Solving a Daily problem

When Mustang Daily ceased publication Friday, Oct. 14, it was as if we stepped off a curb and somebody moved the pavement.

People involved in the Daily felt a sense of disorientation; the object of their work and attention no longer existed. Writers and photographers continued to practice their craft during the two-week lull, but production people could only hover in the suspension, waiting for resolution of the situation.

For those readers still unsure as to why Mustang Daily was out of print, it was not due to the paper's financial status, nor was it a case of administrative censorship of departmental squabbling, as rumors tell.

The suspension resulted from years of neglecting the equipment, structure and very essence of this newspaper.

In short, due to curriculum and equipment overloads this year in the Graphic Communications Department, University Graphic Systems was no longer able to produce the paper.

A time-out was called to allow some solution to be worked out. Numerous departmental meetings, study-group and sub-committee chit chats were held to determine exactly what had caused the snafu.

As a temporary solution, graphics people have turned their department upside down and arranged a laboratory to be used only in Mustang Daily production.

So far no money has been spent in the effort, just a lot of sweat and time. Many people have put in hours of work to get the paper back on its feet.

Hopefully, when next quarter begins, there will be new equipment in the lab for Mustang Daily. The GrC Department will then be able to resume its instructional program with minimum interference from daily newspaper production.

Mustang Daily suspension had further ramifications than a few headaches in the Graphic Arts Building.

Whenever a newspaper ceases to exist, a valuable communication tool is lost. Mustang Daily serves as a link to connect the diverse elements of the Cal Poly community.

Least we flatter ourselves without cause. Daily reporters have been involved in a survey which will determine the impact the paper has on the community, and the need for the paper.

Barring further production hassles due to construction in the Graphic Arts Building, the entity Mustang Daily will continue to serve its educational and informational purposes.

The pavement is back under our feet.

Split the state, and save the North's identity

I'm seriously considering writing a letter to Congressman Leon Panetta asking him to introduce a bill that would divide California in half.

Northern and Southern California are as different as night and day, and it should be known as such. I have a difficult time relating with Southern Californians, and they have trouble figuring me out.

When people from the East picture California, they think of Palm trees and Disneyland. Oh, sure, there are San Francisco post cards back there, but they think the City is only thirty miles north of Thousand Oaks.

I say it's about time Northern California distinguishes its own personality.

So, I propose a new border to divide the north and south as drawn about two blocks north of the Madonna Inn.

Call, of course, would be the northern state. That would make the Madonna Inn the gateway to Fornia, the country's newest state. How appropriate.

Now don't get the idea I hate Los Angeles. I tolerate it very much. In fact, maybe I'm a little jealous. In Fornia, there is the glamour of Hollywood, beautiful beaches and the women on them, the Dodgers, Knott's Berry Farm and maybe even the Olympics.

It's just that the peoples of Call and Fornia are so different.

For instance Fornians at Poly (soon to be Cal Polytechnic) aren't as much fun on weekends as Callians. I guess it's because Fornians get bored in San Luis Obispo. There are no major concerts or amusement parks to go to.

But Callians, especially those in the Central Valley, are always up for a good time. That is because up near Modesto, Stockton and Sacramento, well, there isn't a whole helluva lot to do.

So the northern folk are much more enterprising. Then again, the Callians are more apt to go insane.

Other observations of the contrasting peoples: Fornians wear leisure suits and leave their shirts all the way unbuttoned. Callians button their shirts all the way to the top.

There are more females in Call who don't shave their legs than there are in Fornia. Then again, there are more Fornian females with Farnah-de's than their counterparts to the north.

Fornians speak a slightly different language than Callians. To a Callian a hot car means that it is stolen, to a Fornian it means that it goes zero-to-sixty in seven seconds.

Fornians, since they were born with the freeway, are much more skilled drivers, whereas Callians still get off on riding a five-mile-per-hour cable car.

Fornians have many idols, from movie stars to athletes. Callians usually won't give the time of day to either. For example, Fornians truly enjoy Steve Garvey commercials. Callians would laugh him off the screen.

Now it's true a few technicalities have to be ironed out before the state is divided from new state laws to the changing of letterheads.

One problem will be right here at Poly. Since Laguna Village lies in Fornia and Poly would be in Call, LV students would have to pay out-of-state fees. Sorry about that.

There would have to be a new state capital in Fornia. Preferably out of the influence of Los Angeles so all Fornians would get a fair shake. How about Oxnard, Carlsbad or Brawley?

Oh sure, there will be minor changes like switching UCLA to UFLA, and finding a new state bird and flower, little things like that.

But, consider all the advantages this plan has to offer. If for no other reason, this proposal should be passed because of the stimulating effect it would have on the economy.

Just think of all the people who will need to be hired to sew that extra star on all those flags!

Daily's lapse affected campus

Mustang Daily lives again and most of us will tend to appreciate this information source a little more now.

The Daily staff was without their "living laboratory," local businesses and campus groups had to advertise elsewhere and Cal Poly itself lost a vital source of campus and local news.

According to Program and Ethnic Program Boards Advisor Sam Speden, only 107 people, mostly non-students, came to hear cellist Neal La Monaca Oct. 21.

The Fine Arts committee, she said, counted a mere 75 students for two film showings.

Conversely, the more established groups, she said, did not have such a bad time getting the word out.

Student Activities Planning Director Doug Jones said publicity for last weekend's homecoming was successfully handled by KCPR radio and off campus media, such as the Telegram-Tribune.

"It's kind of sad when any campus newspaper goes out of production, but life still goes on," he said.

Other publicity agents were not so confident, however.

Health educator Jeanette Reese saw "Well Day," the disease prevention program Oct. 20, coming up without a paper in which to advertise.

So she wrote her own tabloid and turned it over to the Telegram-Tribune for printing.

"I thought that if the Well Day paper was the Mustang Daily," said sophomore political science major Tom White.

"People were grabbing it as if it was something to read," he said.

The success of any group, whether it be Cal Poly or society as a whole, will always depend on having a source of information.

Having a medium in which to print that information objectively is, of course, of primary importance.

Police lack kidnap leads

By DAVE KERLEY
KCPR News Director

and

University police officials say they have no new leads concerning the alleged abduction of a 24-year old Cal Poly library employee Sunday night.

The woman said she was abducted by two masked men as she approached her car after visiting friends in Yosemite hall about 6:45 p.m.

The two men reportedly forced the woman to open her car door and one suspect began driving south on Highway 1, according to Leroy Whitmer, acting university police chief.

The two men continued south until they reached Quadelupe, approximately 20 miles from San Luis Obispo. After reaching Quadelupe, the vehicle ran out of gas.

The two kidnappers rummaged through the woman's car and purse. Taking nothing, they fled on foot. The woman was later picked up at her car by four friends.

The kidnappers wore Halloween-type masks, which were described by the unidentified woman as "horrible looking."

The woman said the other smelled strongly of alcohol, and they drove erratically. She said she thought they were "drunk or high." The woman was later unable to offer any concrete descriptions of the men.

According to the woman, the two men never spoke, but did chuckle throughout the ordeal.

Whitmer said he felt the woman was randomly picked and "just happened to be the wrong place at the right time."

"We had next to nothing to begin with to work on," said Whitmer. "We have processed a few fingerprints and are currently investigating them."

LAC offering timely seminar

Do you want more freedom, more peace of mind?

One way to get these precious commodities is to learn to schedule your time so that "you are in control of you," according to Learning Assistance Center personnel. To help students toward that goal, the Learning Assistance Center will sponsor a time management seminar entitled Getting Caught Up and Getting Out. It will be held Wednesday, November 16, from 1-3 p.m. in the Health Center Conference Room.

The seminar will be conducted in three parts.

For more information, contact the Learning Assistance Center, Room 208A in the library.

Bookstore picks a winner

John Borgerding, who received more than five hundred votes his panoramic photograph of the Poly "P," has won the El Corral Bookstore Picture Postcard contest, it was announced by bookstore officials.

Mary Ziegler's night shot of the campus received 257 votes and second place in the competition.

El Corral will be printing the postcards soon and they will be available in the store.

"The Glass Menagerie," a semi-autobiographical play by Tennessee Williams, will open on the Cal Poly stage tomorrow night.

The intense and delicate drama, set in the 1930s, is about the Wingfield family who live in a St. Louis tenement.

Tom Wingfield, the son, is the narrator as well as a character in the play. His mother, Amanda, is a woman who is disappointed in marriage and can never forget she was once a true belle of southern gentility.

Laura, her daughter, slightly crippled and pathologically shy, has retreated from the outer world and found refuge in her menagerie of glass animals. Jim O'Connor is Laura's carefree, exuberant "gentleman caller."

All four characters are tied down to the tedium and hopelessness of poverty, otherwise their goals would have taken them in four opposite directions.

"The play is unusual in that there is not a single major action," said drama instructor Michael Malkin. "The plot is one of emotion and feeling. It's a play requiring sympathy for the characters in a very delicate situation. Even the title suggests the fragile aspect of the story."

Nancy Jorgensen, a counselor in the Cal Poly Counseling Center for the past ten years, plays Amanda. Jorgensen has had a number of lead roles in Cal Poly and local theater productions.

She played the part of Linda Loman in the Cal Poly production of "Death of a Salesman," and has performed in numerous other productions such as "The Women," "A Streetcar Named Desire," and "Once Upon a Mattress."

Larry Seaton, a senior in Natural Resources Management, portrays dreamy, ambitious Tom. He has been seen in several Cal Poly productions and had a lead role in "Applause" this summer at the San Luis Obispo Community Theater. Seaton has had major roles in "Harvey," "The Diary of Anne Frank" and will also play the title role in the Cal Poly Winter production of "Sherlock Holmes."

Leslie Scatchard, a junior in Speech Communications, plays Laura. While she is a newcomer to the Cal Poly stage, she is not new to the theater. Scatchard has performed in "The Boyfriend," "Bye Bye Birdie," and in "The Wizard of Oz," in high school and community theater.

Jonathan White, who plays the part of Jim O'Connor, is a senior in Business Administration. He has played a variety of roles at Cal Poly and at the University of California at Santa Barbara.

He has been seen in Cal Poly productions such as "Death of a Salesman," "Harvey," and he played the title role in "MacBeth." White spent a season with the American Conservatory Theater School in San Francisco where he played the part of Stanley Kowalski in "A Streetcar Named Desire."

"At this point, all the actors are aware there is no rest for them in the play," said Malkin. "There's a tremendous amount of energy that has to be expended."

Dennis Mayer, who has been involved in the technical aspect of Cal Poly theater for four years, is stage manager for the show. Kurt Kising is the assistant stage manager. The set was designed by J. Murray Smith, a professor in the Speech Communications department and a director of many Cal Poly productions.

"It's an experienced cast," said Malkin. "And they all work well together. Watching these last rehearsals, I can safely say the show is going to be pretty damn good."

"The Glass Menagerie" will be presented at the Cal Poly Theatre, Thursday through Saturday nights, Nov. 3, 4 and 5. Tickets are $1 for students and $2 general admission.

Tickets can be bought at the ASI ticket office, Brown's Music, 717 Higuera and at the door. Curtain is at 8 p.m.

Rent help for low-income tenants

By GARY KAPLAN
Daily Staff Writer

Although there is a long waiting list, help in paying the rent is available in San Luis Obispo to low income families and single adults, either elderly or disabled, said Rich Shubin, Director of Housing Authority for the City of San Luis Obispo.

The Housing and Urban Development program, called Rent Supplement, was begun in January and is set up to help a total of 300 applicants (100 elderly or disabled and 200 families).

Two hundred of the spots have already been taken. For the remaining 100, a thousand names are on the waiting list according to Shubin.

Applicants accepted into the program will pay one-fourth of their monthly income for rent. San Luis Obispo, backed by HUD money, will make up the difference said Shubin. As an example, if monthly income is $400, one-fourth or $100 would go toward rent. On a $300 rented house, HUD would pay the remaining $150.

"HUD establishes the income necessary for qualification," said Shubin. "For a family of four, an income less than $10,300 yearly would make them eligible."

"Renting an apartment or house now takes quite a bit more of a person's income than several years ago. From 1970-75, the cost of renting increased by 45 per cent. At the same time, income increased only 25 per cent."

Once a person's name comes to the top of the waiting list, he is given 120 days in which to find a place to live said Shubin. If he is unsuccessful, then his name is dropped and the Housing Authority goes to the next person on the list.

"So far the program has been very well received," said Shubin. "Landlords seem very willing to accept a person who is getting this aid."

HUD money is paid directly to the landlord according to Shubin.

"If we can't assist someone," he said, "we refer him to other sources. Unfortunately, there are waiting lists everywhere. The key is to get on as many waiting lists as possible and just stick it out until it's your turn."

Frisbee fling

A "Fall Frisbee Fling", sponsored by the Cal Poly Intramurals and the San Luis Obispo Frisbee Freaks, will be held at Cal Poly's baseball stadium Nov. 6, at 10 a.m. Events include competitive and non-competitive activities: team games, frisbee golf, freestyle, games and skills, and clinics for learning throws.

Jog-A-Thon gets underway Saturday

This Saturday the first big effort to help build a new football stadium complex at Cal Poly will take place. That effort is the Cal Poly Jog-A-Thon, with individuals, groups, teams and organizations running for money.

The money collected for a group or team will be divided in half. One half will go to the group, and the other will go towards the Stadium Renovation Fund.

According to Vic Buccola, director of athletics, there are more than 200 individuals running, and various teams and clubs.

"I think right now we have more than 600 people running," Buccola said. "This is within my range of six to seven hundred people that I was shooting for before the campaign."

There will be four starting times, beginning at 8 a.m., and running on the hour until the last session at 11 a.m.

Each person should have a sponsor sheet with the names and addresses of pledgers and pledge amounts.

Money owed at the end of the event will not be collected by the participant. A bill will be sent out to each sponsor, and a total of three bills will be sent until the bill is paid.

Participants should choose a time to run, and show up 15 minutes early to sign up at the table at the lower track next to the baseball field.

An honor system will be used to count laps, and at the end of the one hour limit, the total number of laps will be recorded.

RODEO TEAMS from California, Arizona and Nevada were on hand to participate in the Cal Poly Homecoming Rodeo over the weekend. Above, an unidentified cowboy is thrown from a bucking bronco. Fresno State won the men's division, with the home team placing third. The University of Arizona won the women's division, again with Poly placing third. (Daily photo by Dennis Steers)

Poly hosts Fresno

The soccer team will try to overcome its scoring problem when it meets Fresno Pacific University today, 2 p.m., at the soccer field.

The Mustangs dropped their last two decisions, and were shut out in both games. Although they have played well, the offense hasn't been able to put the ball in the net. "We've been going straight into their defense—trying to score right up the middle," said coach George Parry. "We'll be trying to spread out and use our wings more. When you go up the middle the ball just gets knocked off people."

Parry says they can beat any team in the league if they can score. The Mustangs have beat Fresno in the past and he thinks they can do it again.

"I have to be pleased with the team. We still have a better record than we did last year at this time. We really haven't played all that badly and if we can just get back on the track and start winning, we'll be right."

Cal Poly athletic teams have not had much luck the past three weeks. The different Mustang squads competing earned an overall 5-9-1 record with the women's volleyball team taking the worst beating.

The women's volleyball team lost four matches in a row, dropping its record to 4-6 overall and 1-6 in SCAA play. UCSB dropped the Mustangs 16-4, 15-8 and 16-14 two weeks ago. The following day the University of California at Irvine defeated Poly in straight sets, 15-4, 16-14 and 15-3.

This past weekend, the women played for the first time this season in the Main Gym. The home crowd didn't help as the Mustangs dropped a match to Cal State Los Angeles 12-15, 7-15, 15-5, 15-9 and 10-15 Friday. Cal State Northridge defeated the women 15-9, 15-4 and 15-7 Saturday night.

The football team finally got back on the track after losing badly in the first two home games. The Mustangs defeated Northern Colorado 29-20 but the next week found themselves at the mercy of Cal State Fullerton in a 45-18 loss.

Last Saturday was homecoming for the Mustangs and Simon Fraser from Canada gave Poly a battle. The Clansmen, one point behind the Mustangs for most of the game, lost it 34-20. Poly now has a record of 4-3.

The cross country season has been very successful for both the men and women. The men placed ninth in the Stanford Invitational two and a half weeks ago. During the San Luis Obispo Invitational a week ago, the A team placed second followed by the B team in fourth. The team was idle last Saturday.

The women, who run as an unofficial team in the Southern California Athletic Association, placed second in the Stanford Invitational, first among colleges. They placed third in the San Luis Obispo Invitational a week ago. This past weekend the women put together a winning performance at the Santa Barbara Invitational.

Sports update

Chapman College, 3-4 in overtime, and Cal State Northridge 4-3. Two weeks ago Cal State Los Angeles and the Mustangs tied 1-1 in a hard fought game. Last Thursday, the University of California at Santa Barbara came to town and upended the Mustangs 1-0 for the first loss of the season.

A loss to the University of the Pacific (8-7), and a 16-10 win over Cal State Los Angeles set the stage for the Poly water polo team to take on Northridge last Saturday. The Mustangs lost to the Matadors 10-5, dropping their record to 1-2 in CCAA.

There are still two full weeks of sports competition and several teams representing Cal Poly have a good chance of finishing high in the league before any post season play. Basketball for both men and women will get underway in mid-November and early December, respectively.
