Student Senate votes for Poly divestment

By JULIA PRODIS
Staff Writer

The ASI Student Senate voted Wednesday night in favor of a resolution urging the Foundation to divest its investments in firms operating or doing business with the government of South Africa.

The UU meeting room was packed with concerned students and faculty promoting the divestment resolution when senators voted and split 10-10 on the issue. ASI vice president and chair of senate Marcia Godwin broke the tie in favor of the resolution.

After the crowd supporting the resolution had left, one alternate senator moved to reconsider the vote. Tom Hobby replaced a proponent of divestment, Senator Jeff Lendrum, who left the meeting after the divestment vote was taken. When the motion was made to reconsider, seven senators who voted in favor of the resolution left the meeting room, and the senate lost the quorum needed to re-vote on the issue.

Author of the resolution, Mark Reichel, said of the walk-out, "We were not going to be a part of any discussion to reconsider this."

Senator Steve Dunton remarked, "We're going to shut this place down."

Hobby said, "I felt it was my duty to act in the best interest of the ag council and try to change the vote ... I think a lot of people are caught up in the fad. Why should we follow the examples of other schools like sheep?"

Senator Rob Parker, an opponent of the resolution, said, "I don't think this body should be taking a stand for or against this issue."

The Foundation owns 9,600 shares of common stock, totalling $450,580 in the firms of General Electric, General Motors, Hewlett Packard, IBM and Chase Manhattan Bank, all of which are doing business in or with the government of South Africa.

The Foundation does all its banking, checking, savings and payroll with Bank of America, also involved with South Africa.

Al Amaral, executive director of the Foundation, said of the senate vote, "I hardly think the vote was decisive. If the Foundation is to follow that policy (the senate resolution) and exclude itself from doing business with firms in South Africa, they will have a riskier portfolio than they do now."

ASI President Kevin Creighton, who has veto power over the senate, said, "A veto is a possibility. I still have concerns about the resolution in its present form."

The resolution states, "Therefore Be it Resolved: That we, the ASI Student Senate, recommend to the Cal Poly Foundation Board of Directors that they advise the Foundation Investment Committee that no funds shall remain invested or will in the future be invested in any firms that operate in or conduct business with the Government of South Africa, until South Africa ceases discriminatory policies."

"Therefore Be it Further Resolved: That the ASI Business Office be asked to send a letter to the investment body responsible for the ASI/Union investment pool to please keep their investment portfolio consistent with a sense of social responsibility for all future investments."

JULIA PRODIS/Mustang Daily

Seven student senators left the meeting last night to protest a motion that the divestment vote be reconsidered.

The motion was defeated and the vote for Foundation divestment from South Africa stood.

Poly alumni and Curry's mistress testify

By DAWN YOSHITAKE
Staff Writer

Two Cal Poly alumni and the former mistress of Kenneth Wayne Curry, the man accused in the shooting death of two Cal Poly students, took the stand Thursday to give testimony during the sixth day of the trial.

Glenn Castan and Tanya Ireland were called by the prosecution to testify. Castan was Stephen Braun's roommate and Tanya Ireland was Viola Ada's roommate.

Both were asked to describe and identify belongings of the slain students. Castan was called to the stand and shown a photograph of a wallet found in Curry's car.

"I know it (Braun's wallet) wasn't black. I told him (detective Steve Bolis) it was dark blue or brown," said Castan, after giving a description of the wallet's contents.

Under cross examination by the defense, Castan said he could not identify the wallet photographed in the truck of Curry's car was that of Braun's.

Ireland was also asked to describe Ada's wallet and her key chain.

Curry had earlier stated to sheriff detectives that he found a keychain with the letter "L" and a watch while he was up at Cuesta Ridge, where the students bodies were found.

"I don't know how many keys she had. I know she had at least three. ... I'm sure there was an object on them, but I'm not sure what it looked like," said Ireland.

Curry's former mistress, Josephine "Josie" Carlin, said she knew Curry two to three years and that they had lived together for five months, while Curry was married. Prosecutors asked Carlin she had been to Cuesta Ridge with Curry, and she testified they had gone to the ridge "a dozen times" to target shoot and have sexual relations.

Mendes delays CSUF elections

By LYNETTE FREDIANI
Staff Writer

Ballots were temporarily impounded in the Fresno State University Associated Students election due in part to campaigning by Cal Poly ASI President-elect Mike Mendes.

The ballots were confiscated after the liberal slate of Leadership '85 charged the conservative coalition of Reality '85 with violating three rules of FSU's election code.

Leadership '85 charged Reality '85 with placing flyers in an unapproved area, putting a campaign sign too close to a sidewalk, and having Mendes campaign for Reality's candidate, Jeff Hansen, though the election code prohibits students from universities other than FSU from campaigning.

"It was basically no big deal," said Mendes. "It was a joke. The Dean laughed it off."

Mendes said he went to Fresno to get a ride with Hansen to a California State Student Association conference.

"The allegations were not true," said Mendes. "I did not hand out any pamphlets or election material whatsoever. All I did was talk to Hansen. So people with a few friends."

Hansen, who was eventually re-elected as AS President, said the whole issue had been blown out of proportion. "All Mike did was hand out a few flyers," said Hansen. "It was not intentional, but he did hand out some flyers which violated our election code."

Two of Leadership '85's allegations were reversed by Dean of Student Affairs William H. Corcoran. The charge against Hansen regarding Mendes' campaigning activity was upheld. Three violations are required for election disqualification.

Hansen defeated Leadership's Steve Bruhn, 943-867.

"The intent of Mike and myself was not to campaign," said Hansen. "It's a sad situation in which animosity between the two slates built up and the minority voice decided to make allegations."

Hansen said the election code is being revised at FSU.

Although Mendes denied handing out Hansen's election materials, he did write a letter to the editor of the FSU student newspaper, the Daily Collegian, on May 15 endorsing Hansen.

ment which I do not consider as campaigning," said Hansen. "Our official campaigning period had not even begun when Mike wrote the letter."

Hansen said Mendes wrote the letter on his own initiative. "I did not ask Mike to write the letter."

The letter praised Hansen for his character and promoting issues of substance and not being swayed by the status quo at CSSA meetings. The letter identified Mendes as Cal Poly ASI President.

"I signed the letter ASI President-elect," said Mendes. He also said that he has attended two CSSA meetings, one at Pomona and the other in San Luis Obispo, where he has seen Hansen's abilities.

"I've also followed the Student Senate reports on the CSSA," said Mendes.

Cal Poly ASI President Kevin Creighton declined to comment on Mendes' involvement in the FSU election.

The Daily Collegian could not be reached for comment regarding Mendes' signature on his letter due to FSU's summer break.

Third septuplet dies of lung ailment

ORANGE, Calif. (AP) — A third Frustaci septuplet, a tiny boy named James Martin, died Thursday after a 16-day struggle with a lung ailment, and one of his sisters was extremely sick from the same disease, hospital officials said.

"Baby B, James Martin, expired at 11:04 a.m. today from complications of severe hyaline membrane disease. The actual cause of death is cardiopulmonary arrest," said Doug Wood, a spokesman at Childrens Hospital of Orange County.

Bonnie Marie, also known as Baby D, "is very, very sick," Wood said.

Wood described the other three infants, Patricia Ann, Stephen Earl and Richard Charles, as stable and showing daily improvement. They still were listed as critical, using ventilators to breathe.

Reagan comments on prayer defeat

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — President Reagan, concluding a two-day campaign swing for his tax plan, sought recruits Thursday for an "uphill battle" to overturn the latest Supreme Court ruling against organized school prayer.

Reagan's first comment on Tuesday's 6-3 high court decision striking down an Alabama school prayer law came at a fund-raising luncheon here for Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala.

"I know that there has been a strong push here in Birmingham to help restore voluntary prayer in public schools," Reagan said.

"As this week's Supreme Court decision shows, we still have an uphill battle before us. So I hope we can also count on the support of Alabama's entire congressional delegation for our prayer amendment, because it is time it was adopted," Reagan said of a proposed constitutional amendment to allow officially sanctioned school prayer.

New evidence of black hole reported

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Scientists reported strong new evidence Thursday that a massive "black hole" exists in the center of the Milky Way galaxy, surrounded by a cavity 60 trillion miles wide.

The findings by a team from the University of California may help solve the mystery of a fascinating cosmic phenomenon that has been the subject of intense research and discussion by astronomers in recent years.

Calculations by the team showed that the invisible matter in the hole is compressed so tightly by its gravity that its mass must be 4 million times greater than the sun. So dense is the center of the black hole that neither light nor any other form of radiation can escape.

School for homosexual teenagers opens

NEW YORK (AP) — A school for homosexual teenagers unable to cope with "straight" city high schools has opened in a Greenwich Village church annex, and an official said Thursday the enrollment of 20 could triple by the fall.

The Harvey Milk School, named for the slain homosexual city supervisor in San Francisco, has been operating since April with a teacher provided by the public school system.

The school was organized and is run by the Institute for the Protection of Lesbian and Gay Youth, whose clinical director, Steve Ashkinazy, said Thursday that it was the only school of its kind in the country.

Galerie benefits are shared by students

Editor:

A note of clarification with regard to a presently circulating grossly inaccurate, unsigned statement relating to the present exhibition, NEO-IMPRES- SIONISM and beyond...cost $7,000.

In fact, the cost didn't even begin to approach 1/10 of that amount! Further, included in Galerie expenses are student wages. The Galerie provides employment for an average of 12 students as Galerie attendants, planners and exhibition installers. There is a waiting list every quarter of students seeking employment and involvement in the Galerie program.

The entire reception for the present exhibition was planned, purchased and served by volunteer members of the ASI Fine Arts Committee at a cost of less than $100. In addition, this is a juried exhibition in which all artists had to pay an entry fee to have their works considered for selection. The show thus generated its own income to pay for awards and a portion of the expenses. The artists whose works were selected were also required to pay for proper framing, crating and shipping of their works. Lastly, each artist signed a contract agreeing to pay the Galerie 30 percent of the sale price of any works sold through this exhibition (prices range from $235 — $3200).

The Galerie and its exhibition have been the source of coursework assignments and projects, not only for art and art history students, but also for such wide ranging areas as journalism, music, and architecture.

While the UU Galerie is not a museum, we do strive to provide the first-hand experience of a variety of works of art not only for the pleasure of all who attend, but also to help fulfill coursework requirements which would otherwise involve lengthy trips

Having taught at Cal Poly for three years prior to my present position as UU Galerie Director, I feel that I have come to know and respect the over-all high quality of our student body. My student staff and I take very seriously our obligation to provide the finest program possible for the student dollar.

I always have and will continue to make myself available to anyone who has a question, concern or comment about the Galerie program. Please ask before you attack.

Response to Ethiopian essay

Editor:

Catherine Aaron's essay which appeared in the June 5 issue of the Mustang Daily raises some good points, and the anticipation that relief efforts might be abandoned in the near future unfortunately seems to have come partially true already.

Nevertheless, I think that the point made toward the end of the essay, that "aid is still aid to a starving person, and this money saves lives today" should be emphasized.

The impact of an individual's contribution on the overall situation is rather limited. Instead of giving fifteen dollars or more to a charitable organization, readers can probably help the victims of the current Ethiopian drought, and poor hungry people in developing countries in general, more by spending 66 cents on writing letters to their home district congressperson and senators Alan Cranston and Pete Wilson urging support for government appropriations that will help the starving and malnourished in the long run.

Letters to the above legislators in support of the Food Assistance and Africa Agriculture Act (please state its number, H.R. 2080), to both senators and congressmen would be very helpful. This bill would help ensure long term benefits for particularly needy groups through projects coordinated by IFAD, a United Nations agency that is known for being particularly efficient and achievement oriented.

Recreation facility/events center

Students will decide its fate in Fall

By KRIS REHER
Staff Writer

Students will be voting on a recreation facility Fall Quarter. During the summer, the Forward Committee will decide whether or not to include an events center in the referendum.

David Hampton, chairman of the committee established to examine alternatives in a recreation facility, said a survey was taken this quarter but the formal results have not been tabulated.

"In general, we found students want a rec facility and an events center, but they're not willing to pay for it," Hampton said. "Our biggest question is do we want an events center in the referendum."

Hampton said the events center would be a place to watch concerts, speeches and possibly fall commencement ceremonies. The area would seat 5,000 people.

"It would be acoustically viable and have a portable stage," Hampton said. "We know if we put the center in, it will make some money."

Looking at alternatives for an events center is one the goals of the Forward Committee this summer.

"One thing we're thinking about doing is putting together two different representative models of a rec facility; one with an events center and one without," Hampton said. "We plan on going around to classes this summer and get feedback."

Another alternative the committee is looking into is the restoration of an amphitheater near Cuesta College.

"Supposedly there is an old, run-down amphitheater near Cuesta," Hampton said. "They're going to try to get school presidents from Cal Poly, Cuesta and community leaders from the performing arts to see if we can remodel it."

The problem with the amphitheater, Hampton said, is insuring the facility during the winter months. "Rain insurance for a concert is really high, but the amphitheater is still a possibility."

Promotion of the recreation facility will be essential before the fall referendum. Hampton said a public relations plan is being organized.

"We're working on a PR plan with a journalism student," Hampton said. "We'll have a sandwich board in the Union with information about the facility. Also we're going to have a video tape of other universities, such as UC Berkeley and San Jose State who recently built a rec facility."

Hampton hopes funding for the entire recreation facility will come partly from the state and partly from the students.

"They're tearing down Crandall Gym and expanding the Business Building," Hampton said. "So the state is already planning on providing floor space to accommodate the loss of Crandall facilities."

The state will put up roughly $3 million, and Hampton hopes with students supplying the additional amount, the facility could be built.

Athletics may lose IRA funds

Student board decides monies not warranted

By GREGG SCHROEDER
Staff Writer

Cal Poly intercollegiate athletics may lose funding from Instructionally Related Activities monies — if the university president OKs the board recommendation today.

The IRA board voted four to three Tuesday that athletic scholarships and recruiting is not an instructionally related activity and therefore IRA funds should not be used to finance them, said Chairperson Lynette Frediani.

The board has already budgeted $18,500 to supplement athletic scholarships and $17,000 to go toward recruiting for the 1985-86 fiscal year. If approved by President Warren Baker, this subsidy could halt as of the following year.

Frediani said the one year delay is designed to give the Athletics Department buffer time to budget and make plans to find alternative funding.

The three students and one faculty member on the board do not feel recruiting and scholarships are appropriate recipients of these funds, which are generated through student fees, Frediani said. The three board members who opposed the cut are administration officials.

Jeff Hunt, ASI executive staff member, said the next step is for the board to make its recommendation to Baker today. If passed by Baker, who has the power to approve or veto the proposal, the next move is to take it to the Chancellor's office.

Frediani does not, however, think the proposal will get to CSU headquarters in Long Beach. "We are skeptical whether Baker will approve it," she said.

Ken Walker, director of intercollegiate athletics, was not available for comment.

In an unrelated issue, Frediani said the board will vote today on divestiture of IRA funds in South Africa.

IRA monies help to fund many campus programs, including drama, music, agricultural judging teams, radio station KCPR, the Mustang Daily, the logging team and ornamental horticulture projects.

Fall commencement for Fall graduates

By KEVIN CANNON
Staff Writer

Students graduating at the end of Fall Quarter must attend fall commencement ceremonies, a university committee decided Tuesday.

Students finishing Winter Quarter may attend December ceremonies on a first-come, first-serve basis until all spaces have been filled, the Commencement Committee unanimously decided. Winter quarter graduates can also elect to attend June ceremonies.

In the past, students finishing Fall Quarter could graduate at either ceremony.

"Part of the reason for the new rule is the space limitation for guests in the gym," said Donald

M. Coats, university commencement coordinator and chairman of the commencement committee.

"There is enough room for the guests of 700 graduates in the gym," said Coats. "If, for example, 400 students complete Fall Quarter, there would be 300 spots available for those students finishing Winter Quarter who wish to attend ceremonies in December."

"Part of the reason for the new rule is the space limitation for guests in the gym," -Donald Coats

There are two graduation ceremonies a year: one in December and the other in June. December commencement takes place in the Main Gym and June commencement takes place in Mustang Stadium.

The rule was proposed by the two student members of the committee, Jackie Le Clerc, who is graduating this June and Alison Trout, a December graduate.

"These students have had more participation and support than any other student," said Don McCaleb, public affairs officer, who has been involved with the commencement committee for five years.

Fraternities give help to Kid's Center

By KELLY MOORE
Staff Writer

The Cal Poly Children's Center received assistance from local fraternities over the weekend.

Members of Alpha Gamma Rho, Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Sigma Nu fraternities volunteered their time by doing maintenance work around the facility.

Alpha Gamma Rho put in a tricycle path for the children, Sigma Alpha Epsilon sanded, prepared and primed the entire building for professional painters who will complete the job and Sigma Nu improved the playground area and moved sand for a new sandbox.

Earlier in the year, members of Zeta Tau Alpha sorority painted the inside of the center while Sigma Alpha Epsilon primed the outside of the building.

"It went really well and we enjoyed working with the brothers from the other fraternities," said Sean Clancy, philanthropy chairman for Sigma Alpha Epsilon. "With all the participation, support and enthusiasm, it only took one afternoon to complete the work so the professional painters could finish the job."

The Children's Center preschool services are available to children of students and faculty. The cost is determined by the parents' income. Priority is given to single parents if space is limited.

The Children's Center also serves as a lab for students of various majors. Teachers make up the lesson plans and students volunteer time with the children. Parents of students are also required to volunteer ten hours per quarter of their time.

Many representatives of the fraternities viewed their services as a way of serving both the community and the school.

New chapter at Poly Amnesty International strives to free prisoners of conscience

By SUSAN EDMONDSON
Staff Writer

At this moment thousands of people are in prison because of their beliefs. Some may be tortured and others may be held without charge or a trial.

Through Amnesty International, Cal Poly students can make a difference.

Amnesty International is a worldwide movement of people working for the release of those imprisoned unjustly. Recently a San Luis Obispo community chapter and a Cal Poly student chapter of AI were formed.

- They seek fair and prompt trials for all political prisoners.

- They work to end torture and the death penalty in all cases.

"One of the good things about Amnesty is you don't have to try and save the world. What you do is set small, specific goals and try to make things a little bit better," said Russell.

Members of AI send letters to government and other influential officials on behalf of those imprisoned and tortured. They also raise money to send relief such as medicine, food and clothing to the prisoners and their families.

porters in more than 150 countries. In the United States there are 13,000 Amnesty members.

"Amnesty International is not political. It doesn't pick sides," said Russell. "Amnesty is not conservative or radical; it's just humane."

Russell said that although Cal Poly may not have the kind of liberal or socially-aware reputation that schools such as UC Berkeley have, the students here are just as concerned about human rights.

"In Amnesty International we feel that a belief is not a crime," said music professor Craig Russell. Russell, with philosophy professor Larry Houlgate, formed the local chapter.

"There are a lot of Cal Poly people involved," said Russell. "After we got the community group going the next logical step was a student group. I think there are some really interested students."

The goals of Amnesty International are threefold:

- They work for the release of "prisoners of conscience" — men, women and children detained anywhere because of their beliefs, color, sex, ethnic origin, language or religion — provided they have neither used nor advocated violence.

The student chapter of AI is primarily concerned with educating the public by sponsoring films and setting up booths. The San Luis Obispo chapter is able to "adopt a prisoner."

By adopting a prisoner, the group receives information on a specific case and works for the release of that prisoner. AI has a staff of 150 people in London who analyze information from hundreds of newspapers, journals, government bulletins, as well as letters from prisoners and their families.

Although the student chapter does not adopt a prisoner, they do work closely with the community group and they also write letters.

AI is a volunteer organization with 500,000 members and sup-

"I think it's really a fallacy equating a radical campus with a caring campus. I think it's a cheap shot at the students of the '80s to say that they don't care. They just have different ways of expressing it."

Russell said he doesn't think the new Cal Poly group will have a difficult time getting students involved. About 30 students have expressed interest in the Amnesty meetings.

Tijuana

Poly students travel south of the border to help the poor

By JAN SPRAGUE
Staff Writer

The first impression is the modern bridge rising above the traffic jams of cars crossing from the United States to Mexico and back again.

But that is simply an illusion to the real impression of Tijuana, one you can get only by removing yourself from your air-conditioned car and taking a look at how the majority of people live just south of the border, said a Cal Poly teacher.

Carmin Elkin, the head teacher for the Cal Poly Children's Center and volunteer with an organization dedicated to educating Americans on Mexico, has been making the trek to the border for the last ten years. Volunteering as a worker for Los Ninos, Elkin takes students and others interested first-hand experience and helping those living in poverty conditions. "The goal of Los Ninos is to help educate Americans; it brings people into areas to experience the realities of life — life as it exists for most of the people in Tijuana."

This is the goal of Los Ninos and its founder, Paul Wiece, a Santa Barbara man who went on to found Children of the Americas, a group working in Central America. Los Ninos is not affiliated with any church, said Elkin. Its main goal is social awareness.

Elkin took nine Cal Poly students with her last month for a three day trip to visit some of the more distressed areas in Tijuana. "Los Ninos has several projects going on that we visit and help them with," said Elkin. One of the more desperate areas is known as the Dump, a place where the "poorest of the poor" live in Tijuana, said Elkin.

"People here need to colonize, get together, to share resources. They make their living off the dump, collecting glass and aluminum to recycle. Los Ninos has gone into areas like these and provided clothes, food and education to help these people become more self-sufficient."

The Mexican government has often been criticized about their lack of involvement in helping their poor. "The government in Mexico is more into image," said

Elkin. "It's typical of what happens in Central America. Mexico is rich in natural resources, but is poorly run."

The jails are another area visited by Elkin and volunteers working with Los Ninos. "The jails are in terrible shape, people are crowded into cells that are hosed down daily. The only food is a mush given once a day. We take in one meal a day, usually beans and tortillas, and fresh water." Elkin said the jails are not segregated according to sex, both men and women are kept in the same jail houses.

"Often we run into Americans in jail," said Elkin. "This last trip there were two American males in jail, one had been there a week. Usually I'll take telephone numbers and make phone calls for prisoners." The two were arrested for being drunk, said Elkin, and one said he was falsely accused of theft.

The orphanage in downtown Tijuana is another important stop for Los Ninos volunteers. "There are about 150 children in the orphanage," said Elkin, "and yet there are only five permanent staff. They really rely on volunteer help." Elkin said there is currently a Cal Poly student living at the orphanage as a volunteer, but she did not know her name.

"The children here are not adoptable," said Elkin. "For some, their parents are still living, but simply can't afford to keep them." Parents are required to visit their children at least once a year, said Elkin. "When children are 11 years of age, they are turned out to fend for themselves." Los Ninos started a house for older orphan boys, who were living on the streets, she said, and there are also houses for girls, but such places fill up fast and are hard to get into.

"Going below the border helps put things into perspective for me," said Elkin. "The group of Cal Poly students I took with me this last time were all well to do, and I think the experience of seeing how some of these people live really moved them."

"People come back with changed expectations. Many decide they want to do something more to help. Several of the students said they wanted to return this summer to volunteer."

Elkin feels the most important experience is to see how lifestyles in American affect others. "We exploit others by our extravagant use of resources; we use far more than we really need," said Elkin. Going below the border, in this case, is truly a situation of hands on learning in an international perspective.

Student wins two awards Good-bye from a friend with memories during golf tournament

by Andy Frokjer

Spring Intramural activities have wrapped up another season and Rob Cramer was the big winner at the Rec Sports Golf Tournament last weekend at the golf course in Laguna Lake.

Cramer hit the longest drive (234) yards and had the lowest score of 34 strokes. Dave Lehmann took second place with 35 strokes, and Kyle Nower took third with 36. John Cain had the highest score at 50 strokes. John Orton was the closest to the pin at 19 inches.

The results of other sports: in watertube polo the champions are Champagne Jam, Floor Hockey and Mother Puckers.

In softball: men's residence halls, Grooved Diggers, residence halls coed-Sick Nuns, men's club-Seaoc Slammers, coed club-Dairy Club, coed E-Harvey Birds, Little Sisters-Alfa Epsilon Pi, men's B-Schlamos, and men's A-No 2nd Chance.

1985 volleyball champs are: coed B-6-Packers, women's Polywhoppers, Men's B-The Fog, Men's A-Shemof. The games for both coed A and reverse coed champs were played last night between Sextuplets vs. Netbenders and Pokey Pals vs. Wipe Outs.

Basketball champions included for Men's B league-In your Chones, and the championship game was played for Men's A league last night between Raleigh Hills and Launchers.

It has been my custom to write this column with a humorous edge, but since I am graduating next week, I thought I'd be serious just once.

It's always hard to say good-bye. We remember later the many things we should have said. When I leave Cal Poly there are many people I will never see again and many I won't even have the chance to say goodbye to. There's so many things I'd like to say to them here, but I know I couldn't fit in all that needed to be said. Still I want them to know I'm glad they've made an impact on my life and that as long as I have a memory I'll remember the times we shared at Cal Poly.

I remember: spending the day in the health center infirmary during WOW after I got stung in the mouth by a bee.

doing the Miracle Mile with a friend on her 21st birthday and getting truly drunk for the first time.

spending many a weeknight on the fourth floor of the library, wondering if anyone had ever checked out "Sphecid Wasps of

hanging out in the U.U. plaza on sunny days saying 'hi' to friends and looking at pretty girls.

feeling proud to run in a Cal Poly uniform for the first time after losing three years of eligibility to injuries.

sitting at a friend's house eating milk and cookies after the volleyball team lost in the playoffs last fall and remembering how I felt after my cross country team lost the CIF championship meet everyone was sure we would win.

cruising around campus exchanging greetings with people whose names I'll never know and who'll never know mine.

having my ego crushed three times a week by my news writing professor, but learning more than I had in any other class.

bumming around with my friends in the dorms on Saturday nights wishing I was 21 and had a car.

getting a phone call at midnight from the Mustang Daily editor telling me an article I had written had won first place in a statewide competition of college newspapers.

getting a C in a two-unit Mustang Daily class to ruin the 4.0 GPA I had for the entire year.

telling atrociously bad jokes day after day and getting away with it.

going out to the track every afternoon, knowing there'd always be someone there I knew, even on weekends.

And needless to say, I will remember this as the most emotionally exhausting year of my life. I lost my last season of cross country eligibility to an injury and spent most of my final year of track sick in bed or in the training room trying to rehabilitate my battered legs. I wasn't hurt so much by seeing my dreams of running on a national championship team or making All-America in cross country fade away, as I was by the thought that I hadn't reached my potential as a runner and, because of injuries, probably never would.

*Yet all experience is an arch where through Gleams that untraveled world whose margin fades
Forever and forever when I move.
Tennyson*

To Our Graduating Seniors

From Those Of Us Who Stay Behind

Good Luck

The Special Pubs Crew

And what drained me even more was falling in love with a girl the first time I saw her. She didn't know who I was or how I felt and I didn't know how to meet her, yet I trusted my feelings, and hoped. When I finally met her months later and then asked her out, she was seeing someone else. I was heartbroken. Though time has passed, I still think about her a lot, painfully aware that nothing romantic will ever happen between us. Yet it hurts more to think that we never got to know each other, and, because I am graduating, will probably never have that chance again.

But I will survive, just as I always have, and be ever thankful for the many friends who've helped me make it through this difficult time. And I'll keep chasing that ever-fading margin, because I have much to learn and miles to go before I sleep.

Andy Frokjer is a journalism major and a graduating senior.

of TV Tower Road, the prosecutor asked Carlin to identify an area where Curry had taken her back in November or December of 1983.

Looking at the photograph Carlin said, "where the letter 'A' is." The letter A on the photograph indicated where Braun's car was found.

During cross-examination, the defense asked Carlin if she was familiar with Cuesta Ridge and if she and Curry always went to the same location at night.

Carlin said not familiar with the ridge, but she could identify all locations where she and Curry had been to.

Earlier in the day, the prosecution played tapes of Curry's statements made on the day of his arrest and the jury also listened to testimony from Ada's best friend, Sharon Nauman.

Superior Court Judge Warren Conklin said the jury will be taken to Cuesta Ridge on Tuesday. Conklin said the tentative route will be from the quarry, where Curry said he was target shooting on the day he met the students, and will then proceed back to Highway 101.

Why no women merit winners?

By BRUCE PINKLETON

Staff Writer

The Cal Poly English Department is circulating a memorandum designed to help determine why the university's recent faculty merit award winners included only one woman.

The merit awards were given to a total of 39 outstanding faculty members in each of Cal Poly's seven schools and one associate librarian. Each award was $2,500.

The two page memorandum asks a series of questions designed to determine how many women were actually nominated to receive the Meritorious Performance and Professional Promise awards.

The memorandum was given to the heads, or representatives, of each of the seven school committees. Each school committee recommended who should receive the awards to the dean of its school who had final approval.

The memorandum reads in part: "The primary matter of concern is the fact that of the 38 awards given, 37 were received by men, and only one by a woman."

The memorandum continues on to note that such a distribution, given the number of female faculty at Cal Poly, "appears unusual in its proportions."

As of Fall Quarter, 1984, approximately 17.5 percent of Cal Poly's faculty was female. This figure includes both part-time and full-time teachers.

"We are not intending to accuse but to gather information" that would explain the reason for these unusual proportions, said Dr. Linda Halisky, assistant English professor who authored the memorandum.

"We may find that these percentages are completely consistent (with the number of women that were nominated for the awards)," said Halisky.

Faculty are nominated for the meritorious awards on the basis of three criteria. The criteria include excellence in teaching, professional activity and service to the department.

The issue is confused by the fact that "most faculty hate these awards" and the methods used to determine the award winners are inconsistent, said Halisky. "Because of this, skewed results are expected."

One of the five questions the memorandum asks involves the number of male and female faculty members in each school who were eligible to receive merit awards.

Another memorandum question asks the number of men and women who were nominated for the awards in each school and whether they were part-time or full-time.

The memorandum also asks about the criteria used to determine who among the applicants received the awards.
