sure she would have perceived things much differently. But as she did not even take the time to call me or talk to me whenever I was in her office, then I must conclude that Marji Nieuwama has effectively instigated the "mudslinging" she so emphatically stated she wanted to stay away from.

Furthermore if any student or administrator does question the fact that I have spent too much money, I urge you to call me and we will see just how my finances stand. Remember that I am the only person qualified to speak on just how much I have spent; not Marji Nieuwama, not the Mustang Daily, and not anyone who gave Marji her "information".

Rejection

Editor:

My attention has been drawn to a distinguishable candidate for ASI president; his slogan is "A student working for students," his leaflet states his personal qualities... "Experienced, Straight-forward, and Dynamic."

The candidate is Gregory M. Fowler. The aforementioned campaign claims are what I wish to address in this letter.

...Working for Students: He advocates altering student government so that it meets the needs of all students. Two years ago he was the foremost proponent of the status quo in refuting a column on the origins of the Women's Movement. His declarative statement at that time was that supporters of the Movement were "Hell-bent Bitch Wizards who have very little in common with American women taken in an aggregate fashion...who espouse the most ludicrous ideations." Now his stand is "Outspoken representation of the rights and interests of A.L.L. Cal Poly students..." Maybe because of the law of political survival Mr. Fowler would not verbally indicate that women had one particular place in society, but he has not shown that he now believes to the contrary.

For a candidate to emphasize "all students" then can we expect a revision of the old priority system that allocated funds away from cultural, programming of minority students, and equal facilities for women students. I have not seen such a ludicrous idea expressed by Mr. Fowler.

The ideas of the Women's Movement that upset Mr. Fowler are not new. Many movements for human rights express the same ideals. I feel a rejection of these goals means that he is a supporter of the oppressive status quo. The student movement that for all intensive purposes by-passed Cal Poly, sought an end to the exploitation of student labor on campus; one of Mr. Fowler's goals is "stronger working relations between student government and the administration." To build a strong relationship it is not advisable to challenge the status quo, and especially not to advocate any changes.

From my first-hand knowledge of his experience, straightforwardness, and dynamic personality I doubt Greg Fowler's ability to examine the status of women students, to show a sensitivity to the educational blockades, and to show initiative in advocating an end to discrimination.

Our education is not at stake with this campus election; it will prod along, the administrators will see to that. The stake is the quality of the educational process. We need advocates for change, not the status quo. I urge students to examine their educational interests and then scrutinize the candidates to see which one will best represent them.

O'Connor

Editor:

How much backbone does one need in order to be qualified to run for A.S.I. President? Obviously, working with the city in trying to alleviate the housing problem, being on the University Union Board of Governors, and being the A.S.I. Representative for City County Affairs doesn't seem to be enough for the Editor to consider that this is the type of backbone that we need in an A.S.I. President.

By not endorsing anybody because all five really didn't appeal to you is really a cop-out. Using your brains that God gave you, would show you that Kevin O'Connor is the most qualified of all the candidates running for the office.

How many times can any student go to the A.S.I. President's office with a problem and find him there? Posted office hours for all officers and SAC rep's is Kevin's goal for next year. How about an "Open Forum" for any student to go to with a problem? Kevin O'Connor has made that one of his most important goals. What a refreshing thought, being able to go to an Open Forum with a problem and not have to make an appointment with someone who will probably turn you over to someone else.

O'Connor is putting backbone in his statements where other candidates have been general instead of specific. That's the type individual I am going to endorse for A.S.I. President.

Hill

Editor:
Unfortunately, many people are as of yet undecided on who they'll support for ASI president. The problem is clear: although almost all the candidates have their strong points, they also have serious faults which in several cases outweigh these strong points.

Meanwhile, in the race for ASI vice-president, there is a difficult choice to make between two apparently outstanding candidates, Phil Bishop and Roland Hill are capable of handling the post with competence, and it's too bad that both of them can't serve us in this capacity.

However, my support goes to Roland, whom I believe to be more assertive of the two, a quality badly needed in a vice-president at this time. He has served the students of this campus well as director of the Legal Aid Office, as can be attested by those students who have utilized the office. Hill has the ability to work with people and administrators with whom he disagrees, and is not hindered (as many people are) by getting overly-emotional when doing so.

I am not in a position to guarantee that Roland will do the better job of the two, because I'm not that familiar with Phil Bishop. However, from what's been said and done by both candidates, and from my working with him in the past, I firmly believe that Roland Hill will serve the students of Cal Poly in the most progressive way possible, at a time when service is needed most.

Fowler

Editor:
I've had the opportunity in the last week to hear all of the five candidates for ASI President. I am supporting Greg Fowler for ASI President for one major reason, and I hope you'll think it over and do the same. Fowler is the only one of the five candidates who is talking about issues, and not personalities.

He thinks the structure of student government doesn't allow enough interaction and communication from the non-involved students. We have 14,000 students that ASI must represent and work for, yet student government's structure hasn't

Editor:
It is that time of year again to campaign for ASI positions. It is time for those of us who have been involved in student government, and also for those of you who are aware of the issues affecting the students on all levels, to be concerned enough to take a strong stand and actively participate to insure that the best candidates are elected. The President and the Vice-president of the ASI are the spokespersons for the student body as a whole. Thus, it is vital that the interest of the students be their top priority.

As a Student Affairs Council Representative, I've seen Mike

Defacing blasted

Editor:
As a concerned Cal Poly student I am very impressed with the manner in which a majority of Poly students have conducted themselves during these last days prior to voting.

I have no complaints with those students who do not wish to participate in the voting, but there is something that does upset me very much, that is the defacing of campaign billboards. Across the street from where I live I've noticed some election billboards torn into numerous pieces. Later I noticed another billboard with spray painted initials all over it.

There were other election signs all around but they were not defaced for some reason. I for one am appalled by the type of conduct perpetrated by the small minority of Poly students. This kind of conduct makes the entire university look bad.

Does this small majority of Poly students really believe that they can control my vote by doing something so immature as defacing billboards? These kinds of personal campaign tactics can only make me reverse my voting position. Any candidate that lowers himself with these types of tactics will never get my vote and hopefully will not get the votes of other concerned students. I further believe that a majority of the voting students will reject him as well as his campaign tactics.

I do not know whether this editorial will have an effect on these misguided students, but I hope it will spark a little thought in you next time you see a defaced election billboard. Democracy was created by man, it can be destroyed by man also.

From swarm to new home

by MARK MARIETTA

When Eleanor McMillan found a bee swarm in her yard she called a friend who used to be a commercial beekeeper. Eventually she found herself talking to Richard King.

King, a Ornamental Horticulture major, is the instructor of the beekeeping class at Cal Poly. For a lab he took his class out to catch the bee swarm.

"There's nothing to it," said King as he shook the swarm off a branch into a hive. Stung twice, King quietly said, "These bees are being kind of aggressive."

While the class, a few students protected by heavy gloves and a pith helmet with a screen on it, examined the new hive, King said the bees will start building immediately.

A student asked why some bees were still on the branch. King said they were scouts and would find the hive by the scent radiated by bees fanning their wings outside the hive.

When a colony gets overcrowded the old queen and a swarm of bees leave the colony to start a new one, King said. The swarming season runs from mid-March through June, he said.

There are 52 people in the class this quarter and 26 were on the add list. "Until recently there was not much interest in beekeeping," said King.

Ryan Wood, 19, Electronic Engineering major, said, "I got interested in bees about four years ago when I took a class at private school."

Mike Chambers, 20, Architecture major, said he got interested in bees by reading some books about them. "I'd like to start a few colonies of my own. They're pretty valuable," Chambers said.

Lyle Bettger (RIGHT) begins to cut down a bee swarm of unusual size that has formed on a tree branch. After cutting it down he carefully places it into a new hive box (BELOW LEFT) where a new hive will take hold in a few days (BELOW RIGHT). Once inside the box the new bees explore their new home (EXTREME BELOW). Photos by Gil Rocha

Poly student feels the scuba bug bite

by MIKE CONWAY

Everybody asks Tim Ford why he decided to take scuba diving lessons of all things, and he's tired of it.

"It's really no big deal," the former SAC rep said. "I'm not crazy, I don't do anything dangerous."

Like many other water freaks Ford has caught the scuba bug, but unlike them he won't see the ocean floor.

Tim Ford is blind, but not helpless. In fact, when the class takes the final exam Ford will have the advantage.

"It's a blindfold test," his scuba instructor, Mike Francis said. "We stuff their masks with paper and spin them around and all sorts of things. They're supposed to know where everything is by feel alone. Tim's been doing that all along."

To help Ford learn diving by touch he was paired up with Ray

Finch, the assistant diving instructor. While the rest of the class watched the poolside equipment demonstrations Finch guided Ford's hands along the corresponding valves, knobs and parts. Minutes later Ford had connected the regulator, put the tank in its pack, turned on the air and disappeared under the water.

Why scuba diving?

"I like the feeling of swimming underwater, the freedom," Ford said. "And I'm thinking about going down to Mexico with some friends. I figure that some of those small, protected coves and bays ought to have a lot of nice things to pick up off of the bottom."

Ford and his 14 sighted classmates practice diving drills in the waters of the Morro Bay High School pool some nights.

Feminists file sexist charges

face their conscious and unconscious biases, and not an attempt to punish individuals.

"In some respects what we're advocating is student input into our curriculum. We're going to have to live with what we learn, and it would be nice to be able to make a choice between lifestyles, rather than being forced into one alternative."

Right now the Women's Collective is looking for a permanent location on campus where grievances could be received and processed.

Ms. Green tried unsuccessfully to interest the Counseling Center in performing this function.

George Mulder, Director of Counseling and Testing, says he is philosophically in favor of the grievance procedure, but he doesn't feel the Counseling Center should serve as the collectors of data which might jeopardize its status as the "neutral" party to whom people can bring their problems.

"I don't want women who are fighting for women's rights to feel like we don't care about them," said Mulder. "What I'm really concerned about is good mental health. I don't want to get caught in the middle of a cause so that we become ineffective in helping people," he said.

Ms. Green conjectures that the Counseling Center might also be "trying to protect its own ass" in the event that the file of grievances might someday form the basis for legal action against the university, a step she hopes will not prove necessary.

Two schools which have been specifically named in complaints so far—the School of Agriculture and Natural Resources and the School of Architecture and Environmental Design.

John West, associate dean of Agriculture is acutely aware of the law prohibiting discrimination on the basis of race, creed, color, sex or national origin.

He says opportunities for women in agriculture are increasing, especially with the growing shortage of teachers in the field.

In response to charges of sexist incidents in the school of agriculture, West says, "I would at least admit that such a thing could have happened, but I don't

Letters

Tim Hayes

Greg Fowler

Editor:

For the past week, there have been numerous pamphlets, flyers, and other paraphernalia passed around supporting candidates for ASI vice president.

All of the candidates claim they have qualifications, experience, and student involvement. Who are they trying to fool?

I have seen only one candidate that can honestly say he has all three of these characteristics and that is Tim Hayes. Tim has been a SAC rep, vice chairman of SAC, chairman of three committees (Food, HEP, and AB 3116 Finance), member of Engineering and Technology, member of ASI off-campus Housing Coordinating Committee, officer of ASME, and student representative to ME department faculty meetings. Tim Hayes has more qualifications and experience than the other two candidates put together.

But now let's look at the other two candidates, Roland Hill and Phil Bishop. Neither Roland Hill nor Phil Bishop have ever been a member of SAC. I would like to know how either of them could say they are qualified when the main job of the vice-president is being chairman of SAC.

Phil Bishop claims to have qualifications and experience. Phil points out that his most experience has been working with ASI President Scott Plotkin. If this is the only experience needed to be vice-president, there must be 100 other students who would qualify for the job.

Roland Hill also claims to have qualifications and experience. His highlight, among being involved in student and environmental affairs, is director of ASI legal aid. This hardly seems like qualifications for someone who could be chairman of the governing body of all student affairs.

So, I urge all of you, to look behind the facade of gleaming smiles, friendly handshakes, and colorful pamphlets, for the qualifications and experience that make an ASI vice-president. Vote for Tim Hayes.

Bill O'Hollaren

changed since the campus had only 8,000 students. Greg Fowler thinks more students than ever before need to be involved in all levels of ASI—and he means just that. He'll propose a committee of 14 students to advise, and after they've sampled student opinion, he will stick to their decision. Fowler wants power shared, because he thinks ASI is too top heavy, and too isolated.

He has said he wants to make the ASI president more responsive and responsible, and I believe him. Fowler has proposed a whole host of committees and groups and changes which can do this.

I want my ASI to be open next year to more students. I want it to be more credible and responsible, and because I want an experienced president who attacks issues and not personalities, I'm supporting Greg Fowler for ASI President.

George A. DeLange
Past ASI Finance Chairman

Mike Hurtado

Hurtado while Vice President, try to build strong bridges of communication among SAC reps—and the student body. Thus, the result is direct work and service for the students.

Qualification requirements for Roland Hill need not be stressed any longer because he is a man of heart. His experience as ASI Legal Aid Director, and involvement with Student Judiciary for 3 years in student affairs shows that he speaks and acts on what he knows best.

I know that the commitment of Mike Hurtado and Roland Hill is a commitment to "human values" and "progressive politics". They speak politics of change, not politics of the status quo! My full and sincere support is for Mike Hurtado and Roland Hill.

Student likes feel of diving

By far the most intriguing drill was a variation on "buddy breathing," a technique where two divers share the same tank of air.

The pair of divers are supposed to drop over the edge of the shallow water into the 12 foot deep diving tank, switch the onto the other "buddy's" back and swim over to the far side of the pool, all the while "buddy breathing."

Ford and his "buddy" Finch disappeared into the swirling mass of air bubbles left by the other divers. After a few minutes of watching the bubbles rise Instructor Francis noticed that a pair of divers had already made it to the other side. He called out to them to find out who it was. It was Ford and Finch.

When the eventual "Everybody out of the pool" came, Ford reluctantly swam to the side of the pool. He took apart his gear and laid it neatly on the deck. After he climbed out of the pool he gathered up all his gear and headed for the warmth of the locker room.

Tim Ford looked like any other Poly student taking diving lessons at night school.

Rainier Sightings Spread to North Dakota

Zap, North Dakota; Dr. Heinrich Tschutter of the North Dakota Citizens' Committee on Carbonated Phenomena displays an authenticated photograph of a Mountain Fresh Rainier taken recently near Zap, North Dakota. "This time there is no doubt," said the indefatigable MFR tracker, "MFR's are proliferating in pockets throughout the Great Plains." Although Mountain Fresh Rainiers are said to number in the millions throughout the Pacific Northwest, and observations have been made as far west as Hawaii, Dr. Tschutter's sightings at Zap are considered a major breakthrough. "There are additional reports of sightings in Williston, Minot, Bismarck, Dickinson, and New Leipzig," Dr. Tschutter told enthusiasts, "and I for one am delighted. They are fresh, friendly beings, golden in color with foam-like white tops. Apparently they are quite at home in North Dakota."

Sightings of Rainiers dropped precipitously in the Northwest during the years 1920 through 1933. This sighting near Svenson, Oregon, was viewed by several hundred people in 1934, when there was a flurry of MFR sightings.

Lambert eyes pro circuit

Tennis ace sheds shadow

by LARRY LaFOLLETTE

Upon graduating from high school Pete Lambert was seriously considering playing basketball throughout his college career. Coach Ed Jorgensen of the Cal Poly tennis team is pretty fortunate that he chose tennis as the sport of his future.

Pete Lambert is the number one man on this year's Mustang tennis team, but for years he has always felt he was number two with the motive to always try harder.

Pete, for the first time in a long time does not have his brother Dan playing on the same team.

"I enjoy playing more this year because it is difficult to play with two brothers around. The competition is always there for the younger brother to do as well as the older brother," says Pete.

"There's a strong psychological effect when you have your brother around. I'm playing better singles this year because my brother is no longer here and there is no pressure to perform better than him."

Pete began to play tennis because he knew he could receive a letter in high school for four years playing tennis.

Pete and Dan helped each other with each other's game by pointing out fallacies and playing each other for three or four hours each day.

"I began to play tennis because there is much more action in it compared to baseball. I became tired of playing baseball so I thought I'd try my hand at the game of tennis."

It was by accident that Pete came here to Cal Poly. He is a native of Arroyo Grande and from high school went to the Naval Academy at Annapolis, Maryland.

Six months later he found out that the military wasn't cut out for him. He came back home to Arroyo Grande and enrolled in Cal Poly. If he could do it over he might have gone somewhere else, but he is happy now that he decided to come to Cal Poly to pursue an education as well as a career in tennis.

Pete is a speech major and is starting to become active in the campus radio station, KCPR. He wants to become a disc jockey in the fall, playing tunes that have the mellow sound of rock.

"If I have a good year in tennis I would like to try pro-circuit for at least one year. This is my last year at Poly to play tennis but I still will have one year of schooling left before I graduate."

Pete feels that tennis has grown in popularity because people with money are beginning to advertise it to the point that everyone is beginning to show some interest in tennis.

"I occasionally watch professional tennis to try to improve my techniques. The pro know where to put the ball at certain times and by observing this you can learn to do the same thing when the opportunity arises in your own matches."

Pete is disturbed by the lack of competition in this year's conference.

"There is a tendency to become over-confident if we continue to run away from our matches like we did recently at Northridge."

"We won three matches by the scores of 6-0 and didn't have any difficult sets until we played Northridge and we beat them 6-3."

Because of this below average tennis being played by the rest of the conference, Pete thinks it will hurt the Mustang's chance at the National Finals in Colorado.

"Everyone could play average tennis and still win their matches. We won't be able to play average tennis at Colorado if we plan to make a run at the National title."

Outside league competition should keep the team in shape until they go to the nationals later on in the year.

For Pete, this year has to be one of personal success. This is the first year Pete no longer has to try harder because he is number two, and the long road to the top has been well worth the effort.

Mustang rackets ace conference foes in tourney

The Mustang tennis team this past weekend proved once again the weakness of the CCAA conference by defeating all four conference teams by scores of 9-0, 9-0, 8-1, and 7-2.

After speaking with Mustang ace Pete Lambert about how the team should have no problem with anyone in the conference the Mustangs coasted through the second of three round-robins with no more difficulty then they had in the first round-robin three weeks ago.

Lambert was victorious in all four matches, while second-seeded Jim Martin won three out of four, losing only to Northridge's Mike Novick, 7-5, 6-2 Saturday afternoon.

"Playing in a weak conference like ours is detrimental to your game because you can play sub-par tennis and still win your match," Lambert said.

"We need to play outside conference competition to stay sharp in order to be ready for the National Finals in early June."

The Mustangs unfortunately have two weeks off before resuming play, which will be the final round of conference play.

The netmen will have to play among themselves for the next two weeks and hope this can keep them sharp for the final round robin, which they will host May 15-17.

The top four Mustangs at the end of conference play will attend the finals in Pueblo, Colorado June 10-14.

Womens rackets finish second in SCWI finals

The Cal Poly Women's Tennis team placed second in the tenth annual Southern California Women's Intercollegiate tennis league finals held at Cal State Northridge.

Twelve schools participated in the finals this past weekend as Cal State Bakersfield placed first.

The Mustangs' top seeded player, Roxie Lachman drew a bye in the first round of competition. The sophomore defeated A.J. Chapman from USC 7-5, 1-6, 6-4 in the second round.

Ms. Lachman advanced to the semi-finals where she was defeated by Cheryl Newbrough of Cal State Bakersfield 5-6, 6-7. Ms. Newbrough went on to place first in the finals.

Ruth Gilstrap, No. 2 player for Poly, won her first round against Kerry Hyman of UC Irvine 6-3, 6-1. The senior from Caruthers won her second round by a default from Debbie Miller of Cal State Bakersfield.

Ms. Gilstrap went on to play in the semi-finals where she defeated Susan Krause of Cal State Los Angeles 6-4, 3-6, 7-6.

She then advanced to the finals where she was matched against Ms. Newbrough. Ms. Gilstrap was defeated in the finals by score of 4-6, 1-6, giving her a second place in the tournament.

The doubles team of Jan McNabb and Nancy Meyer made it into the quarter finals after they defeated their opponents from Cal State Dominguez Hills 6-4, 6-4, and from UC Riverside 6-2, 6-2.

The duo were then defeated 7-6, 6-2 in the quarter finals.

The doubles team of Mary Ann Dudley and Kathy Merrell also made it into the quarter finals. The two Poly women defeated the doubles team from Cal State Los Angeles 6-3, 6-1 in the opening round. They were then defeated in the quarter finals by Marcia Wesesky and Kelly Burke of USC 1-6, 2-6.

The weekend's league finals wrapped up the season for the Mustangs.

True to form, Mustang ace Pete Lambert strides to reach a serve in recent action. The senior, who once considered a college career of basketball, is currently the number one tennis player in the CCAA.

personally know of any such incidents."

Dr. Evans, Associate Dean of Architecture and Environmental Design, was astounded to hear that there have been complaints of sexism within his school.

A new student organization called Women EnvironmentalDesigners (WE) believes that sexism definitely does prowl through the architecture jungle. "That's why we're organizing," says Pat Higgins, WE president.

Mary Avila, WE vice-president, says jokingly that it would take "20 hours" to describe the barriers women encounter in Architecture and Environmental Design.

A primary purpose of the organization is to provide encouragement and support for women students "in a profession dominated by men," and to open channels of communication between women students and the administration.

Meanwhile, Women's Collective is still looking for a permanent place to receive and process grievances, so they can continue their efforts to define and solve the problems of sexist discrimination on campus.

Missy Green explains her commitment to this task by saying, "Sisterhood says that my experience can happen to another woman, and I don't want that to happen. So I'm going to take action to prevent it."

Autocross

The Cal Poly Sports Car Club will present its final autocross of the year this Sunday on the Baseball Diamond parking lot (S-10).

Registration for the "Bottoms Up" autocross will be held from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at a cost of $3 per registrant.

Helmets and seatbelts will be required to compete for trophies and dashplaques.

For further information, contact Dane at 544-0944 or Steve at 543-7880.

John Madden

Big John returns

by JON HANTING

It is an old college custom to have some big name alumnus come back to the campus and speak at a banquet. In the case of Cal Poly alumnus John Madden, his name isn't the only thing that is big.

Madden, the large 6-2 coach of the Oakland Raiders, spoke at the annual spring awards banquet of the Cal Poly chapter of the California Association for the Health, Physical Education and Recreation Tuesday evening.

The 39-year-old Madden told a large Chumash Auditorium crowd that four qualities make a great pro football player.

"While having the unfortunate pleasure of coaching the Pro Bowl three out of the last five years, my coaching staff and I have noticed that all great players possess the same four characteristics," said Madden.

The former Cal Poly football and baseball star said toughness, dedication, intelligence, and pride are what make a great football player.

"When I say toughness, I don't mean bar room toughness, I mean the kind of toughness it takes to absorb punishment when you know it is coming," said Madden.

"Our quarterback (Oakland) Ken Stabler is the toughest guy on our team because he stands in there and takes shots when he knows they are coming.

Madden said Oakland wide receiver Fred Biletnicoff was the perfect example of a dedicated player.

"Fred works out twice a day every day of his life and he made himself into a great football player," said Madden.

Madden said the day of the dumb football player is over and intelligence is a key to success in football.

"With all the plays and audibles, a player has to be smart," said Madden.

Pride is the final quality of a great player and Madden said he thinks it is just a combination of all the other qualities.

"To be great you have to want to be the best and that is what separates the average players with the great ones," said Madden.

Madden also commented on coaching and he said a coach was as important in the pros as he is in junior high.

"I have coached at the junior high, high school, college, and professional levels, and coaching plays the same amount of importance in all of them.

When talking about coaching Madden is an authority. In six years as head coach of the Oakland Raiders he has won five AFC Western Division championships and compiled a phenomenal 766 winning percentage. He was the youngest coach in the NFL when he took over the Raiders in 1969.

Madden coached at Hancock JC in San Maria and San Diego State before moving up to the Raiders as an assistant in 1967.

Longtime friend of Madden and master of ceremonies for the CAHPER banquet Ed Zuchelli commented on Madden:

"Cal Poly has produced a lot of fine engineers and architects, but I don't know if it has ever produced a finer person than John Madden."

The Oakland Raiders have never won a Super Bowl championship and Madden said this could be their year. Win or lose, Madden has a big name, a big body and he is pretty big in the field of class too.

Coeds finish fourth in softball tourney

The coed softball team met some stiff competition over the weekend in a double-elimination tournament at Huntington Beach. The Mustangs split their four games, 2-2, finishing fourth in the eight team tourney.

Coach Mary Stullard's team played their first game at 1 p.m. Thursday and were blanked 4-0 by the University of Nevada at Reno.

Yvonne Carrillo pitched the first four innings and was relieved by Kim Graham.

Later the same day, the Mustangs came back to nip UC Berkeley 3-2. Ms. Graham notched the win.

Ms. Carrillo was the Mustang's big gun, going three for four and hammering a seventh-inning double to score Sherry Ferlita with the winning run.

On Friday, the Mustangs dumped UC Santa Barbara 8-6, before being annihilated by the same Reno squad 12-1. Ms. Graham pounded six hits in eight appearances for the day.

Cindermen results

The SLO-Town trackmen ignored a sloppy track to come up with a few outstanding performances Saturday at the San Jose Invitational.

Jim Shankel broke the school three-mile mark by 11 seconds, running a 13:48.2. But coach Steve Simmons isn't satisfied yet.

"I think Jim can pick up the pace a bit and possibly run in the 13:30's when he has to. It was a superior performance and he's still not in top shape.

All-American sprinter Clancy Edwards turned in another consistent performance placing second in both the 100 and 200 running 9.3 and a 20.3. Steve Williams ran a 9.2 and a 20.2 to capture both events.

Besides Edwards and Shankel, Ken Haagen, Jim Warrick, Randy Mysliver, Dave Marlow, Mike Lamb, Fraiture Sumpter, Bob Gordon, and Jim Roberts turned in encouraging performances according to Simmons.
