Women Making Inroads

A woman's place is in the courtroom,
And the operating room—
And the board room.
And engineering.

The cumulative effects of the women's movement are beginning to show up in what is probably the most critical area where women need to catch-up—the academic pursuit of careers which they have traditionally been left out of.

A survey conducted by UCLA and the American Council of Education, reported in the Los Angeles Times, revealed that nationally among new college freshmen (freshpersons?), one woman in six, or 16.9 per cent, is planning a career in law, medicine, business or engineering. The study reported that nine years ago the figure was 5.9 per cent.

The study also indicated the ratio of men to women planning to enter these four fields declined from 8 to 1 in 1966 to less than 3 to 1 this year.

The number of women choosing to study business rose from 3.3 per cent in 1966 to 10 per cent this year. Those choosing law increased from .7 per cent to 2.5 per cent.

Female freshmen selecting medicine and engineering rose from 1.7 per cent to 3.3 per cent and from .2 per cent to 1.1 per cent, respectively.

The individual percentage increases may appear slight in some cases, but the total still represents triple the number of women in those areas nine years ago. Today's college freshman was probably in fourth grade in 1966, and she is benefitting from the labor pains of the early years of the women's movement.

When today's fourth grader is ready for college she will be the benefactor of the trend being set by the freshmen of today who will be establishing themselves in their career.

The percentages may be small but they're growing. Each group of women opens the door a little wider for the ones who will be succeeding them.

It can't be done all at once but the study shows it is being done.

Another Viewpoint

Court Decision Says, Enough Is Enough

Just when you begin to despair of the Supreme Court's concern for the First Amendment, it strikes a blow for freedom of speech. The court overturned legislation enacted as a political reform with the best of intentions but with a chilling effect on free speech. This made the high court's decision doubly praiseworthy, possibly checking the excess of the post-Watergate political purists.

Struck down were major parts of New York State's Fair Campaign Practices Code, which sought to forbid "political subversion" by a candidate, political espionage, attacks based on race, religion or ethnic background, misrepresentation of a candidate's qualifications, of any candidate's position on political issues and of any candidate's party affiliation or party endorsement.

All of these are worthy ends but the means of achieving them are clearly unconstitutional excesses of reforming zeal.

It is possible that parts of California Proposition 9 may be affected by the court's ruling as well as fair campaign laws in 16 other states. This is not clear, since the Supreme Court merely affirmed the ruling of a lower court in an unsigned order. The decision was unanimous.

Dirty political tricks, and slanderous attacks—particularly those directed toward race, religion or ethnic background—are deplorable. But to attempt to legislate political purity is to invite repression. Who is to tell a candidate what he can or can't say? Only the people by their votes can do that.

The American tradition of political debate has always been robust, uninhibited and wide open. It should remain so.

Candidates and the electorate should regard campaign regulators and political rulemakers with a healthy suspicion. For sheer audacity and arrogance in this vein, you have only to turn to Common Cause, the "citizen lobby" which has demanded that all the presidential candidates subscribe to its campaign code.

Student Butts Into Public Smoking Arena

by MIKE CONWAY
Daily Staff Writer

A one man war against smoking in public places in San Luis Obispo is being waged by a Cal Poly student.

Alfred Fonzi, 25, submitted his proposal to the city council at its last meeting along with a petition with several hundred signatures he collected single-handedly.

The plan was sent to the city's Citizen's Advisory Committee for review and refinement before the issue receives a public hearing.

The ordinance would make smoking illegal in restaurants, banks, the post office, hospitals, waiting rooms, movie theaters and areas around checkstands. Places closed to persons under 21 would be exempt according to Fonzi's plan.

Fonzi presented over 400 signatures to the council in support of his ordinance including those of 43 area physicians.

"I'm hoping to have double the amount of signatures by the time the public hearing comes up," he said. Fonzi expects the hearing in "about five or six weeks."

"More people do not smoke than do smoke," he said. "In fact only one fourth of the population does smoke. It's not a case where a minority is saying the majority must give up the right to smoke."

Fonzi believes people have a right to smoke "if the non-smoker is able to move away from the smoker without any great inconvenience. However this isn't always possible he said.

"Wherever the right to breathe clean air and the right to smoke conflict, the right to breathe clean air supersedes the right to smoke," Fonzi said.

"Passive smoking, or second-hand smoking is just as harmful, or more harmful to the non-smoker as smoking," the political science major said in a telephone interview.

The idea for the ordinance came after Fonzi had asked two women to refrain from smoking in a local restaurant.

"They refused," he said. "They made it very clear that unless there was some legal reason why they couldn't smoke they would continue."

"My ordinance gives the non-smoker the legal basis to speak up," he said. "Now I can say 'Excuse me ma'am there's a city ordinance against smoking.' And if she gets obnoxious or won't comply I can call a cop."

Support for the plan has come from the Lung Association, the American Cancer Society, a member of the Air Quality Control Board and even from smokers.

"A lot of smokers signed the petition because they thought it was fair," Fonzi explained.

There hasn't been any opposition to the plan, but Fonzi expects some when the issue receives a public hearing.

There has been "very little" student support of the plan said Fonzi. He said one reason was because "I don't want to be open to the criticism that this is just a student project, run by the students, for the students. I've gone after the people who own businesses, homes, full-time residents of the city," said Fonzi, who considers San Luis Obispo his home.

Another reason why there has been little student involvement, he said is because "the students are politically apathetic, simply because they have better things to do."

"And," Fonzi said, "smoking is what a lot of them consider a personal liberty. A lot of students are rebellious against any kind of authority. They like to smoke grass for instance."

"It's kind of hard for them to talk about not smoking cigarettes if they go out and take a few whiffs of pot or something," he said.

"They're smokers too. They may not be smoking Marlboro's but they're smoking they're own brand. It's just as bad as far as the lungs are concerned," Fonzi said.

The final outcome of Fonzi's fight will be apparent after the smoke has cleared.

County Physicians To Go On Two-Day Strike

by STEVE CHURM
Daily Associate Editor

County physicians will close their office doors Thursday and Friday to demonstrate the "severe magnitude and proportion" of the malpractice crisis.

At a Tuesday press conference at Sierra Vista Hospital, a six-member steering committee of county physicians—Concerned Physicians of San Luis Obispo County—announced the county-wide demonstration.

Dr. Haringer, spokesman for the committee, said in a telephone survey of all county physicians—80 per cent of the physicians will honor the demonstration by participating in the two-day work stoppage.

Farmer said the malpractice statement has become a "moral issue and it is time to stand up and be counted and that the physicians of this county are fed up."

"We hope to get the attention of our patients, San Luis county citizens, the legislature and the Governor to dramatize the need for action to solve the malpractice problem," Farmer said.

Farmer sharply criticized Governor Edmund G. Brown and the legislature for "dragging their feet" in coming up with a workable alternative to sharp malpractice premiums increases.

County physicians are facing a Jan. 28 deadline by Travelers Insurance Company to renew their malpractice policies at a sharp increase of 327 per cent over last year.

'We hope to get the attention of legislature and the Governor to dramatize the need for action to solve the malpractice problem.'

Farmer charged Brown with "complicating" the already strained situation by tying his malpractice solution to mandatory acceptance of medical patients.

Brown's proposal calls for a $4,000 premium to be collected from individual physicians. The annual premium would be subject to a 10-15 per cent increase per year with an annual cost-of-living addition.

In exchange for the relatively low premium rates he has called for a "medical peace corps" that would provide medical care in underserved areas of the state.

"I am very angry that the Governor has introduced a new aspect to the problem that must be treated in two very different ways," Farmer said.

"I resent the implications," Farmer continued, "that the medically indigent are not medically treated. I agree that the underprivileged are in a less than desirable situation, but they know they can go to doctors and we have always attempted to treat them."

In separating the two issues he said that Brown has "lumped together." Farmer stressed step one in a long-term solution to the malpractice "must come from the state legislature."

Step two must be a complete "reform" of the judicial process by which malpractice suits are conducted in," Farmer said.

"The time is now for a solution," Farmer said. Both Thursday and Friday participating doctors in the demonstration will be involved in meetings to explore the options open to them as the deadline approaches.

Farmer said county physicians will treat all their patients for emergency work only during the two-day demonstration.

A Woman In The White House?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Betty Ford says her son Jack is a "good politician" but she wouldn't wish the presidency on him.

She also predicted that there would be a woman president some day, and said with the appointment of Anne Armstrong as U.S. ambassador to Great Britain, her husband would be nominating other women to top jobs in the future. She declined to be specific.

Mrs. Ford talked with reporters at NBC-TV studios where she took part in a taped television show honoring Pearl Bailey who is making her farewell to show business with a production of "Hello Dolly."

The first lady, keeping up to date on the political front, commented on the Iowa party caucuses. "I was absolutely amazed. I was surprised at Jimmy Carter's strength."

Carter, whom Mrs. Ford met when he was governor of Georgia, led the roster of Democratic candidates - one of who could be her husband's rival in the presidential race.

Mrs. Ford also said she thought her husband's State of the Union address Monday "was too long." His delivery ran close to an hour. Mrs. Ford said, "I like to see a 35-minute presentation."

Asked if she would like to see Jack, 25, as President some day, she replied "I wouldn't wish that on him," but added "he's a good politician."

Democrats Label Wallace Nuisance

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace said Tuesday other Democratic presidential candidates consider him "sort of a nuisance" and are making a concerted effort to defeat him.

"It's very important for them to beat me somewhere along the line," Wallace said in his first campaign swing to Illinois, where he hopes to cash in the state's March 16 primary.

"They got together and said, 'you take him on here and I'll take him on there.'"

"I'm sort of a nuisance to the party. They would like to get rid of George Wallace, but George Wallace is not their problem."

Wallace has delegate states pledged to him running in many areas of Illinois and is one of four Democrats entered in the state's "beauty contest," where candidates seek popular votes directly but do not win any delegates.

He said if he wins any delegates in the Illinois primary it will be better than he did here in 1972. Wallace received one-half a delegate vote from the Illinois delegation at the 1972 convention, and he said, "if I lose a half of a delegate in Illinois, I'll feel I'm really slipping."

Division of Forestry and San Luis Obispo fire fighters quickly contained a quarter acre fire on Madonna Mountain, Monday afternoon. The blaze of undetermined origin was first spotted by San Luis city residents on the Broad St. side of the morro and was immediately reported to fire fighters. There were no injuries as the lack of rain and summer like temperatures continue to increase the fire threat in San Luis Obispo County. The weathermen predict temperatures will remain balmy through Friday with temperatures in the mid 80s and lows in the 60s. (Daily photo by Alan Halfhill)

ASI Considering Purchase Of Cuesta Park

by PETE KING
Daily Co-Editor

Associated Students, Inc., is looking into the possibility of purchasing Cuesta Park from the county to use as a place to hold "Thank God It's Friday" (TGIF) parties.

According to ASI Pres. Mike Hurtado, the ASI has just begun to look into the idea. But, he said, there still is a "good possibility" there will be an allocation in the 1976-77 budget to buy and maintain the park.

As Hurtado sees it, ASI would:

—Buy the park from the county for a token price of $1 or —Use student assistants and ornamental horticulture classes to maintain the grounds. He said this would cut the maintenance cost of $20,000 the county now pays in half. The remaining $10,000 would be paid with money collected through ASI fees paid by every student here.

—Allow ASI groups to use the park for a wide range of activities, including TGIFs and beer parties. He said the ASI will either attempt to obtain a beer license or hire caterers to provide the beer.

—Avoid hassles that have been associated with TGIFs in the last few years. Hurtado said the city has an ordinance which limits the number of people that can gather in city limits at parties and the like. He said the county does not and because of this, there would be no legal hassles since, Hurtado said, the park is in the county and outside city limits.

But it is not that simple. County officials, Poly administrators, ASI attorney Michael DeVitt and even Hurtado agree an attempt to buy Cuesta Park will unveil a maze of both legal and practical question marks.

Legal questions still unanswered are: Can ASI buy property; will the county, because of deed restrictions, sell the park to ASI; will the Board of Trustees of the California State University and Colleges and University President Robert Kennedy approve the purchase; and can ASI obtain a beer license.

The most pressing point that needs to be resolved on the practical side is whether the students here want to shell out $10,000 a year in maintenance costs for the park.

The first step in buying the park will be to find out whether the ASI can own property.

Kennedy isn't sure that it can.

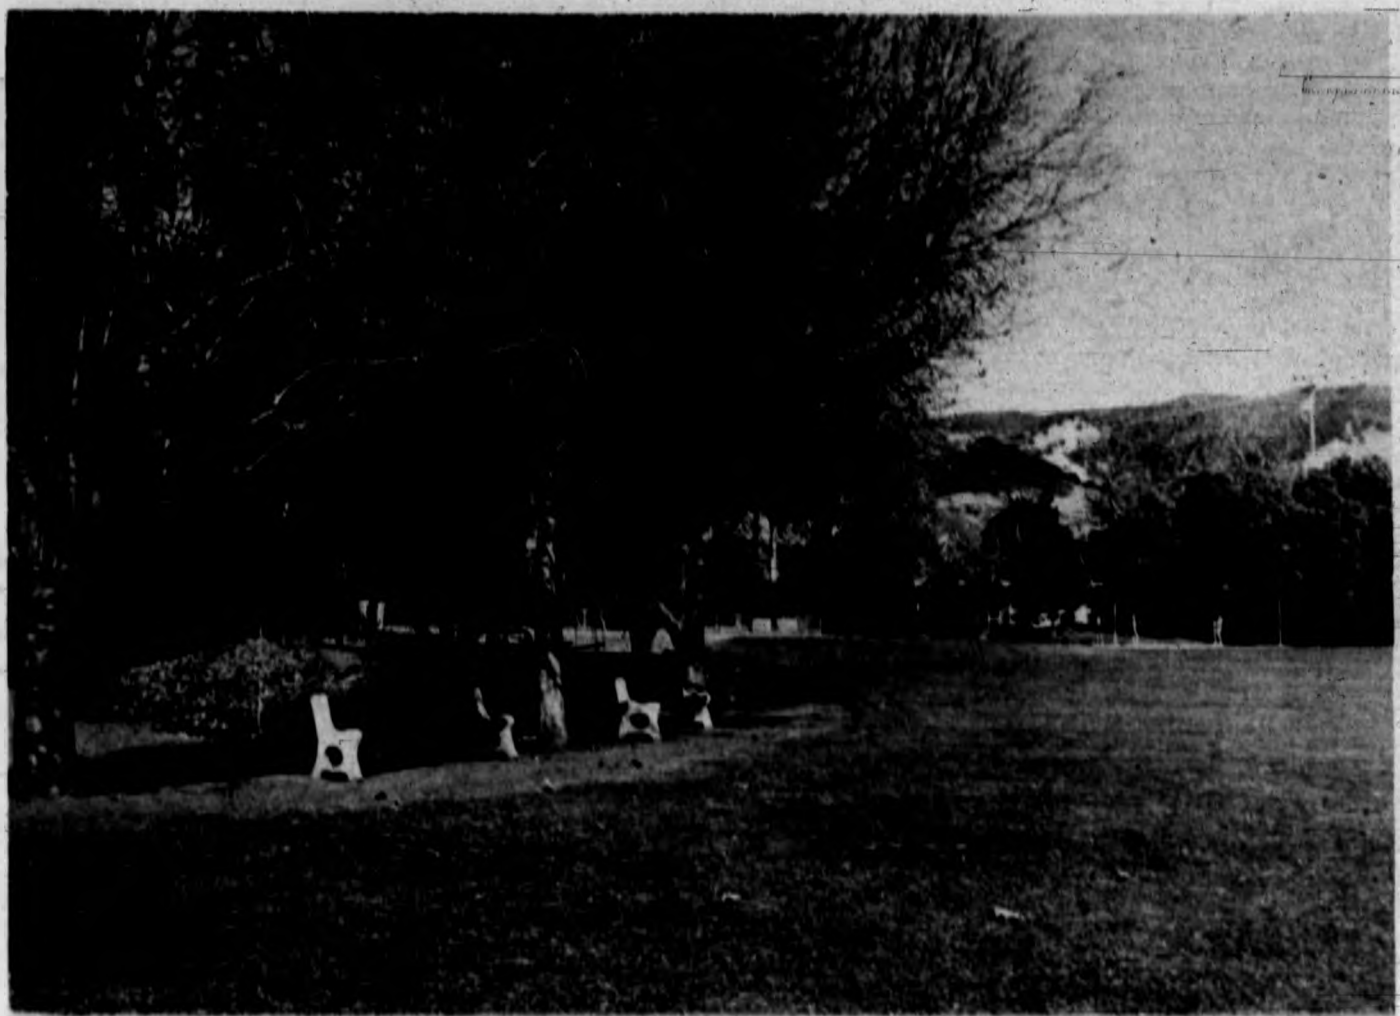

"One of the things," he said, "I would have a serious doubt about—and I'd have to get a legal decision—is a section of Title V of the Education Code that says what student bodies may do as part of their legal activities. I don't know that it stipulates they can own property, but I have a hunch they can't. I've never heard of it being done before."

ASI attorney DeVitt, however, researched the question and wrote a legal opinion for Hurtado which states the ASI can own property.

DeVitt referred to the ASI's certificate of incorporation which says the group is allowed to "acquire and hold all property, real and personal."

But DeVitt does not believe merely having the power to own property answers all the legal questions posed by the plan to buy the park.

"One question I am wondering about," he said, "is that since the ASI is a non-profit corporation, that status might be jeopardized from a tax viewpoint. Also, it appears the purchase would have to be approved by the Board of Trustees.

Finally, DeVitt is concerned about the restrictions on the park's use. The park was deeded to the county—no one is sure when, but it was years ago—by a man named Harry Nuss. DeVitt said when land is deeded like this, there are usually stipulations to its use. If these are violated, the land is given back to the person who deeded it, or to his heirs.

Neither DeVitt nor County Parks and Beaches Assistant Director Bob Gregory are sure what stipulations are in the Cuesta deed. But Gregory said he is "pretty sure" the park has to be used for public recreation.

Gregory said before the county would consider selling the land to ASI, it would have to make sure ASI was going to follow the restrictions listed in the deed.

"We would also want to be sure we have continued services," he said. "We don't sell facilities just to get it off our hands."

The Board of Supervisors, Gregory said, makes the final decision about terms of contract, including price, when it comes to selling property.

"It was offered to the city years ago for $1," Gregory said, "but they are a governmental organization. The ASI is a private group and I don't know what the price would be for it."

If Hurtado, who seems to be making the biggest push for the purchase, can convince the county to sell cheap, his fight will only be half over.

He must also persuade the Student Affairs Council, Kennedy, and, apparently, the Board of Trustees to go along with the scheme.

According to ASI Vice-Pres. Phil Bishop many SAC reps share his somewhat skeptical view of the proposal.

"The primary advantage," he said, "is having a place for Cal Poly students. What extent of authority over the use of the park the administration will have is still a question in my mind."

"We already use the park," he said, "it's not like we're looking at it from over a fence and can't come in to play."

While Bishop may be skeptical, or, at least, extremely cautious, Kennedy seems to be non-committed on the proposal.

Think About?

Need a lift home for Christmas?

The "Ride Board," in the University Union, coordinates students giving rides and students needing rides.

For those students looking for rides after this week's finals, the board shows there are plenty of rides available for students wishing to travel north or south of San Luis Obispo; the most popular routes, Fresno and Bakersfield are well covered also.

However, students needing rides out of state may have difficulty. The number of students needing rides outweighs the number of rides available by about 2 to 1.

Any student who would like to do some traveling during Christmas vacation may find some interesting offers on the board, such as the one by Miguel Perez.

Perez is driving a bus down to Brazil and can take up to 30 people, but he won't be returning until sometime in February.

"It is a good exercise for the students to see if it can come about legally," he said, "but I'm certainly not going to invest any time looking into it. I'll wait until they want to make a formal proposal to me."

"I also have the responsibility of approving the ASI budget. I can't add things to the budget but I can delete them. If it is in the budget, I will look into it, but I really can't visualize it."

Hurtado said he expects "no hassles" from either

Police Chief Ervin Rodgers, however, said there is no such law.

"There was an ordinance like that which was proposed to the council," he said, "but it never passed."

But whether the county laws are more lenient toward TG-type activities than the city's, is a moot point.

According to Gregory, the largest portion of the park—including the barbeque and grassy areas—is in city limits, not county like Hurtado says. If there were

The most pressing point that needs to be resolved . . . is whether the students

Kennedy or the Board of Trustees in getting the purchase approved.

A final hurdle, of course, will be the students who will have to pay for the park's maintenance. And $10,000 to the budget also means $10,000 worth will have to be cut from somewhere else.

Hurtado said the park would be a good place for all students—not only for TGs, but also for picnics and recreational uses.

He said its biggest selling point is that the park is outside city limits.

"There is a city ordinance," he said, "which says you can't have TGs because you can only have so many people at a gathering."

TGs is Cuesta Park, he said, the City Police would still patrol them.

And Rodgers said "the city is liable to shut you down quicker because of the noise and debris—the general populous of older people object to it."

Finally, noise and debris aren't the only trouble prospective TG throwers would face.

According to Kennedy, the ASI cannot legally obtain a beer license. He said The Foundation can, but it probably wouldn't let the ASI use it for TGs at Cuesta Park.

If this is true, caterers would have to sell the beer. Caterers must sell beer one glass at a time instead of the traditional buy-a-glass-and-drink-all-you-want TG system. They also must check the IDs of all drinkers.

Infant Pressure May Hold Secrets

TUCSON, Ariz. UPI — A Boston physician said Tuesday the blood pressure of a one-month-old child may indicate his chances of heart disease by middle age.

If a tiny infant has a blood pressure above normal he likely will always have a high blood pressure, said Dr. Edward H. Kass of the Harvard Medical School.

The discovery of that life-long "blood pressure track" may be the key to finding a way to head off the problems of high blood pressure which affects 24 million Americans, he said.

"I am very optimistic, but I can't put a timetable on when we could find such a way," Kass said.

Kass said the blood pressure levels of children correlate almost exactly with their siblings and fairly closely to their parents' levels. And, a new study showed that although there was no good correlation with siblings or parents within a few days after birth, there was by one month.

"Something happens between birth and the first month of life that starts them on their blood pressure track for life," Kass told the American Heart Association Science Writers Forum.

Doctors have long argued whether genetics or environment cause high blood pressure, and Kass said they still do not know which has the greater effect. But, he said, studies of identical twins separated shortly after birth and reared in different homes show that they have nearly the same blood pressure tendencies.

"So I don't think there is any doubt there is some kind of genetic base," he said. High blood pressure, or hypertension, is the leading cause of heart disease and death in this country, according to the Heart Association.

Odom Announces Candidacy

by FRED VULIN
Daily Co-editor

Homer Odom Tuesday announced his candidacy for District 5 of the San Luis Obispo County Board of Supervisors.

In an interview on campus Odom said he would base his campaign on the premise an elected official is a servant of the people.

"I am not satisfied with the past performance of the Board. It has ignored the public—to the extent that the board does not understand!" Odom said.

A native Texan, Odom said he would rely on his background in the media to give the board a new direction. Odom recently sold both his radio stations in San Luis—KSLY and KNUA. The sale is still pending approval by the Federal Communications Commission.

Odom's announcement to run for the supervisorial seat follows the recent decision by SLO City Councilman Keith Gurnee to seek the same seat.

Gurnee and Odom were central figures in the Madonna Mountain conflict during the summer. Odom was a staunch supporter of the San Luis restaurant.

Gurnee, on the other hand, was one of the most vocal opponents of the grading which took place on the morro.

However, Odom said he would not campaign against any candidate in the race—including Gurnee.

Ford Announces Budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford proposed a $394.2 billion budget Wednesday which promised the country it would be defended, its most needy would be cared for, and most of its citizens and businesses would pay less federal tax.

But there he drew the line.

In the first budget he could call his own — the last one was formulated largely under Richard Nixon — Ford put into paper his often stated philosophy that the federal government cannot solve the nation's problems through greater spending. Many outside the Defense Department will not be happy with the results.

The budget went to Congress — which holds the ultimate power of the budget — where it faces not only the usual political pressures of 435 House members and 100 senators with pet projects but also new congressional budget committees created to make sense of the complicated process, and possibly make hash of Ford's budget.

Many Ford proposals face rough going in Congress, particularly his call for reduced welfare spending, higher Social Security taxes and smaller Medicare payments. However, Congress is likely to go along with Ford in cutting individual income taxes somewhat in July, although his new business tax cuts and incentives face a dim future.

Wallace: He's Still Running

On other subjects, Wallace said:

— He has "no reaction" to former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter's victory in the Iowa caucuses Monday. Wallace was not a candidate in Iowa because, "I do not do as well in caucuses as I do in states that have primaries."

— He agrees "on broad principals" with President Ford's state of the Union address. He said he favors lower taxes for the middle class and returning institutions to local control.

— He does not advocate American involvement in Angola, but "we have an obligation in this country to recognize that we cannot afford to lose the good will of people in Africa."

— "One thing we should have is a return to capital punishment on the national level and at the state level."

— Illinois will be very important, but "that does not necessarily mean you must win in Illinois to be nominated for president."

On Sunday, January 25, there will be a master class where the dancers will work with anyone interested in dance. This class will be conducted in Crandall Gym at 4 p.m. There will be a 50 cent registration fee for this class.

Probe Of CIA To End

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Committee prepared Tuesday to wind up its investigation of the CIA by the end of the month with even its chairman declaring too much secret material was being leaked to the press.

Chairman Otis G. Pike, D-N.Y., said he would not seek an extension of the life of the committee, due to expire Jan. 31, because of widespread leaks to the media of classified information. Pike said, "I am concerned because of the number of leaks that have evolved. The sooner we finish the investigation the sooner that will end."

Typical of the leaks which has troubled the committee were reports Tuesday from congressional sources that the 340 page committee draft report accuses the CIA of hiding the true amount of U.S. military aid to anti-communist factions in Angola.

The report, the sources said, states the CIA undervalued some equipment as much as 50 per cent, hence making the real value of the Angolan military aid far higher than the $31 million the Administration says has been sent there.

The draft report also discloses, according to these sources, that U.S. intelligence officials knew within one hour of the assassination of U.S. Ambassador to Cyprus Rodger P. Davies on Aug. 19, 1974 that he was killed by right-wing Cypriot police officers. Despite U.S. protests, the source said, the killers have never been prosecuted or fired.

Pike predicted "the report will be controversial, but that controversy will fade into insignificance when we get to the recommendations. Recommendations are going to be the tough part of our job."

Performers Need Rooms

Up With People, the internationally known singing ensemble soon to be in town for a performance, is seeking accommodations for the 150 students involved in the production.

In an effort to keep traveling costs to a minimum, the group is attempting to locate homes where the students can bed down during their stay in the community.

Hosts are asked to provide meals and transportation during the young singers' three day visit to San Luis Obispo.

The non-profit organization which has entertained throughout 38 countries in the past ten years will appear in the Cuesta Community College Auditorium Jan. 27 at 8 p.m. Tickets for the evening performance are on sale for $2.50 at the San Luis Obispo Chamber of Commerce, 1039 Chorro.

Persons interested in hosting student members of the Up With People Organization should contact the Chamber of Commerce at 543-1323.
