Housemother looks after AGR members

BY KARYN HOUSTON

Daily Staff Writer

The only fraternity house on campus with the distinction of having a housemother is the agriculture fraternity, Alpha Gamma Rho.

Cradling her small dog, Killer, on her lap and speaking with authority, Merrie Weiss explained her job is to be a hostess for visiting guests to the fraternity. She also teaches social etiquette to incoming pledges, but her main objective is to help the fraternity find a house of their own.

In an interview at a small apartment complex behind the Lamp Lighter Motel where she lives with 45 fraternity members, Weiss commented on her move to California from Virginia.

"I look at everything as a challenge. I was in the throes of looking for a new life for myself. When they asked me about doing this I said, to myself, '45 young men? It can't be that bad.'"

"I love them and I wouldn't treat them any differently than my own kids," said Weiss when asked how she deals with members.

The social-professional fraternity emphasizes studying before partying according to President (commonly known as Noble Ruler) Steve Bennett. They do not allow alcohol at any functions, said Bennett.

Bennett also commented about their new housemother.

"I think it's great. 'Mom' does all right for herself. The frat people come and go and 'Mom' is a stabilizing factor.

"One lady in a room with 50 men changes the atmosphere," said Bennett.

Weiss is a widow from Blackburg, Virginia with two years of housemothering experience behind her. She worked for the Virginia Polytechnic University chapter of AGR before coming to California.

Weiss is against the practice of hazing and rowdiness in fraternity pledging.

"When pledges have been accepted they do ridiculous, silly, crazy things," she said. "It is childish, dangerous and serious. By the time I left Virginia there was no hazing. It's totally unnecessary."

Weiss said there have not been any problems at Cal Poly. If she sees something going on she doesn't approve of, she tells Noble Ruler.

"The boys govern themselves," she said.

Weiss hopes to make San Luis Obispo her permanent home and she is currently looking for a job in her career business, the hotel field. She receives a small monthly check and a free apartment from AGR.

When asked what she thought of the members of the fraternity, Weiss put a protective arm around Noble Ruler Steve Bennett and said, "I really just love them. They're an outstanding group of fellows."

Disabled students day

Volunteers take to wheelchairs

BY JEANNINE FRANUSICH

Daily Staff Writer

Volunteers from the faculty and student body will be confined to wheelchairs on Thursday to experience firsthand the frustrations and inconveniences disabled students encounter each day.

As part of the Disabled Student Awareness Day on Thursday, the volunteers will be expected to carry out the responsibilities they normally do, such as teaching or attending classes.

Volunteers may have a hard time getting in and out of certain buildings, especially the Business Administration Building and the cafeterias, said Ellen Cox, co-coordinator of the awareness day.

Cox said volunteers will experience problems people in wheelchairs face each day, such as reaching drinking fountains to get a drink of water. There will be "spies" on campus to make sure the volunteers do not cheat, she said.

Cox said the awareness day is designed to educate students, faculty members and staff people at Cal Poly. It will emphasize the capabilities of disabled people, she said.

There is an "attitudinal barrier" between the public and disabled people, Cox said. She said people pity and fear disabled people because they do not understand handicaps.

During the awareness day, special equipment designed for deaf and blind people, including a talking calculator, will be on display in the University Union Plaza. Recreational equipment for disabled people will also be shown there.

Recycling Mustang Daily is goal of ecology group

BY KARYN HOUSTON

Daily Staff Writer

When it comes to saving trees, at least one campus group said Mustang Daily readers can help.

Mark Elliot, president of the Cal Poly Ecology Action Club, said the group is setting up boxes throughout the campus so the newspaper can be recycled.

The self-supporting, 15-member club is not sponsored by any campus department or by the administration. At a recent interview with three members of the group, their concern for ecology was evident.

"Last year we made an $8 profit from recycling the Daily," said club member Kathy Peck. "Obviously, it's not the money, it's helping ourselves live with the earth, and trying to educate others."

As the group walked around campus—buildings checking recycling boxes they discussed their experience with the recycling program.

During spring quarter the club bought 20 wood boxes for students to throw papers in. By the end of the quarter, ten of those boxes had been stolen.

"They're perfect for storing record albums, and that's why people rip them off," said club president Mark Elliot.

The boxes have been chained this year to discourage theft.

Michael Wayt, treasurer for the club, said the group's goal is to have a recycling box in all 58 campus buildings, excluding residence halls.

He said if students recycle 125 pounds of newspaper they are saving a 35-foot tree. Since the Mustang Daily prints about 4800 pounds of newspapers in one month, 38 trees could be saved.

Other Ecology Club projects include a campus recycling program of bottles and cans. Wayt said the biggest obstacle to the project is that the administration does not want students recycling alcoholic beverage containers.

Campus gets new manager of finances

Anthony B. Flores assumed the duties of Cal Poly financial manager Monday, succeeding Harold Miller who had requested last month to return to a fulltime teaching position in the accounting department.

Flores, now one of five department heads in the Cal Poly Business Affairs Division, will direct the Financial Operations Department. He has administrative responsibility for payroll services, accounting, student financial aid accounts and budget planning and administration.

Business Affairs Director James Landreth said Flores was selected from 20 eligible applicants. After a screening committee reduced the number of applicants to six, Flores was appointed by Executive Vice President Dale Andrews on Landreth's recommendation.

Flores, 32, came to Cal Poly from a position as budget manager for Professional Community Management Inc., a non-profit organization in Laguna Hills. His experience also includes four years as a management analyst-auditor and assistant to the vice chancellor for Cal State University and Colleges business affairs; five years as controller and accountant for Purex Corporation; and three years as an accountant for Von's Grocery Co.

Fraternal problems

Where there are colleges, there are fraternities and sororities—and, it seems, problems with neighbors. San Luis Obispo residents recently expressed their dislike of Greeks living "next door." This is not an isolated instance but an increasingly common problem the City council needs to meet head on.

Laverne Schnieder, neighbor to Gamma Phi Beta sorority, announced at a press conference Tuesday, Oct. 16, she will submit a petition asking the council to reconsider earlier zoning changes. The rezoned areas allow the sorority to settle in a house on Higuera Street.

Schnieder pinpointed parking and noise as problems that she believes will be created by the sorority. Currently, Gamma Phi Beta is awaiting the OK from the city planning commission before it moves in.

At the same time, gripes similar to those expressed by Schnieder were being heard by neighbors of Alpha Epsilon Pi fraternity. Henry Engen, community development director, speaking out for residents, said "the place was like a real Animal House."

Also, he complained to the planning commission there were 10 parking spaces for 20 fraternity members. This meant fraternity brothers had to park in front of neighbors' houses. Later, the planning commission denied the fraternity a use permit for the house.

These problems are not unique to San Luis Obispo. Similar, city-Greek confrontations are occurring in San Diego where fraternity members from San Diego State University have been ridiculed by local residents.

At San Diego, Councilman James Dukes is proposing noise level restrictions. Dukes is also proposing new restrictions to fraternity house permits. The restrictions include a clause stipulating fraternities must get special permits before having parties. The permit would state length and noise level limits for the gathering.

Similar proposals should be investigated by the San Luis Obispo City Council. If Greeks wish to live within the city and next to single-family dwellings, concessions must be made. Uncontrolled parties within single-family neighborhoods cannot be tolerated and infringe on residents rights.

At the same time, the Greek system is a popular part of the Cal Poly campus and needs locations where they are neither over restricted or a burden to the neighborhood.

Greeks must not infringe on the neighbor's right to peaceful living. Until remote housing quarters—where little damage may occur—can be found, fraternities and sororites need to be restricted.

Otherwise, the ultimate decision the City County may face is whether to prohibit Greeks from single-family areas entirely.

Anti alcohol

Editor:

The opinion column of October 18 titled "More on alcohol" reflects the selfishness of on-campus alcohol proponents.

The article begins with the premise that "The liberty to buy beer on campus grounds would be nice because it would indeed be a liberty." By the same token, the liberty to kill would be nice because it would indeed be a liberty. Such logic fails to evaluate the impact of any given freedom upon another; it does not establish the importance of the proposed freedom relative to other personal liberties.

It therefore infuriates me when the pro-alcohol faction declares that "The chance to get a drink should belong to the ones who will be affected"—meaning the drinker. What they do not consider is the impact such a privilege will have on the rights of others.

Payment for the enclosing and policing of a special area for a select group (21-year-olds and older) would be made at the expense of all. Then, "Projects and programs which will prevent or at least minimize negative aspects . . ." of drinking on campus would be instituted to address the problems created by the original expenditure. Such programs would also be implemented using the resources and energies of the university.

The perception of the drive for on-campus alcohol as a crusade for individual choice is a faulty one. Drinkers have the choice of any number of bars and stores in town, experienced establishments which, regulated by the state, make a profit selling alcohol. Why should Cal Poly, in addition to its other burdens, assume with risk a role that the state and private enterprise are already successfully fulfilling within a mile of the campus?

A university creates an environment that is conducive to learning and is therefore to some extent artificial. To ask the university to support a transplanted segment of society that does not further education is unreasonable.

Restriction of on-campus alcohol is no more a prohibition than is the legal drinking age. Rather, it recognizes that the benefits of a convenient drink for a select group do not justify the expense and damage of liquor on campus.

School spirit

Editor:

The homecoming game this year was the most exciting, spirited and enthusiastic game of the year, and old friends did get together to have a good time. The three games prior to the one against University of Northern Colorado were among the most apathetic situations I have ever encountered as a cheerleader.

You might say our prompting a spirit contest during homecoming was enhanced by an incident prior to the Fresno State game. The cheerleaders had a quick five-minute rally in the athletic residence halls, in which the girls went through one of the halls shouting "BEAT FRESNO." It was a rather harmless and innocent gesture to excite our football team and to raise a little enthusiasm. Enthusiasm (?) indeed—every 4 letter word could be heard from the team. You call that school spirit, huh? The team lacked any sense of class.

I would like to interject that it was just a few of the players that showed the choice selection of vocabulary. Since we couldn't arouse the least bit of excitement in the team, we turned our time and energy toward another viable group on campus—the fraternities.

They were very responsive to our contest and we are indebted to their enthusiastic response. I am only sorry that those fraternities who were not heard or did not participate will do so at our next home game against Cal Poly Pomona.

Granted, during the UNC game, our squad was a little carried away with the "gift certificate," and we neglected some very important matters, but are you ever without fault? For our neglect, I am sorry, but I cannot apologize for those persons who will continue to sit in a designated area for rooters. Our intent was to lead the crowd and raise a little spirit but it appears that some persons are not ready or cannot relate to a good ol' college football game.

Homecoming coverage

Editor:

There is a problem in the Mustang Daily's coverage of student activities and I have finally found a need to express my disappointments in our beloved newspaper.

In the first place, the 1979 Homecoming story should have been on the front page, since it is closely related to student activities on campus. The alcoholism story would have been a better feature story further on in the newspaper. The most pressing problem is that student activities are not given adequate coverage in the Daily.

Just recently, the American Home Economics Association (AHEA) built a float with the Agricultural Engineering Society (AES) and the American Society of Agricultural Engineers (ASAE). After many hours of hard work, we were very proud of the finished product.

Much to our dismay, the Mustang Daily did not mention the Homecoming Parade nor the floats in its Homecoming coverage. The parade is very important in that the city of San Luis Obispo barricaded two main streets in town, just so Cal Poly students could display their creations.

Aero student sails remote-control gliders as hobby

Cal Poly student Tom Jones hangs on to his model glider before launching it into the blustery winds on the air strip.

BY MELISSA HILTON
Special to the Daily

Tom Jones, champion remote-control glider pilot, tossed his model plane into the wind. The glider whistled as it zoomed 400 feet almost straight up, pulled against the wind by 300 feet of fishing line and 100 feet of elastic rubber tubing tied to a fencepost at the Cal Poly airstrip.

When Jones shifted two control sticks on his radio transmitter, mechanisms inside the glider let go the launch line and moved the rudder and stabilizers on the tail. The plane swerved and soared, held up only by natural columns of rising air called thermals.

"Depending on the weather, I've gotten flights up to two hours long...and as short as 15 seconds," he said.

Jones won the national League of Silent Flight contest in 1978 with Tomahawk, a glider he had designed himself. It had a standard-class wingspan of 100 inches, Jones said, but he flew it in the class for larger planes.

The contest's single event was a 7-minute flight with a precision landing inside a circle. Out of several hundred contestants who entered at 10 locations around the country, Jones scored the most points.

At the airstrip, Jones was trying out a new plane he had assembled from a kit a few weeks before. The glider was made of balsa wood, plywood and a mylar film. Its wingspan was 118 inches (over 9 feet.)

The glider costs about $80 to $90 to build, Jones said. He spent another $400 on the radio.

Banks offer a variety of student checking plans

BY DEBBIE WARREN

Daily Staff Writer

Students checking accounts are about as diverse as the banks offering the services.

Bank of America requires students to deposit a $50 minimum into the account when starting a checking plan. If less than $300 is kept in the account, there is a dollar service charge monthly. The student plan has no limit to the number of checks which may be written.

The Bank of America student plan does not offer overdraft protection for overdrawn accounts. With a student BankAmericard, the bank will deposit multiples of $50 from that account into the checking account if it is overdrawn. An alternative overdraft protection is to have money transferred from savings account to checking account, which costs 75 cents per transfer.

Wells Fargo, formerly First Central Coast Bank, will offer a student plan beginning Nov. 2. The plan requires a minimum beginning balance of $25. The monthly charge is $1 for up to ten checks and 20 cents for each additional check. If the account is inactive over the summer months, there is no charge.

For overdraft protection Wells Fargo offers a student Master Charge account with an automatic loan advance. Students must be at least sophomores to apply.

Mid-State Bank on Santa Rosa Blvd. has no student plan, but they do offer a special account. With a minimum opening balance of $25, the account costs $1 a month and 10 cents per check. An account statement is issued every three months.

Mid-State's regular checking account costs 75 cents every month and 7 cents a check for accounts maintained under $200. There is no service charge for accounts held over that amount.

The Mid-State overdraft plan adds $10 increments to the savings account.

Security Pacific does not offer a student checking plan. Its checking account, for amounts under $100, costs 95 cents a month and 10 cents for every check. The Security Pacific Special Account serves people with between $100 and $200 in their account. This service costs 20 cents per check. The Grand Account serves people with more than $1000 in their account.

United California Bank (UCB) offers a student plan. The plan costs $1 a month. You must have at least $50 to deposit in order to open a checking account but that balance need not be maintained.

Overdraft protection is provided by the bank's Balance Plus Account. UCB guarantees all checks up to $200 in this account.

Crocker National Bank, located on Marsh Street, offers the least expensive student checking account of the six banks. It costs $6 a year and requires no minimum deposit or balance. This account offers unlimited check writing.

Overdraft protection is provided by the Bonus Balance Account. This service transfers money from the clients Master Charge account and the cost is $2.50 per transfer. Crocker also has a plan linking the savings and checking account. One dollar per transfer is charged.

Horse and rider got muddy, but the show was jumping

BY CAROLYN GOULDING

Daily Ag Writer

Despite cold winds and a muddy arena, the show went on.

The Intercollegiate and Open Fall Horse Show attracted 48 equestrians with about 55 horses from seven colleges to the Cal Poly Cutting and Reining arena last Saturday.

The all day event, sponsored by the Cutting and Reining Club, consisted of western classes in the morning and english classes in the afternoon. The jumping classes had to be postponed until the end of the show so the arena could dry from the rains.

Entered only in western division classes, Charlotte Stott from Cal Poly managed to win the high point individual of the show. Stott, who is not a member of the horse show team, earned 32 points in the seven classes that she entered.

Fresno State was the high point team overall and earned 49 points. Cal Poly Pomona followed with 47 points and Cal Poly San Luis Obispo was third with 37 points.

Pomona won the high point western division with 47 points. Pierce College and Fresno State tied for first in the english division with 30 points each. Pierce walked away with the trophy when one Pierce member out guessed a Fresno member in a coin toss and a number guess.

A local celebrity served as the ring side announcer of the show. Bill Larsen from KATY radio volunteered his time to announce at the horse show. He entertained the audience having experience announcing at local rodeos.

"This is my first horse show to announce at and the judge says that I'm the best one that he's had," said Larsen during a break between classes. "He's had hundreds of experienced announcers work for him, too. I've just been following instructions."

The judge, James A.G. Bennington, came up from Los Angeles to judge his first Cal Poly horse show. He said he was impressed with the participants.

"There has been a good turn out," said Bennington. "The attitudes of the riders is excellent. They don't hesitate to ask questions about their riding."

Other schools participating in the show were Reedley College, California Lutheran College and College of the Sequoias.

Trophies were awarded to the high scoring teams and first place individuals. Ribbons were awarded to first through sixth place in each class.

The next horse show to be sponsored by the Cutting and Reining Club will be during Poly Royal.

Cal Poly surfer nationally ranked

BY KELLYE WISE

Daily Staff Writer

Although Matt George is one of the top surfers in the United States, he is not content.

"I want to become ahead in the world, not just be another surf bum," said George. "I want to come across as an athlete, not as only a surfer."

George, a 20-year-old Cal Poly business major, was ranked third in the nation by the Western Surfing Association in 1978. Recently he took sixth place at the First California Pro Trial Qualifications sponsored by Stubbles of Australia. The contest was held at Black's Beach near San Diego, and featured the top 96 surfers in California. George felt that just as important as his finish was the impression he created.

"I think we left the best impression of any team there," said George, speaking of himself, brother Sam, Bob Sennett, and Dave Parmenter. The four surfers are the Surf n' Wear team which represents the central coast. "Our making a good impression was due to a professional attitude that we displayed. We are proud of the central coast and wanted to do well."

The team did very well in the competition. Besides Matt's sixth place finish, Dave Parmenter took third, and Sam George finished 15th. All three of the surfers will travel to Burleyheads, Australia, next March for the finals. George is hopeful that the success of he and his teammates will cause some new interest on the central coast. He said most of the coastline along the central California area is harsh for surfing. The waves are unrefined, and powerful, and the weather is often bad. However, George thinks that the central coast could eventually compete as an area with southern California as a surfing hotspot.

Three companies sponsor George in surfing contests. Besides Surf n' Wear, Rip Curl Wetsuits and McCoy Surfboards also back George. Rip Curl and McCoy are both Australian enterprises. According to George, sponsors are a necessity for any professional surfer due to the expenses of competing.

"Rip Curl came to me, and offered to back me," said George. "However, I went to McCoy. I presented myself, my WSA contest record, and my amateur standing, and they became my sponsors. It wasn't just luck, I pursued the opportunity."

George describes himself as an aggressive surfer, interested in being radical, but also showing style. His specialty is tube riding, a hard feat with the usual break of the California waves.

"Style is just as important as the maneuver," said George.

There is one other style that George worries about; the lifestyle most people think surfers have. Surfers aren't just a bunch of guys into drugs and drinking according to George. He wants people to see the surfer as an athlete.

"I'm into getting better, but having a good time," said George. "I'd give the friendships I made surfing the highest priority."

Danny Aldridge is the second man on Cal Poly's National Championship cross country team. When track season starts he will compete as an independent runner in the 1500 meter event.

Aldridge has Olympic vision

BY DON FAUL
Special to the Daily

Cal Poly Olympic hopeful Danny Aldridge said he is running the most miles he has ever put in while training for the Olympic trials to come in June.

Last year Aldridge won the NCAA Division II 1500 meter Championship. Since then, he said his times and workouts have been improving.

Aldridge said he first considered the Olympics seriously "as soon as I came here (to Cal Poly) . . . two years ago." Having always been a serious runner, Aldridge is now thinking only of the 1980 trials.

"Everything else is academic," he said.

"I still haven't really grasped the idea of competing with these names you really hear," the Olympic contender said.

Thinking ahead to the trials in June, Aldridge said, "I really feel the only spot left is the third spot." He said the third position is "up for grabs for whoever has the best day." The top three finishing runners will represent the United States in the Moscow Olympics.

During the summer, Aldridge finished seventh in the AAU Track and Field Championships which he feels indicated that he was seventh or eighth in the nation at that time.

Aldridge is now running for Cal Poly's cross country team. He has improved from last year to become second man behind defending champion Jim Schankel.

"I'm just using it (cross country) as a base for the upcoming season," Aldridge said, adding, "I haven't rested for a meet." He maintains his 95 mile-a-week training straight through meets.

Although his track eligibility expired last year, the physical education major will compete during the coming season as an independent runner.

Aldridge intends to train for the 1984 Olympics whether or not he competes in 1980. The 23-year-old feels "I've got a lot of running left in me."

Before coming to Cal Poly in 1977, Aldridge finished fourth in the Pacific 8 Conference in the 1500 as a freshman for the University of Southern California. He then spent a year in junior college and became an NCAA division I All American in 1977.

Starting his running career as a sophomore at Petaluma High School, Aldridge met with "success right off the bat." When his best friend persuaded him to run he joined the cross country and track teams and improved instantly.

"We're known nationally more than we are in our own school . . . and that's kind of sad," the senior said.

allow your plants to drink when they need to!

Waterite planters offer a unique solution to an old problem. How much and how often do you water your plants? Waterite self-watering planters feed the plants at the root level as Mother Nature intended. Through the osmosis process and a controlled absorption rate developed exclusively by Waterite, your plants draw moisture into the roots only as required, thus avoiding over or under watering. All that is required of the plant owner is to periodically check the water level of the reservoir as individual plants need differing amounts of water to remain healthy. Depending on climate, type of plant, etc., you may only need to add water monthly, weekly or bi-weekly.

Senators will go to Cambodia

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Three U.S. senators will go to Phnom Penh on Wednesday with a new proposal to aid Cambodia's starving people. They will be the first U.S. officials to visit the capital since the communist takeover in April 1975.

Sens. James Sasser, D-Tenn., John Danforth, R-Mo., and Max Baucus, D-Mont., would like to get a green light from the Phnom Penh government for their plan of sending truck convoys carrying a daily load of 1,000 tons of food into the country from Thailand for six months.

The senators said they had no itinerary for their one-day trip.

Spokesman Craven Crowell said the senators, who will fly in a Red Cross relief plane, were "excited about the prospect of going to Phnom Penh" but had no assurance that they would meet with any Cambodian officials there.

Although aid programs have begun for the estimated 2 million people who face starvation, Phnom Penh continues publicly to refuse aid from agencies who also supply areas controlled by ousted Premier Pol Pot. The remnants of Pol Pot's supporters are waging a guerrilla war against the Heng Samrin government that was installed by Vietnam last winter.

Arrangements for the senators' trip were made with the consent of the Vietnamese Embassy in Bangkok, and of Vietnam's acting foreign minister Nguyen Co Thach who is visiting Thailand.

In Washington, the State Department said no executive branch officials would be entering Cambodia despite the presence in Thailand of Richard Holbrooke, assistant secretary of state for Far Eastern affairs.

House completes rationing bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House completed congressional action Tuesday on a standby gasoline rationing bill, sending the measure to the White House on a 301-112 vote.

The legislation, a compromise between versions previously passed by the House and Senate, would give the president authority to ration gasoline during a severe fuel shortage.

Framers of the compromise stressed that the legislation was written in a way to assure that rationing could be considered only as a last resort.

Under the compromise, the president could order rationing if gasoline or diesel fuel supplies dropped by 20 percent. However, either house of Congress could block the action during a 15-day review period.

Affair ends with $80,000 bill

PROVIDENCE R.I. (AP) — A man who sued his best friend for stealing his wife and won an $80,000 court settlement said Tuesday the case will help protect the family structure in America.

"They said you couldn't win a case like this in 1979, but we did," said Gerald P. Zarella, the jilted husband.

Zarella, of West Warwick, was commenting on a Monday order by a Superior Court jury that Sidney H. Robinson pay $80,000 of the $1 million requested in the suit.

"People are finally starting to wake up. Pope John Paul has pleaded for family unity, and President Carter has issued statements on it, too," said Zarella, 34. "We need to keep families as tight as possible, and this case may help avoid breakups."

A jury of four men and two women found that Robinson, 36, also of West Warwick, had "criminal conversation" with Zarella's 33-year-old wife, Lila.

In his instructions to the jury, Judge Ronald R. Laguex defined "criminal conversation" as violation of a spouse's right to "exclusive privileges of physical intercourse."

Shah in hospital with cancer

NEW YORK (AP) — Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, deposed ruler of Iran, has been admitted to New York Hospital Cornell Medical Center, and a State Department spokesman in Washington said today the shah has cancer and a blocked bile duct.

Meanwhile, department spokesman Hodding Carter said the length of the shah's stay in the United States would depend on his medical condition.

The spokesman, who asked not to be identified, gave no further details.

Steakhouse murderer sentenced

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A judge on Tuesday sentenced Roger Dale Stafford to die Jan. 17 for murdering six steakhouse workers during a $1,300 robbery.

"I'm innocent, I didn't do this crime," Stafford said before the sentencing by District Judge Charles Owens. The judge had the choice of either accepting the jury's recommendation that Stafford be executed or of ordering a new trial.
