Role of Senate analyzed

By MARC MEREDYTH
Staff Writer

There has been controversy this year over the role student senate plays at Cal Poly. In light of this situation it might be useful to review the structure and role of senate on campus, as well as the duties of the senators, prior to the ASI elections next Wednesday and Thursday.

Student Senate is comprised of 23 senators elected by the student body to represent the seven academic schools and the dormitories at Cal Poly. Each school has a certain number of senators based on its size. For example, the Schools of Agriculture and Engineering each have five senators, while the School of Architecture has two and the dormitories only one.

Students can only vote for the senators representing their school.

ASI President Kevin Creighton said he sees senate as having two basic functions. "The first," he said, "is to advocate student issues and speak on behalf of Cal Poly students. The second is to serve as the board of directors for ASI."

In their business role, Creighton said, the senators are responsible for managing the $2 million ASI/University Union budget and for setting policies regarding ASI/Union personnel.

"People criticize senate for not getting anything done," the ex-business senator said. "But what most people don't understand is that senate isn't set up to be an action oriented group. It's set up to make policy, to legislate. Individuals can achieve a lot, but as a whole senate isn't designed for action, that's the job of the executive branch."

Creighton said he uses the senate to give him direction on student opinion. "When I'm setting a new policy precedent," he explained, "I take that before senate for their feedback. When administration asks me for student opinion on an issue, senate is where I go."

Marcia Godwin, ASI vice president and chair of the senate, agreed with Creighton saying that essentially senators are legislators and business managers.

She said their major duty is attending meetings, which include senate meetings, their school student council meetings and various committee meetings. Senators are also required to have at least one hour a week as an office hour in the ASI offices.

Godwin said senators get additional work when they sponsor resolutions because they must do feasibility studies and talk to affected groups.

"Senate has been criticized this year for not accomplishing anything," she said, "but the work has been about the same as in past years, there just haven't been any big, splashy projects this year."

Jon Shull, student senator for the School of Communicative Arts and Humanities, said each senator must be on one committee or commission, like codes and bylaws or ad hoc, and this is where the action takes place in student government.

Shull, a political science senior graduating in June, said senators do basically what the students want. He cited a lack of input from the student body for senate's seeming lack of action this year.

Senate is the voice of students to the administration, to the state and to whoever is looking for student opinion, Shull said.

Shull said senate taught him a lot about dealing with people and about having a task and following through with it.

Godwin said there is a problem with elections this year in that the School of Professional Studies has only one person running for four senate positions and the Schools of Architecture and Science and Mathematics each have two positions with only one person running for each spot.

Special elections to fill these positions are not likely, Godwin said. Write-ins are a possibility and interested individuals should come by the ASI offices in the University Union to pick-up election rules, job duties and a financial disclosure form for campaign funds spent.

Curry jury selection to begin on Tuesday

By THOMAS WILLIAMS
Staff Writer

Jury selection in the trial of Kenneth Wayne Curry is expected to begin Tuesday, the county clerk said yesterday.

Also, the trial itself is expected to be placed on the county court master calendar on Monday.

Curry was arrested in May 1984 and charged with the murder of two Cal Poly seniors, Viola Ada and Karl Braun, whose bodies were found on Cuesta Ridge partially decomposed. They were expected to graduate the following week.

Curry went to police and said that he was on the ridge the day of the killings and that he might have been the last person to see the two students alive.

Police later arrested Curry and charged him with the two murders.

Superior Court Judge Warren C. Conklin handed down a ruling in late March ordering that no more court documents will be released until after Curry's trial, even after repeated requests by Telegram-Tribune attorneys to open all related documents to the public.

Conklin also rejected a request by James B. Maguire III, public defender, to move Curry's trial out of San Luis Obispo County. However, Maguire said he will appeal the decision and seek reversal of the ruling from a higher court.

Conklin ordered the county clerk to unseal the change of venue motion, supporting documents and written objections by the District Attorney's Office. Conklin said he had privately reviewed the transcripts from the hearing, which was closed to the public.

In his written ruling Conklin wrote that the documents "contain references and/or constitute evidence or information to support the prosecution's contentions in this case (that the trial should not be moved)."

Kenneth Wayne Curry

Curry's attorney presented no defense in the preliminary hearing, so Conklin ruled to keep all court documents confidential because he thought that releasing any more documents would influence the jury's decision on the case.

A survey of potential jurors submitted to Conklin by the defense showed 10 percent of those surveyed thought Curry was guilty and 15 percent thought he was "probably guilty." The survey also showed 20 percent felt that they could not give Curry a fair trial and another 10 percent could not decide if they would be fair.

"The court is relying on the remaining 70 to 75 percent of the potential jury pool to provide sufficient jurors so that a fair and impartial jury can be selected in San Luis Obispo county," Conklin wrote. "If more information is released, the court would have no ability to insulate the prospective jury pool."

Keeping the documents sealed will insure Curry's right to a fair and impartial jury, Conklin said.

Former Cal Poly football star arrested in Los Osos

By JOHN BACHMAN
Sports Editor

Former Cal Poly football star Robbie L. Martin was arrested Thursday morning at the Los Osos house of his estranged wife on suspicion of attacking a man with a machete, said a Sheriff's Deputy.

Martin, 26, now a punt returner and wide receiver with the Detroit Lions, severely cut his hand in the attack and was booked into County Jail after getting stitches at San Luis Obispo General Hospital.

He was charged with assault with a deadly weapon, burglary and felony vandalism, said Sgt. Bill Crout, and released on $7,500 bail Thursday morning.

Martin went to the home of his estranged wife, Carrie Martin, in the 400 block of Mitchell in Los Osos at 1:30 a.m., said Crout. He began hacking a 1974 Corvette in the driveway belonging to Denton Sumner of San Luis Obispo.

After creating an estimated $2,500 worth of damage to the car with the machete, Crout said, Martin went to the house, knocked out a window and broke in the door.

Sumner was attacked by Martin with the machete, explained

Crout, but Sumner, 27, wrestled Martin to the floor and took the weapon away.

Martin then broke two windows with his fist, said Crout, causing a total $800 damage to the house.

Martin then began kicking the car. After discovering how severely his hand was cut, Crout said, he returned to the house and had his wife call an ambulance.

No one else was injured in the attack and Crout deputy said Martin declined to take a voluntary alcohol or drug test after his arrest.

Martin played at Cal Poly from 1977-80 and his 117 career catches puts him No. 1 on the all-time receptions list.

He caught 2,249 yards in passes and averaged 19.2 yards per catch during his college career and was on the Cal Poly 1980 NCAA Division II national championship team.

After catching 43 passes in his senior year in 1980 for 857 yards, he was drafted in the fourth round by Pittsburgh Steelers.

The Detroit Lions picked up Martin after he was released on the last cut by the Steelers the pre-season.

Robbie L. Martin, a former Poly football star and currently a player for the Detroit Lions, was arrested Thursday on suspicion of attacking a man with a machete.

Be a neighbor

When was the last time you donated your time or talents to a cause that benefitted the community?

For many college students, it often seems that there isn't enough time in the day (or people don't have the inclination) to do those little things in life that can be so satisfying — such as giving a little bit of yourself to help others.

That's why the second annual Good Neighbor Day, scheduled for Saturday at noon, is such a worthwhile idea.

More than 600 students have signed up so far to volunteer a few hours of their afternoon to serve the community. They'll be doing everything from raking up leaves in the yards of elderly people to cleaning up San Luis Creek.

Last year, just 100 students participated in Good Neighbor Day. It's nice to see so many more students involved this year.

In fact, so many students have volunteered their time that there's actually a need for more community service projects on which people can work.

There's another benefit, besides helping others — having 600 students help out the community can't help but improve the relationship between students and the residents of San Luis Obispo.

Students who want to volunteer their time Saturday, or people who know of worthwhile service projects, should call the Good Neighbor Day Hotline at 546-1292.

It's a chance for students and townspeople to become better neighbors.

Letters

Cancelled class annoys reader

Editor:

I experienced a rude awakening the other day. It was just a phone call, the voice on the other end saying, "I'm sorry sir but the Cal Poly extension course in which you enrolled has been cancelled. You were the sole registrant." My reply: "That's impossible!" After I hung up I said to the ceiling, "You mean to tell me that out of this whole region, students and non students alike, I was the only one interested!" I could understand had the course been esoteric like "Chinese Brush Magic," but "Contemporary Issues Discussions?" I mean, listen to these advertised discussion topics: War, national security, energy policy, land use, role of government, crime, capital punishment, abortion, trends in education, immigration policy, relations with the Middle East/Central America, social consequences of technological change — Holy Acedemia! Need I go on?

Like most letters this is where I should state my grievances and make my insults. But, no one would listen anyway. I would sound like some incurable egotist and the whole affair would just contribute to my further alienation from society and self. Besides, my only intention in writing this was to have you draw your own conclusions.

I was looking forward to that class.

I hope apathy isn't contagious.

Praises for Mustang Daily

Editor:

I think that the students at Cal Poly need to appreciate the Mustang Daily a little more.

I personally know that the students who write for the Daily spend many hours putting the paper together. They work hard, and in my opinion, do a good job.

If readers disagree with the editorials, that's all right. After all, it's an Opinion page.

The Mustang Daily may not be perfect, but after all, it is the only totally run student paper in the state and one of only two in the nation.

I think it's great that the readers provide the Mustang Daily Editorial Board with feedback. It is a good way for them to learn. That is one of this paper's main purposes. I just think the feedback should be positive as well as negative.

So here's a positive note for you, Mustang Daily Editorial Board — Keep it up, you're doing great!

Estelle Davis

Reader disputes abortion article

Editor:

It is no easy task to write an unbiased article concerning an issue on which one has a strong opinion. This is why one must be particularly careful in writing such an article — as Mr. Williams was not in his coverage of the abortion debate. His article gives the impression that a majority were in favor of abortion at the debate. If such a majority existed, it was not apparent from the audience response to the speakers.

Mr. Williams recorded Dr. Gaster's remarks concerning the Hippocratic Oath, but he failed to record her recurrent theme: that abortion is the destruction of a human life. (It's a little scary that the 'pro-choice' people agreed with this latter point.)

In reporting McMillan's answer as to the justification for fighting abortion (I assume that he meant to say "fighting") he only recorded the first part of her answer. She said she was concerned BECAUSE abortion ends a life, not just because she was concerned.

It was unfortunate that Mr. Williams did not record one of Dr. Gaster's closing remarks. She said, to paraphrase: When a woman is pregnant she is going to have a baby; that decision is made. Her only decision is whether it will be a live baby or a dead baby.

KGUR-FM — a radio alternative

Editor:

A few weeks ago (or was it a few months?) somebody finally voiced opposition to the pansy-like, commercialized radio airplay that is found on our local FM dial. The person righteously criticized the claim made by stations about being the Central Coast's best rock. Namely these are KCPR, KZOZ, and KSLY — especially SLY 96.

Okay, listen up all you rock 'n' roll crazies. There is a sound alternative that kicks as well as rocks the Central Coast with enough spunk to take on KLOS in L.A. or KOME from the Bay Area.

Have you ever heard of KGUR 108 FM? If you have, you know that it can only be reached through cable and that it's based at Cuesta College.

KGUR started some nine years ago and over the years they have adjusted the format of their programming in order to achieve a maximum audience share. Only just recently has the format stressed rock music, and KGUR is just beginning to feel the tidal-wave-like response. Although the station is limited in budget, and therefore allowed on carrier cable only, plans are in the making toward obtaining a regulatory license and ultimately joining the regular airwaves.

Give KGUR 108 FM a try — one dollar a month through Sonic Cable is all it takes. It's guaranteed to deliver the rock 'n' roll tunes you've been craving.

Former Cal Poly student Secret Service agent describes job

By SALLY KINSELL
Staff Writer

Interesting, exciting, dull, and boring.

This is how a Secret Service agent described his job at a talk Wednesday night, sponsored by the Cal Poly College Republicans.

Robert Caughey attended Cal Poly for two years. He graduated from Fresno State University in 1965 with a degree in criminology. He began working in the Secret Service in 1969.

Currently, Caughey is part of the Western Protective Division which is in charge of President Reagan's Santa Barbara Ranch. When Reagan is at the ranch, he said, the agents must make sure that everyone is kept safe.

Caughey said that the biggest satisfactions of his job is "the people that you meet and remain your friends...it's people needing people. It's sad, but we're in a world that needs people like us."

The Secret Service not only protects current and past presidents, said Caughey, but also their family members, the entire White House, foreign embassies, diplomats and other heads of states.

Being a member of the Secret

Robert Caughey told a campus audience of his job as a Secret Service agent.

JIM ADAMS/Mustang Daily

Service is a continual job, said Caughey. "Either we do it 24 hours a day or we don't do it at all...you are on duty 24 hours a day, seven days a week."

But the job never gets monotonous, he explained. Everything depends on where the protectee is and what they are doing. "Nothing becomes uniform," he said, "uniformity and doing the same thing every day can hurt you in the end."

The non-glorious aspects of the job, said Caughey, are the shift-work and the extensive traveling that is "usually not in the lap of luxury." However, agents do have a vehicle at their own disposal and are paid overtime, he said.

Because of the hard work required, the Secret Service has a retirement system that allows retirement after only twenty years of service, said Caughey.

The gay lifestyle Discrimination minimal for

By DAWN YOSHITAKE
Staff Writer

Banners for clubs and organizations line the tables in the University Union Plaza and students manning those tables confirm their affiliation by wearing their sweatshirts and T-shirts that bear the club's name.

There's one club however that won't be seen among the line of tables with banners, nor will its members readily reveal an association with their club.

Classifying themselves as an invisible minority, members of the Gay and Lesbian Student Union offer each other support for their lifestyle and the ability to socialize with other gay students.

Although members of the GLSU consider homosexuality an issue that's gaining acceptance, most of the people interviewed requested not to have their last names mentioned.

Co-chairwoman Cecilia of the GLSU said, "It's a network so you can meet people and do something else instead of going to the bars."

Dances and roller skating parties provide the club with social fund-raisers, and other club activities include potlucks, beach parties and talking to human sexuality classes at Poly, Cuesta College and Allan Hancock college.

Other than the Journey's Inn (a local gay bar), there's no other place to hold fund-raisers, said Cecilia.

"I don't think people would buy baked goods from the GLSU if we had a table in the U.U. with our name on the sign," she said.

Cecilia added, "Basically, we go to the gay community for fund raisers. The money we make is off our own members and the other (gay) people in the community."

The goals of the club are to provide support to members by

AIDS: a disease carrying common misconceptions

By DAWN YOSHITAKE
Staff Writer

It's a disease that carries many misconceptions and one that will eventually cause death.

To deal with this as of yet incurable disease of Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, the San Luis Obispo County AIDS Task Force and its support group, along with the Cal Poly Health Center, are providing information to dispel myths and give comfort to those with AIDS.

Communicable Disease Investigator Wendy Holaday of the San Luis Obispo County Health Department and member of the AIDS Task Force said some referrals of possible AIDS patients come from the Cal Poly's Health Center.

Gay and Lesbian Student Union member Ms. Martin said she believes gays would not go to the Health Center if they suspected they had AIDS.

"I don't think anyone would go because it's part of the school," said Martin who requested her first name not be used.

AIDS is a breakdown in the body's immune system, which leaves the body unable to fight off disease-causing germs that normally do not affect healthy people. Holaday said one of the pre-AIDS symptoms, is rapid weight loss, with a 20 pound loss in one month is not uncommon.

A cure for AIDS hasn't been found, but infections and diseases associated with AIDS are treatable.

She added that AIDS is believed to be a virus which attacks white blood cells and is transmitted by sexual contact, blood and blood products. Holaday noted that AIDS cannot be passed through casual contact.

"A lot of people stopped donating blood because they thought they might get AIDS by donating," said Holaday. "They probably heard of people getting AIDS from blood transfusions."

Holaday said another misconception is that gays are the only people to get the disease. Gay and bisexual men comprise 71 percent of national AIDS cases and Haitian immigrants, intravenous drug users and hemophiliacs make up the other groups who have a high risk of contracting the disease.

The age range most effected by AIDS falls within the 30 to 35-year-olds, she said.

Holaday noted however that students have more potential to be exposed to AIDS because they are single and meeting new people, and generally more sexually active.

In 1981 the first official case of AIDS was reported in the United States and five cases have been reported in San Luis Obispo since. The AIDS Task Force handles the medical, administrative and educational side of AIDS and the AIDS Support Group offers patients emotional support.

Although there are 12 members in the support group, none of the students are from the GLSU.

Representative Dana Belmonte of the support group for the AIDS Task Force said, "There's less interest for the students to get involved. The GLSU can get involved with it (support group) but that's not their purpose."

Students in their twenties and late teens are concerned with being open about their homosexuality, rather than AIDS, Belmonte said.

He explained the support group was formed last August, when a friend died of AIDS.

Another member of the support group, David, who requested only his first name be used, said the death of their friend "finally hit home."

Gay and Lesbian Student Union President Michael said, "All my friends are worried about it... they're not going to re-arrange their life, but are a lot more careful. They don't get as wasted at bars and do something they'll regret and will hurt their health."

GLSU adviser Wayne McCaughan said gay male students tend to ignore the issue of AIDS and don't take the subject seriously.

The support group not only offers support to AIDS patients, but also to its own members.

"I would visit one of the patients in the hospital for several days and I could talk to another member to offer a form of release," said David.

The support group has handled three AIDS cases and is currently working with two of those three.

"With any person who has a terminal illness... people don't know how to react," said Belmonte. "Even other gays will ostracize their friends out of ignorance."

David said one misconception is that healthy people need to avoid contact with AIDS patients. He explained that healthy people bring in germs that could adversely effect someone with AIDS.

As one of two support group members that spoke at a GLSU meeting, David said he felt the students weren't apathetic about the subject of AIDS, but rather scared.

"I made a comment on how important it is to know about AIDS. One student felt I shouldn't be talking about it and would make people want to go in the closet," David said.

Jeffery bought the bar for two reasons: because it was a challenge and a potential money maker.

"I knew it needed help... it needed some authority and I thought I could help it," Jeffery said. "I thought it was a money maker and I knew it wouldn't fold."

Taking his parents' advice, Jeffery said with a laugh, "I remember my parents saying if there was ever a recession, people would still go out to the bars."

Rock music is played by a disc jockey on weekends, and Wednesday nights are margarita nights, Jeffery said.

One of the problems he said he encountered when taking over the business was the sign for the bar. Jeffery said the first sign was vandalized and second one exceeded the city's height restrictions.

"We're going to get another, but it created less problems by not advertising on the street. The initials (for Journey's Inn) will go up on the building, which is how a lot of people already know it," Jeffery said.

Bartender and bouncer for Journey's Inn, Nancy, said the main problem the bar has is prank phone calls.

"Our biggest problem used to be under-age kids coming in here," said Nancy, who requested that her last name not be used.

"We're real fortunate to only have one bar. It's brought camaraderie among the men and women... we only have one bar so they have to get along," Nancy said. "In the big city bars, women and men are separated."

"This is a bar open to anyone... it's a liberal bar. We get a lot of straight people because nobody bothers them."

Nancy said she is currently trying to start a gay community service at Journey's Inn that will serve as a way for other gay groups to communicate with each other.

Good communication with the community is another area that Nancy feels bars should strive for.

Poly remains No. 6

Tough preseason pays off for softball squad

BY JANET HASEROT
Staff Writer

Fact one: the Cal Poly women's softball team has lost as many games this year as all last season.

Fact two: it has also won twice as many games.

Fact three: there are 20 games left in the season.

How can this be?

First-year coach Denny Martindale has the answer. Mainly because he is the reason why.

The Mustangs played twice as many games this year, many against tougher non-league competition like UCLA and the No. 1 team in the nation, Cal State Fullerton.

The result: a mediocre overall record, 20-14. But a 7-3 second place in the California Collegiate Athletic Association and a No. 6 ranking in the NCAA Division II.

"We're very competitive with everyone in the country," said Martindale.

There isn't any tougher pre-season, said Martindale, adding it tests the team.

"If we can get out and compete with their programs (Division I), we know we will do good when we play anyone in our division."

At 11-3, Northridge is first in the CCAA because of the four extra wins. If Cal Poly can win the division, it will be one of the 12 teams going to the Western Regionals.

If it finishes second or third, Cal Poly would have to be chosen among the other teams that didn't win divisions.

"If the season ended today," said Martindale. "We would be selected."

But it won't be long before the Mustangs catch Northridge in number of games.

Martindale said his team is talented and has a good chance at going to nationals held May 17-19 in Northridge this year.

The team would have to win the regionals to be one of the four going to nationals.

The team is shooting to win 35 games this season and with pitcher Randi Hill, a freshman from San Jose at 13-7.

Martindale thinks Hill can win 25 games before the season is over.

The future looks good for the lady Mustangs. Friday the team will be at home for three games. They will host LaVerne and Sacramento State on Friday and Saturday, both games 1:30 a.m. The Monday game against Dominguez Hills is important because the two are tied for second.
