"The State of the University"

Baker discusses athletic funding, faculty offices

By DONALD MUNRO
Staff Writer

Private offices for faculty members were on the mind of President Warren Baker Thursday as he gave Mustang Daily an abbreviated version of a "State of the University" message.

Also on the mind of Cal Poly's chief executive:

- Funding for athletic scholarships.
- A new performing arts center.
- His relationship with students and faculty.
- De-centralization of administrative decision making.

Faculty members are entitled to private offices for the sake of both students and professors, Baker said from his spacious fourth floor office in the Administration Building. "(Faculty) need the space for their own work and professional development."

It's part of an attempt to improve factors that directly influence the quality of the environment for the faculty — an important issue for Baker.

Currently there are 213 offices on campus occupied by more than one faculty member. New offices will be available when the new Engineering Building opens this summer.

In addition, construction will start in July on a new Agriculture Building located in front of the Campus Store.

There's also the possibility of another Faculty Office Building, although nothing has yet been decided, said Baker.

"We're trying to establish with the Chancellor's Office what can be done," he said.

Regarding funding for athletic scholarships, Baker said that ultimately funding should come entirely from the private sector.

"I support intercollegiate athletics, and interpret the student's view as being supportive," he said. "It's my view that the student body wants a broad array of team sports."

However, scholarships are a different matter. Eventually they should be completely funded by private support and from such groups as the newly formed SUMAT (Support University Mustang Athletic Teams), he said.

"Up to this point we have had to rely on some degree of support from the Foundation. Eventually I would like to see the entire program put on private support."

Baker said his goal is to reach a stable level of funding for the scholarship program, and that the current athletic program can be sustained at the same level in future years as it is today.

On the subject of a new performing arts facility on campus, Baker said he wants to see such a facility built and is investigating the best way that can be accomplished.

"I think it's extremely important that we have a good cultural life on campus," he said. That includes a facility that is larger and more versatile than the Cal Poly Theatre, which was designed mainly for theatrical productions.

In the past it's been thought that a performing arts center would have to be jointly constructed with the community because of limited state funding.

Because of the improved state budget situation Baker said he is now leaning more toward using the state capital investment program to construct the facility.

"Our prospects are better today to achieve something on our own," he said.

As far as Baker's image and his relationship with students and faculty, he responded to the perception that he spends a lot of time off-campus and is far removed from the Cal Poly community.

Director discusses issues of Foundation to Senate

By LEANNE ALBERTA
Staff Writer

Several issues currently facing the Foundation were discussed at the Student Senate meeting held Wednesday night.

Al Amaral, executive director of the Foundation, opened up the special reports at the meeting. "We are a non-profit corporation," Amaral said. "That doesn't mean to infer that we don't make a profit because we do."

Amaral said that each of the Foundation's operations is self-sufficient and that each operation does not usually participate in the funding of other operations.

The Foundation's net income last year was $903,000. Even though the bookstore's net income was $252,000 last year, Amaral stressed that not all the Foundation's income was generated by the bookstore. A large percentage was generated by other Foundation operations such as food service, which had a net income of $319,000 last year.

Amaral said the possibility of a bookstore annex is currently being considered at the Foundation staff level.

"We are evaluating the combination of the bookstore and food service," Amaral explained. "The Campus Store is very popular and that quadrant of the campus is growing."

Amaral also addressed the Foundation's funding of the University Union.

"If we ever reach the point where there are surplus retained earnings to the needs of the bookstore then we would revert to the UU these earnings for its use," Amaral said. "If this happens we have to decide whether to continue operating the bookstore as we have or cut prices."

Amaral said that the Foundation had advanced $300,000 to the Athletic Department from general Foundation funds.

"The Athletic Department has assured us that they will try extra hard to get funds to pay off the $300,000 loan," Amaral said. "They will have to depend quite a bit on support from students on this campus."

Amaral also discussed the President's Discretionary Fund. The fund receives contributions from private donors for use for university conferences, travel expenses and for special interest groups brought on campus.

"The President's Discretionary Fund is monitored by my staff and approved by my office," Amaral stressed. Amaral added that he scrutinizes this fund

Tree planted to observe holiday

Members of Haverim, Cal Poly's Jewish student club, observed Tu B'Shevat Wednesday by planting a tree on the lawn near the Cal Poly Theatre.

Tu B'Shevat is a Jewish holiday, celebrated on the 15th of Shevat, a month on the Jewish calendar. It is considered the new year of the tree.

In modern times, said Haverim President Paul Lewis, this celebration represents the revival and redemption of the land by a symbolic conquest of the wilderness. The students at Cal Poly chose to plant the tree to demonstrate their awareness for the need to return something to their community and to the environment.

Russell Brown, dean of students, was at the ceremony. He said that the tree planting was significant for the university because "it underlines the kind of diverse society we live in."

An accompanying ceremony was conducted by members of the club and Rabbi Harry Manhoff of San Luis Obispo and included traditional prayers, readings from the Psalms and the eating of 15 fruits. The tree, a Cinnomom camphora, was donated by Tropicana Nursery of Morro Bay.

Encouraging prosperity

A worker's knowledge that he or she is appreciated by an employer is paramount to the successful completion of assigned duties.

One of the most basic ways to show appreciation for an employee is by monetary compensation.

Unfortunately, the money has not been flowing out to the most deserving members of the faculty and staff on this or any other campus in the California State University System.

The reason for this lack of funds lies in the attitude of the residents of California and the elected officials who represent them.

Although the Cal Poly administration has been trying hard to persuade those in power to finally recognize the need to encourage those in the educational community through increased pay and benefits; they have only begun to see an improvement.

President Baker, recently told the Mustang Daily that he is planning to implement a new program, on behalf of the administration, to further the morale of the faculty and staff.

He has said that he supports the idea of faculty merit payment in order to recognize those members of the teaching corps who perform above and beyond the call of duty.

He also wants to see an improvement of the overall environment for faculty with the possibility of providing individual offices. He is working with the Academic Senate to get input from faculty about the issues that concern them.

The Mustang Daily Editorial Board encourages this action and wishes him luck.

Afterall, an appreciated faculty will work harder and the educational process will be greatly improved.

Baker's new effort, combined with a reversal in the declining pay levels, holds signs of prosperity for the entire university.

Working together, we can all reach the unique potential that Cal Poly has before it.

Letters

Reader urges respect for views Bicyclist claims a lack of racks is root of problems

Editor:

We've seen it many times before in Ann Lander's column and now it's my turn to say I never thought I'd write this letter, but the last round of pros and cons concerning the abortion issue, the music awards and the ads for the theater showing the skin flicks sets me into motion.

We've all read with interest, the opinions by both supporting and dissenting views of these issues. Some believe abortion is murdering an innocent human. With the issue of the music awards, some feel black musicians are being slighted, some interpret it to mean that they are getting too much attention. Lastly, we have the pro- and the anti-porno ad people.

My point is this: What I see too often is people trying very hard to support their own views and change others' minds while disregarding almost totally what the other side is really trying to say. I don't mean that everyone should think the same, except on at least this one point, that we need to try harder to understand what our detractors are saying because there is, more than we want to admit, some truth in what they are proposing. Didn't we all learn in Speech 101 that the art of communicating consists first of listening hard and then, second, of banging your opponent over the head with your views. Seems to me a lot of us are doing it the other way around. This narrow-mindedness is shown by some responses to opposing opinions when these responses take statements out of context to try to make their opponent look like a jackass. Better go take a harder look in the mirror, jack, your tail is showing.

I am concerned with this lack of respect for others and their opinions because if it continues, so will all our problems. Would you laugh if I said this is precisely the problem being faced in Geneva, Central America, Kampuchea, Afghanistan, the Middle East, San Luis Obispo and in our own living rooms?

Bob MacLean

Newspapers deserve criticism

Editor:

Mr. Foote's letter (Feb. 4) is an expression of the same "naive unresearched ideal" about which he complains. All too often, defenders of the press appeal to mythical first principles. Is a free press "for the purpose of representing all sectors of society?" Who created that "purpose?" A history of the press will not tell us.

News fills a need in the same way as anything which has a market — but a press is not mandated by the Constitution, and disapproving of the way in which the press handles something is not censorship. Censorship can only be done by the press itself or by those who control it, not by disgruntled readers. Narrowly stated, a free press is a press that is free from government control. A free press need not represent all aspects of society; for example, no press should represent the interests of child molesters just because they are a part of society.

The fact is that the press frequently degrades the subjects of its articles and photographs, even when they are blameless, and when there is no need for the public to know about them — beyond idle curiosity or voyeurism. Defenders of the press like to use the slippery-slope argument and the bogeyman of censorship to justify any tacky proceedings, arguing as the handgun enthusiasts do that any criticism is an attempt at control, and that any control will lead inevitably to totalitarianism. If we discount their first principles we can see that, whatever else is involved, the press is a part of the entertainment industry, and that as long as something sells, it will continue to appear in some part of the press. As consumers, we have the right to complain, our complaints are properly directed towards editors, and such complaints are not — in themselves — censorship. Can no one but a newspaper person criticize the newspapers?

Charles Wm. Strong

Editor:

I must write this letter in response to the Daily's article on Jan. 29, which dealt with bicyclists and the problems associated with them that seem to continually erupt on this campus.

First I'd like to thank whoever it was that was responsible for painting the "Green Lane" on the inner perimeter — it has erased a lot of potential conflicts between bikes and pedestrians. Now at least I won't feel as guilty if I run into one of the few pedestrians who insist on lingering in that lane.

As one of the many students utilizing a bicycle as a wonderful instrument of transportation and exercise, I do understand these problems that can arise with traffic violations, accidents, etc. I also feel the criticism of blocking handicap access is a legitimate one, but this problem stems from the fact that there is an extreme shortage of locations to park your bike. We need more racks.

I don't know who places those dangling yellow tags on the handlebars (has anyone ever seen them?); or how they can so consciously tie these messages to that tell you to put your bike in designated racks when its parked to see there are no available openings. This can best be seen everyday in front of the library.

Perhaps through the student union, the administration, or whatever bureaucratic path is necessary, some consideration can be given to the bicycle parking problem by construction of additional racks. It would be a bally please not only to bicyclists, but those requiring handicap access as well.

'Average' definition is questioned

Editor:

This letter is in response to the letter from Douglas Rosenfeld published in response to my letter, which was in response to the letter from Al Polito (in regards to the issue about printing the Log Cabin ad in the Mustang Daily).

I'd like to thank Mr. Rosenfeld for the law lesson. He referred to the California Penal Code, section 311.5, subsection A, which defined obscene matter as matter: 1) that has shameful or no bid interest in nudity or sex, as determined by the average person. I'd like Mr. Rosenfeld to introduce me to this average person so that I could get his definition of obscene matter and then make myself a list of book magazines, TV shows and movies that I should not see. I should protect me.

BAKER

Washington D.C., where he sits on the Board for International Food and Agricultural Development.

Committees ranging from statewide industrial education to the recruitment of minority students also take a lot of Baker's time. A plaque in Baker's office reads: "God so loved the world he didn't send a committee."

So far his efforts in fund raising have paid off, he said. In 1980 a total of $200,000 was donated to the university. Six million dollars has already been raised so far during the 1984-85 academic year.

And as far as his relationship with students and faculty, Baker said he meets regularly with ASI president Kevin Creighton, and also accepts speaking invitations to student organizations and classes.

The informal get-togethers with faculty that Baker used to hold Friday afternoons will be started again in the future to get to improve faculty relations, he said.

Finally, Baker considers the improvement of the administrative decision making process to be one of his achievements for the year.

"It's primarily ways of improving communication and decentralizing decision making in the university," he said.

That includes giving more authority to school deans to appoint department heads and cutting down on administrative bureaucracy, he said.

more than any others because President Baker wants to be above board and have all of his actions open to the public.

Ivan Sanderson, El Corral Bookstore manager, discussed student concerns regarding the bookstore. Sanderson explained the rate of return for every dollar students spend at the bookstore.

"72% of every dollar spent goes for the cost of goods," Sanderson said. "Add about 23% for personnel costs and 6 to 6½% for other expenses. Another 4% is netted out before the paid share of administration fees."

Amaral added that the Foundation is not planning to cut any programs because of fiscal losses.

"The agriculture program lost $10,711 last year, but this year they are doing well," Amaral said. "We have no plans to drop any programs in ag. We do a lot of things in Foundation that are not always concerned with fiscal results."

"It's going to be tough, but my personal opinion is that the state doesn't support programs like ag like it should," explained Amaral. "If ag units were not providing appropriate education then we'd pull out. The people in the School of Agriculture are making long-term plans to increase their net profits and educational standards."

'Effervescence of Harlem': 1920s spotlight

By LISA MCKINNON

Special to the Daily

The celebration of Black History Month at Cal Poly, meant to generate awareness of the contributions Afro-Americans have made to United States history, began Thursday with a lecture entitled "The Politics of Culture: The Harlem Renaissance."

In it, Professor David L. Lewis of Howard University spoke on the emergence of black writers during the "remarkable effervescence of Harlem in the '20s."

A writer himself, Lewis has authored six books, including When Harlem Was in Vogue, and King: A Critical Biography.

"It was a time when the cultural spotlight was shining on blacks as never before," Lewis said of the roaring '20s. Charles Johnson, a young black sociologist who edited Opportunity magazine at the time, had a lot to do with the appearance of black talent on the literary scene when he got the idea to start the Civic Club, Lewis added.

Johnson felt that American literature lacked intensity, and that if negro writers couldn't breathe some life into it, no one could, Lewis said. So Johnson invited blacks and whites alike to join the Civic Club, the primary purpose of which was to create an alliance between the movers and shakers of both the white and black communities.

"No one took literature seriously in the United States," Lewis said with a laugh, "so you could have racial interaction without suspect in that context."

The financial abilities of better-known white writers (Eugene O'Neill was a Civic Club member), would aid the publication of black writers' works and encourage the reading of literature by negro authors about negro life, Johnson maintained.

"He wanted to stimulate and foster writing by negroes that shook free of the usual stereotypes," Lewis said. "He was saying, 'We have poets and intellectuals too, just like you.'"

From its first meeting in 1924, the Civic Club continued to promote the growing number of promising black poets and novelists it enlisted, aided by the publication of their works in Johnson's Opportunity (circulation, 42,000).

The racial enlightenment Johnson sought in the '20s is continued now through the observance of Black History Month.

Although the month has been celebrated nationally for 50 years, the Cal Poly campus observance began only three years ago, said Dr. Willie Coleman, advisor for the Black History Month Commission and the Afro-American Student Union. Both groups have taken an active role in organizing the month's events.

"Black History Month begins to educate," Coleman said. "The role of a university is to open people up to experiences they wouldn't have had if they stayed home. Most people have had no interaction at all with black culture, other than watching television specials, which is an unrealistic way to go about it," she added.

A lecture entitled "Human Rights" by rights activist, social satirist, author, actor and recording artist Dick Gregory is the next Black History Month event. It is scheduled for 7 p.m., Feb 11 in Chumash Auditorium. Tickets are $3.50 for students and $4.50 general.

Poly team hosts their first ROTC meet Saturday

By T. WILLIAMS

Staff Writer

Cal Poly's ROTC Ranger Challenge Team will host UC Santa Barbara and Fresno State University in their first meet Saturday at Camp San Luis Obispo.

The meet will begin at 8 a.m. and consist of four events: marksmanship, a 10-mile forced march, orienteering and the actual construction and crossing of a rope bridge.

The members of the eight-man team are Nelson Almera, Marcos Della, Mike Harris, Rod McDonald, Steven Rehmann, Tarn Warren, Bill Cunningham and Alan Moore. They were selected after an inter-corp competition on Jan. 19 involving the same four events with the exception of the rope bridge, which was replaced by knot tying.

The Ranger Challenge is a new competition this year between teams throughout the nation. Teams will compete against each other in hopes of reaching the finals in Ft. Lewis, Wash. in the spring.

Major Michael Robinson said because this is the first year of competition, he isn't sure how the team will do. "It will be interesting to see," he said. "But I think we'll be respectable." He also added that students are encouraged to come cheer the cadets on.

The colle responsib of pet ow

By CHRIS COUNTS
Staff Writer

To many Cal Poly students, the idea of owning a puppy or kitten is irresistible.

The novelty of owning a pet, however, often wears off about the same time the realities of raising it set in.

The Woods Humane Society, located at 4679 Broad St., has heard this story too many times.

"Every May we have a flood of animals turned in by students who are going home for summer break," Humane Society employee Cathy Stratford said. "We're sort of a 'Poly Dump.'"

Although most students live in small apartments, the size of the pet is rarely a consideration.

"Students have a tendency to try to raise a large breed of puppy in an apartment," Humane Society shelter manager Claire Adams said. "Students also have a tendency to adopt pets without consulting roommates or landlords."

"I think there are very few dogs suitable for an apartment," Stratford said. "But most students want a big dog, like a Great Dane or a German Shepard. Cats, birds, and fish are fine for apartments, but not dogs."

Because it's a sport that gets its participants excited and enthusiastic, it was only a matter of time before architecture student Chris Heinritz and engineering student Steve Pendleton formed the Cal Poly Windsurf Club.

The club was officially formed fall quarter and had successful outings at Lopez Lake and Arroyo Laguna (near Hearst Castle).

"I believe it's one of the best sports around and I wanted to get as many people involved as possible," said Heinritz, president of the club.

Unsure about finding enough members, Heinritz and Pendleton set up a booth in the University Union Plaza during activity hour.

Silly student is new Miss San Luis County

SUSAN EDMONDSON

When Sue Menig just missed a try for the title of Miss San Luis County, she put on the same gown and tried again — years later. And this time she won.

On January 26 Sue Menig, a senior administration major, was crowned Miss San Luis County.

The women from all parts of the county competed in the pageant, which included evening gown and swimsuit competitions, a five-minute interview and a contest.

Miss San Luis Obispo County, Menig will compete in the Miss California Pageant in April and if she wins there she'll be the Miss America Pageant.

Seven years ago, in 1978, she almost won a different title. At the age of 19, she was the runner-up for Miss Santa Barbara County.

"I had a real good experience and I decided to go back to it again. It gets in your

"I'm very happy representing San Luis Obispo," Menig said. "If any place is home, it's here. I've done so much growing up and living here."

Menig enjoys singing blues and jazz. In the pageant she sang a George Gershwin song called, "Someone to Watch Over Me."

"That's my dream — to be a singer. I've been singing ever since I could pick up a guitar," Menig said. "I'm hoping that I will win Miss California because that will open a lot of doors right there as far as my singing career."

Menig wasn't thinking about a singing career, though, when her name was announced at the pageant. "I had to admit that the first thing that went through my head when they called my name was, I had just ruined by parents' vacation. They were planning on leaving almost to the day of the Miss California Pageant to go back east."

Menig will spend the next five months preparing for the Miss California Pageant. Maloney's Gym and Pat Jackson's American Dance studio have donated their services to help Menig get in shape for the pageant. Menig will also take advantage of free services from a hair stylist, a manicurist and a color consultant.

A $5,000 wardrobe donated from local merchants will provide her with clothes for the Miss California Pageant. Menig also won a $500 scholarship.

"A lot of people don't really know about what the pageant is about. They think it's a silly little beauty pageant and it couldn't be further from the truth. If it were a beauty pageant I wouldn't have entered."

Menig will be busy in the next months making special appearances and singing for clubs and organizations. When she's not appearing as Miss San Luis Obispo County, Menig said she doesn't have any problem just being herself.

"When I'm at school and I'm just me and I have classes from eight in the morning until seven at night I'm not going to wear high heels. I don't wear a whole lot of make-up. I prefer not to unless I absolutely, absolutely have to. I spent two hours putting on that stage make-up."

If a singing career or the title of Miss California don't intervene, Menig would like to work in sales for a large company and eventually start her own business. "The more I've gotten involved the more I have enjoyed business and it's something I would like to try my hand at," Menig said.

She is interested in starting a business as a color and wardrobe consultant for college students and other people preparing for job interviews. "I was born to be my own boss," Menig said.

If she wins Miss California and makes it all the way to the title of Miss America, Menig is prepared for the dedication and responsibility that come with the title. "I can remember looking up to Miss America. I think every little girl dreams about being a princess and it's the closest thing to being a princess that you can get without having blue blood."

A defense against cancer can be cooked up in your kitchen.

There is evidence that diet and cancer are related. Follow these modifications in your daily diet to reduce chances of getting cancer.

1. Eat more high-fiber foods such as fruits and vegetables and whole-grain cereals.
2. Include dark green and deep yellow fruits and vegetables rich in vitamins A and C.
3. Include cabbage, broccoli, brussels sprouts, kohlrabi and cauliflower.
4. Be moderate in consumption of salt-cured, smoked and nitrite-cured foods.
5. Cut down on total fat intake from animal sources and fats and oils.
6. Avoid obesity.

Getting a job: look, act, dress the part

By SUSAN EDMONDSON
Staff Writer

If it's true that clothes make the man, then clothes must make the executive also.

On Wednesday night about 150 students attended Dress for Success, a fashion show and seminar designed to help students prepare for that important job interview.

John Keating, assistant store manager at Macy's in San Mateo, discussed interview attire and the importance of body language at an interview. Keating said that he has interviewed many people for positions at Macy's.

"What it comes down to, you've got to look the part, you've got to act the part, if you want to get that part and that part is, of course, a job."

Keating cautioned students against slouching in the chair or giving a weak handshake that reminds the recruiter of sushi. He said maintaining eye contact with the interviewer projects self-confidence, but too much self-confidence can also hurt. "You don't want to act as if you're doing the recruiter a favor by being there," Keating said.

Researching the job, the company and the industry is important to do before students go into the interview. "The recruiter might be looking for things like maturity level, your judgment, your insight, your poise, self-confidence — those kinds of things," he said.

Linda Olmscheid, a registered image and color consultant, talked about choosing colors that are right for the individual. "The first thing that we need to establish are the colors that make you shine and each of us has the ability to shine," Olmscheid said.

Olmscheid did a quick color analysis for one man and one woman chosen from the audience. By draping various fabric swatches on business major Daran Littlefield, Olmscheid determined that Littlefield had a blue undertone to his skin. Everybody has either a blue or yellow undertone to their skin, Olmscheid said.

"When we're doing a color analysis what we're looking for is Daran's face," she said. Olmscheid determined that Littlefield was a winter season, which means that he looks best in winter shades.

Career Placement adviser Donna Davis gave students hints on some of the small things that can create a bad impression at an interview. She said that last year more than 12,000 interviews were handled by the Placement Center.

Davis cautioned women against wearing pant suits, putting on too much perfume or having flashy, dangling earrings. White tube socks are out for men and everybody should avoid arriving for the interview lugging a bulky backpack.

The right hairstyle is also important. "There was one recruiter we had last quarter who came in with a ponytail down to his waist. Now that's fine for the recruiter because he has a job," Davis said. "You might be a Cyndi Lauper fan or a Madonna fan but coming in with some of those hairstyles will not impress Touche Ross or some of the other recruiters."

"Try to check out the people who are already working in those positions. It differs from one field to the next. Someone in advertising or public relations may be able to be a little bit more flamboyant than someone who's in accounting or some of the more business-related fields," Davis said.

In addition to the three speakers, Dress for Success also featured a fashion show with student models from Cal Poly business clubs. Charcoal, brown, and blue suits were most common with both the men and the women. Most students wore their own suits but some of the outfits were loaned by The Village Squire in San Luis Obispo.

Decked out in a red beret, a shocking blue shirt and green tennis shoes, senior business major Bob Ehlers demonstrated the best way to ruin any chances of a job with IBM or any other company.

Dress for Success was presented by the American Marketing Association and other Cal Poly business clubs. Proceeds from the event will begin a memorial scholarship in the name of Lola Ada, a Cal Poly business student killed last year. Money earned from Dress for Success will also be donated to R.S.V.P., the Retired Senior Volunteer Program.

Shop has the usual pickings, arrangements

By TED LEWIS
Staff Writer

The Ornamental Horticulture Department at Cal Poly has its own store to sell the plants that are grown through the department.

The store is the Poly Plant and Floral Shop, located at the Ornamental Horticulture Department.

The location of the store is the main reason that many people don't know about the store. Department Head Professor Ronald Regan said, "The store would get more recognition and business if it wasn't so isolated from the rest of the campus by being located up at the OH Department."

Even though the Poly Plant and Floral Shop isn't very well known by some of the students and faculty at Cal Poly, it still does a pretty good business. Last year the shop did $60,000 in sells of plants and material, said Regan. With the bulk of the sells taking place during Poly Royal, where an estimated 10,000 people or more came to the department to look around the facility.

The advertising that is done for the shop is centered around the students and faculty of Cal Poly. Poly Plant and Floral Shop Manager, Jackie Penfold said, "We don't advertise off-campus because we don't want to compete with other floral businesses in the town."

The plant shop is funded by the state, said Penfold. Because the shop is state funded, local retailers get mad if the prices at the Poly Plant and Floral Shop are lower than their prices.

"We are not trying to compete with the local florist shops, it is a learning experience for us," said Penfold. "We can be more daring student.

"There are display beds planted with different plants and shrubbery to give people ideas for landscaping and to help them with the problems they might have when doing their landscaping," said Carson. "We also have 33,000 square feet of greenhouse they are the only ones because we don't want to take business away from the local florists," said Regan.

"The main purpose of the shop is to provide a selling place for the students enterprise projects," said Regan.

An enterprise project can be done by students in the school of agriculture. These projects give the students experience in production of various plants as well as general nursery experience, said Regan.

"The students grow their enterprise projects and are assigned an account number when the plants are sold through the floral shop," said Penfold.

The students get to keep two-thirds of the net profit and the remaining profit goes back to the Foundation. The profit—the Foundation receives is put in an account to purchase materials for other enterprise projects and to develop facilities or buy equipment for the OH Department, said Regan.

"Such things as the enterprise projects and the Poly Plant and Floral Shop are what make our students so valuable. Because they have practical hands-on experience in production, said Regan.

The Poly Plant and Floral Shop will have a Valentines special, running February 7-13. The shop will also be selling flowers in front of the Campus Store on Valentine's Day.

The Poly Plant and Floral Shop is open Monday through Friday, 1 to 5 p.m., and Saturday, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.. in styling our floral arrangements because students can experiment with new designs."

The Cal Poly OH Department covers 15 acres, the largest department of its kind for undergraduates in the United States, said John Carson, a senior ornamental horticulture space to grow plants in a more productive environment."

Students involved in the Student American Institute of Floral Design (S.A.I.F.D.) do the floral arrangements, corsages and wedding arrangements.

Sequoia gets first award

The first ever "Most Spirited Hall Award" was given to Sequoia Hall for participating the most in last Fall's intramural sports, the program coordinator for the Housing Department said.

Following Sequoia Hall's efforts was Fremont Hall which earned second place, and Yosemite Hall in third.

According to Jeff Sauer "The Most Spirited Hall Award does not simply reward the champions, but it acknowledges the kids for their participation in the various sports and tournaments held throughout the quarter."

Because there are approximately 3,000 students living on campus, the housing department would like to see as many of those students and hall communities involved as possible.

The award is a cooperative effort between rec sports and the housing department and will be given out at the end of each quarter, Sauer said.

Softball team even after tough tourney

By NANCY ALLISON
Staff Writer

First-year women's softball coach Denny Martindale is pleased with his team's performance last weekend, and with good reason.

The Mustangs earned a 3-3 record in a round-robin tournament at U.C. Santa Barbara against all Division I competition, including Long Beach State, Stanford, and the hosting Gauchos.

Poly got off to a slow start, dropping its first two games Friday. The first was a 1-0 loss to Santa Barbara and the second was a 5-0 defeat at the hands of Long Beach State.

The momentum picked up on Saturday, when the Mustangs stomped the Stanford women 5-1. But later on that day Poly lost for the second time to the too-tough Gauchos, 2-0.

On Sunday the women were in full form as they avenged Long Beach State with a 1-0 win and scored their second win over Stanford, 6-1.

Poly's Randi Hill threw a three-hit shut-out against Long Beach on Sunday, and Kristin Yaminishi scattered five hits in the second game against Stanford.

Kristin Yaminishi went 1-0 on the mound, while Randi Hill went 2-1, and Nancy Eckert went 0-2.

The Mustang women have this week off to prepare for their toughest week on the schedule when they visit Division I powers Cal State Fullerton on Feb. 14 and UCLA on Feb. 15.

Olympics prime-time Seoul starting times for U.S. TV

The international sports federations of most "major" Olympic events — those attracting the greatest United States interest — have agreed to starting times which will provide American television viewers with prime-time medal competition at the 1988 Seoul Summer Games.

"Most federations have agreed to some form of time change," said Barry Frank, a vice president of Transworld International, which represents close to 40 sports federations and organizations and is in the business of selling events to television.

Frank, who negotiated the $309 million contract for ABC's coverage of the 1988 Winter Games in Calgary, Alberta, is perhaps a month away from opening the bidding for Seoul. The contract, to be awarded in April, will dwarf the $245 ABC paid for the '84 Los Angeles Summer Olympics.

And the better the time slots for the American viewers, the bigger the payoff. With the 11-hour time difference between the United States and South Korea, prime-time telecasts here will mean semifinals and finals between 7 and 10 a.m. there.

It has been a struggle to get the rest of the world to "think American," but the return — what will certainly be the biggest single-event TV contract ever signed — helps.

"The United States represents only 10 percent of the homes watching the Olympics," Frank said, "but it'll be providing 80 percent of the TV money. The International Olympic Committee, the organizers in Seoul and the federations just can't ignore that."

NBA Roundup

76ers have a hard Threath to thwart

The name is Sedale Threath — pronounced Threath. He hasn't, however, been much of a scoring threat — pronounced threat — averaging just 5.2 points a game for the Philadelphia 76ers.

The second-year guard from West Virginia Tech scored 10 of his 16 points in the final quarter Wednesday night as the 76ers rallied from an 82-77 deficit after three periods and beat the Washington Bullets 116-111.

"I'm getting more playing time, and that's helped me," said Threath, who shot 7-for-10 and also had three rebounds and three assists. "I've always been a confident player and I've always been a good distance shooter."

Moses Malone led the Sixers with 27 points and 20 rebounds while Maurice Cheeks added 25 points and Julius Erving 21.

Greg Ballard had 28 points, Jeff Malone 27 and Tom McMillen 20 for Washington, which dropped its fourth in a row.

The victory, coupled with Boston's 113-108 triumph over the Cleveland Cavaliers, enabled the 76ers to remain 1½ games behind the Celtics in the National Basketball Association's Atlantic Division.

Elsewhere, the New Jersey Nets trimmed the Milwaukee Bucks 106-93, the Denver Nuggets whipped the Seattle SuperSonics 120-101 and the Dallas Mavericks trounced the Golden State Warriors 129-103. Celtics 113, Cavaliers 108.

Larry Bird scored nine of his 26 points in a fourth-quarter surge that erased a seven-point deficit and boosted Boston over Cleveland. With the Cavaliers leading 97-90 and 7:38 left, Boston scored the next eight points en route to a 17-4 spurt. It was the fourth consecutive victory for the Celtics, who have won their last 18 games at Boston Garden against Cleveland. World B. Free led Cleveland with 24 points. Nets 106, Bucks 93.

Michael Ray Richardson scored 10 of his 25 points as New Jersey outscored Milwaukee 29-15 in the final 8:25 for its fourth consecutive triumph. Milwaukee, which played without All-Star guard Sidney Moncrief, has lost two in a row after an 11-game winning streak. Otis Birdsong added 24 points and Mike Gminski 15 for New Jersey. Paul Pressey led the Bucks with 18.

Alex English scored 35 points as Denver snapped a three-game losing streak. Sixteen points by English helped the Nuggets to a 62-53 halftime lead and they extended it to 24 points early in the final period. Seattle cut the lead to four with 5:11 left but the Nuggets scored the next four points and clinched the triumph with a late 13-0 burst. Mavericks 129, Warriors 103.

Rolando Blackman scored 27 points as Dallas pulled within one game of second-place Houston in the Midwest Division. Mark Aguirre added 25 points and Jay Vincent scored 22 after coming off the bench. Golden State got 18 points from Larry Smith but Purvis Short, the league's second leading scorer, was held to 12 points, 16 below his average.
