Football plane crash remembered

By Laura Rosenblum
Staff Writer

"Poly Football Team in Air Crash; 22 Dead" read the Oct. 30, 1960 banner headline of a special Sunday edition of the Telegram-Tribune.

It was 25 years ago today that an airplane crash killed 22 people, including 16 members of the Cal Poly football team.

The Cal Poly Mustangs had played a disappointing 50-6 game against Bowling Green University in Bowling Green, Ohio on that Saturday afternoon. The team boarded the chartered C-46 airliner at Toledo Airport that evening, even though dense fog engulfed the surrounding air strip.

After climbing only 200 feet, the airplane exploded. Of the 48 passengers on board, 16 Cal Poly football team members were killed along with a student team manager, a San Luis Obispo businessman, the pilot, co-pilot and two women who were accompanying the team back to San Luis Obispo.

The Saturday Evening Post and Life magazine ran four-page articles about the crash. In San Luis Obispo, the only events to ever merit the publication of special Sunday editions of the Telegram-Tribune were the Oct. 29 plane crash and the end of World War II.

At Cal Poly, things were at a stand-still. El Mustang (Mustang Daily) ran a special Oct. 31 edition devoted to news of the tragedy. Classrooms and offices on that Halloween day after the crash were closed at 10 a.m. so all students and faculty could attend a special memorial service in the gym. Flags were flown at half-mast. Homecoming celebrations and all football games for the 1960 school year were canceled.

Aid and sympathy to friends and relatives of the victims came in all forms. A student memorial fund, established by the San Luis Obispo and Pomona campuses of Cal Poly, collected donations to aid the wives and children of the deceased.

The "Mercy Bowl," played between Bowling Green State University and Fresno State University at the Los Angeles Coliseum on Nov. 23, 1961, brought in more proceeds for the memorial fund.

A plaque in memory of the 16 football players killed in the crash is embedded in a large rock in Mustang Stadium, and a memorial of the Mercy Bowl and a picture of the 1960 Football team are displayed in a showcase in the Physical Education Building.

A special display at the archives on the fourth floor of the Kennedy Library contains the original news coverage of the event. The pages that the historic tragedy was captured on have turned yellow with age, but the memory of the event lives on.

Pro fitness petition is circulated

By Jennifer Kildee
Staff Writer

More than 300 signatures supporting the conversion of the campus bowling alley into a fitness center have been gathered by a senior recreation administration student.

"I felt that there was a need to voice an opinion about the fact that the issue (of the conversion) hadn't been finally confirmed and dealt with," said Laura Barney, instigator of the petition.

Students who use the weight room or who participate in intramural sports or sports clubs were among those who signed Barney's petition, as did her fellow Recreational Sports employees. The signatures were then presented to the Student Senate at its Oct. 16 meeting.

John Sweeney, ASI vice president, said the final decision of converting the bowling alley into a fitness center rests with President Baker. "I don't think it (the list of signatures) will affect the decision pro or con," he said.

"The students dealt with that last year. The advisory board held open forums so that students could voice their opinions either way," Sweeney added.

Barney said she and some other interested students submitted a petition with "the exact same idea" last year. "At that point, it sounded like it was going to go through; it was a positive thing. Now it's more nebulous," she said.

Barney said she believes her work as leisure class coordinator at Recreational Sports gives her a good perspective on the facilities the university has to offer. "We provide programs for students, but we have no place to program. We either cannot schedule classes at prime times or we can't find the facilities," she said.

Incumbent Settle cites 'successful term'

By Susan Harris
Staff Writer

City Council incumbent Allen Settle said he would like the voters to recognize the "very successful work" of the current City Council when they go to vote Nov. 5.

Although he said "there are no issues that are very hot," Settle outlined a few issues he said would be affecting Cal Poly during the next council term.

He cited the expansion of the California Mens Colony, the need for independent student housing, the encouragement of clean industry and the improvement of city relations with Cal Poly as current issues.

"CMC is using two times their allocation for water. This jeopardizes the growth of Cal Poly and affects the faculty and the students," said Settle.

He explained that the state is more concerned about where to house prisoners than the growth of Cal Poly.

"This worries me because this is where I work," Settle said.

Due to the lack of political clout that San Luis Obispo County has, it is difficult for the county to stop the expansion or development of any prison, Settle explained.

Settle emphasized that the expansion of CMC directly impacts the campus by putting greater housing and service demands on the city and students.

Independent student housing, commonly known as a Greek Row, is favored by Settle.

"I support the annexation of state property for additional student group housing," he said.

He stressed that students will need the support of the City Council to provide services and help with the financing.

"They'll have my support," Settle said.

An issue classified by Settle as a "key thing" is the development of a research-oriented, clean industry in San Luis Obispo.

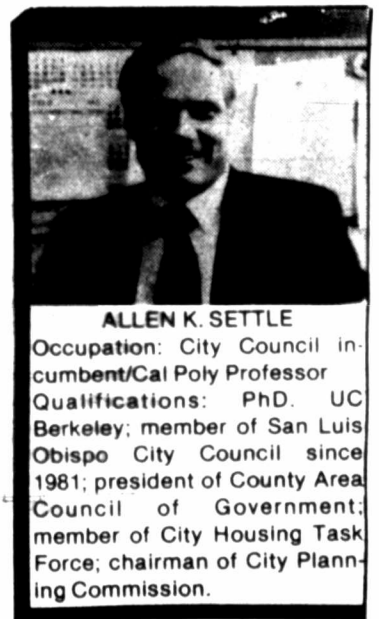

"I'd like to see a research park constructed to employ and further train graduates of Poly," said Settle.

Addressing the question of city and student relations, Settle said the issue came up due to the lack of few important issues in this election.

Agendas from the City Council and the Student Senate are now being exchanged to inform the other group of upcoming issues and the current status of proposals, Settle said.

Another positive sign between the city and students, Settle said, is a Student Senate resolution to foster good will in the community. The resolution also asks the council to make an effort when dealing with student

On the street

What do you think of when you hear the words 'punk rocker'?

By Mary Anne Talbott and Kevin H. Fox

Bryan "SLO-Boy" Curry, physics, sophomore: I get all the images of crazed hoodlums wearing leather jackets running around stabbing people. Actually, I just think of normal people who like punk music.

Laurel Segel, dietetics, sophomore: A different outlet of music and dressing tastes.

Lance Dohman, metallurgical engineering, sophomore: I look at it as a fine example of the decline of western civilization.

Larry Gamino, business, graduate student: I visualize a Mohawk-style, leather jacket, spiked gloves, anti-social and non-conformist. I guess I parallel it to the 1960s, maybe the equivalent of a hippie.

Steve French, city and regional planning, professor: Green hair.

Julia Watada, art, senior and Robin Carmic, art, junior: It's not that big of a deal. It's not that bad as long as they don't bother you.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

SAGA challenges all to keep Poly 'P' clean

Editor — Very soon the Poly "P" will again be getting a proper face lift. No polka dots, zebra stripes or toilet paper messages this time, although the two-tone checks weren't bad. This time the Simulation and Adventure Gaming Association, will be painting it plain, old-fashioned white. They will be trying to restore the "P" and the surrounding area to some semblance of its original form. Along with this redemption of the "P," SAGA is issuing a challenge, throwing down the gauntlet as it were, to see if the student body as a whole can maintain the "P" in its, soon to be, restored state. It may seem corny to make such a fuss about a large slab of concrete, especially when a sojourn up the hill, which is no mean feat, to broadcast some special message is so fun. However, to see that stately, majestic and clean "P" rising over Cal Poly is a symbol of the subdued yet dedicated spirit of our school.

Bull, you say?

Perhaps a bit, but the sentiment is sincere and the challenge stands. Let's see if we can keep the "P" clean for a change.

Police used force too quickly at concert

Editor — This letter is addressed to C. Kevany and his (her?) letter in the Oct. 22 Mustang Daily.

Were you at the Vets hall the night of the Dead Kennedys show? Your letter to the Daily suggests you were not.

You state that, "The inclination of force for the police is in steps — from conversation to physical force to the use of batons," and so on. If you were at the hall you may have noticed that the police omitted the first step. The first time I heard them telling me I had to leave was when they were right up next to me with their batons raised. There was no one hurt and no damage done to the hall before the police tried to shut down the show. The bottles and rocks were a reaction to the police force. Not vice versa as you seem to believe. The police action evoked the violence. There was no situation for them to "subdue" before they arrived.

I am not saying I believe throwing rocks and bottles was a proper crowd response. I do believe, however, that the police force was unjustified and that their actions created the problem.

It appears to me that you were not there that night — or if you were, you weren't paying much attention to what was going on around you. Next time, get facts straight.

Story about AIDS commended by reader

Editor — I would like to congratulate Mustang Daily for having the courage to print a feature article on Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, or AIDS (AIDS: The Epidemic, Oct. 24.)

The accounts and statistics in the story were both informative and accurate.

AIDS has brought with it great suffering and discrimination. Every day more people die as a result of the loss of their immune systems. Most people equate AIDS with homosexuals, and this has increased discrimination against gays and lesbians. The truth is that more than 25 percent of AIDS sufferers are straight and that their numbers are going to increase dramatically in time. The number of heterosexuals with the disease today is similar to the number of gays with the disease in 1982, and the disease still spreads among straights exponentially (researchers have found that the number of gay sufferers has probably stabilized and will no longer grow dramatically). Not all AIDS patients are gay, and not all gays have AIDS.

There is a great deal of antipathy towards gay AIDS sufferers. One young lady I spoke with said she had no sympathy towards these people, that they "got what they deserve." It is a common belief among many that AIDS is "God's punishment" to gays. I urge anyone who holds this idea to wonder how such a benevolent God could subject someone to confinement in a musty hospital bed surrounded by shadowy drabness and scents of sickness and medicine, and how He could make a human, a person with feelings and emotions like everyone else, so feebly disabled and hopelessly deformed that the only hope he has is to die. How could anyone be so evil? Is God exempt from His own commandment, "Thou shalt not kill?"

Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome is a horrible plague about which little is known. But it is known that it has caused both suffering and more discrimination. Progress is being made on the medical side of AIDS; it is up to the public to end the ignorance which brings the bigotry.

Also, in the story, Mustang Daily mentioned the gay students' group on campus. This group has not been called the Gay Students Union since 1983. In the future, please refer to us as the Gay and Lesbian Student Union.

Thanks for printing such an instructive article.

Apology is due for DON'T PUNK poster

Editor — I found a flyer taped to the glass doors of my work area, and I understand that the flyers were posted all over campus.

"WARNING — DON'T PUNK" was the message, sponsored by "The Concerned Fraternity Society," and featuring a photo of a home economics student which had appeared in the question column of the Mustang Daily Oct. 17. The young lady was named on the flyer, and the rest of the message on the flyer was not flattering.

It strikes me as deplorable for an individual to be singled out for this kind of intolerant attack. We all have our differences in style, in appearance, as well as in our opinions and beliefs (Thank God!); it is frightening to realize that any one of us could be held up for a scathing attack of this nature.

The student deserves some kind of apology.

Other students should be warned about the dangers of freely expressing their opinions in a public format such as the question column in the Mustang Daily.

Correction to article concerning alcohol ban

Editor — The article Friday, Oct. 18 on alcohol restriction in the city parks indicates Mark Reichel, Community Relations Officer on the ASI executive staff, as saying the ordinance comes up for review in March, six months after it was passed.

Please note that the ordinance on the alcohol restriction comes up in two months, not six months. It comes back to the city council for review in January, not March, 1985.

Oregon guru Rajneesh arrested

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh was arrested late Sunday trying to flee the country by federal customs agents in North Carolina, a federal immigration official said.

Carl Houseman, regional director of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service in Portland, said Rajneesh and a group of his followers were arrested at the Charlotte-Douglas International Airport in Charlotte.

Houseman said Rajneesh was named in indictments handed down Thursday by a federal grand jury in Portland. He said the guru was charged with conspiracy to make false statements to federal immigration officers and with harboring aliens illegally in the U.S.

Rajneesh is the spiritual leader of a sect that claims up to 500,000 adherents, mainly in the United States, Western Europe and Australia.

His central Oregon commune, known as Rajneeshpuram, has been in turmoil for more than a month, since the guru's top aides fled to Europe.

Hurricane Juan hits gulf states

NEW IBERIA, La. (AP) — Hurricane Juan, a surprising late-season storm, thrashed off-shore oil rigs with 85 mph wind and waves up to 20 feet Monday on the Gulf of Mexico, swamping boats and forcing 80 oil workers overboard, and high water stranded hundreds of people on land.

At least three people were killed, and the Coast Guard was searching for three people missing on the Gulf, spokesman Keith Spangler said. In addition, one man was reported missing on Lake Ponchartrain.

PITTSBURG, Calif. (AP) — Marine biologists, frustrated that Humphrey retreated upstream the 14 miles he had gained the day before, decided Monday to let the lost, 45-ton humpback whale swim where he wants in the Sacramento River for a while.

"We will absolutely leave him alone. There is no point to more stress," said Sheridan Stone, a biologist for the National Marine Fisheries Service, the federal agency responsible for endangered sea animals.

Computer research class to be taught next quarter

By Carol A. Maltman
Staff Writer

A class to be taught next quarter in the Robert E. Kennedy Library will enable students to tap into computer databases that hold worldwide information related to a specific topic.

"The focus of the class is to teach students to understand how information is organized and retrieved in abstracts and indexes," said Ilene Rockman, an associate librarian and coordinator of the class.

By using the computer database search, students will save time doing library research, will be able to design a library computer search, will have free access to bibliographic databases and will receive hands-on experience at a computer terminal.

The course, listed in class schedules as Library 301, will be taught by a team of librarians who are each proficient in various subject matters such as agriculture, biology, business, chemistry, computer science, engineering, medicine and psychology.

"Students will learn search strategies and design," said Rockman. "One-half of the class will be devoted to applying what the student has learned. The students will design and conduct their own bibliographic research and they will retrieve information from computer databases."

The database search will give students bibliographic information on their subject mostly through periodical articles and books. If the materials cannot be found in the Kennedy Library students will be referred to the Interlibrary Loan office.

"It takes about 10 to 14 days to fill a request," said Jean Gordon, section head of Interlibrary Loan.

"A student should come to us if they have thoroughly searched the Cal Poly library and cannot find what they need. We probably fill 85 percent of the requests we receive," Gordon said.

Rockman said the library course was first offered last winter quarter. "The class is a valuable tool, especially with the proliferation of the microcomputer," she said.

Disabled day slated for today in U.U.

Displays and events will be in the University Union today as part of Disabled Awareness Day, which is sponsored by Disabled Student Services.

The activities, which will begin at 10 a.m. and run to 3 p.m., include a variety of wheelchair sports as well the chance for students and faculty to go through their daily routines in a wheelchair or blindfolded.

The activities and exercises are designed to make students and faculty aware of obstacles that go unnoticed by all but the handicapped.

Information on disability prevention and exhibits of adaptive equipment will also be on display in the plaza and in Mustang Lounge.

On Wednesday, the SLO Motion Riders, San Luis Obispo's wheelchair basketball team, will play the Cal Poly Fraternity All-Stars at 6:30 p.m. in the Main Gym.

Israeli leader speaks to Poly, world by satellite

By Mary Anne Talbott
Staff Writer

Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres spoke Sunday to people in 19 cities of the United States during a live satellite telecast from New York and Jerusalem.

Shimon answered questions on immigration for Russian Jews, a United Nations declaration denouncing Zionism, peace in the Middle East and the Israeli economy. Questions from the audience at Cal Poly were not telephoned to Peres because the telecast ended early due to technical problems and the prime minister's fatigue.

Answering questions from a guest panel and listeners, Peres said he is working with President Reagan and President Francois Mitterand of France to get the Soviet Union to allow immigration for the almost 3 million Jewish people living there. "That was the issue closest to my heart," he said.

"They need us, we need them. They belong to us, we belong to them. I see it in the center of our emotional and political activity. I found both presidents Reagan and Mitterand totally committed to it."

Peres said there is a possibility that Russian Jews will be allowed to immigrate to Israel if the Soviet Union accepts a French offer of direct transportation to Israel.

"It is a demand and a proposal on our side without a response from their side," he said.

Peres also denounced a 10-year-old United Nations resolution which equated Zionism with racism.

"Whoever is anti-Zionist is really a racist," Peres said. The Zionist movement is an attempt to end years of racial and religious discrimination towards the Jewish people. Discrimination against Jewish life and Israel as a Jewish state still goes on today, he said.

Israel is hoping for peace, Peres said. Israel is willing to work on an agreement with Jordan and Palestine, and would welcome the support of the United Nations Security Council.

"There is no replacement for direct negotiations," he said.

Israel would also like to have better relations with Egypt and Syria. Peres said he didn't think Syrian King Hussein was too weak to make peace with Israel.

"Why pass a judgment he is weak? I think he needs peace as badly as we do," he said. "You must be ready to compromise."

Although the Israeli economy suffers from high unemployment and high inflation, Peres said Israel can accommodate the Jewish people who wish to immigrate.

"More than the country builds the immigrants, the immigrants build the country," he said.

There is optimism in the economy because there is optimism in the people. "And what is the economy but the spirit of the people?"

The telecast was sponsored nationally by the American Zionist Federation. The Cal Poly telecast was sponsored by Haverim and the Multi-Cultural Center.

Response plan to be tested Wednesday

Cal Poly will take part in an exercise Wednesday that will test the ability of the university to respond to an accident at the Diablo Canyon Nuclear Power Plant.

Aside from testing the campus-wide public address system, all operations of the university will proceed as normal.

Poly runningback Jim Gleed rushes past a defender in an earlier game against St. Mary's. Gleed gained 159 yards against Northridge Saturday to lead the Mustangs to a 34-21 victory.

Poly stabs Matadors in conference game

By Tim Robinson

Special to the Daily

Saturday evening the Cal Poly football team went against a team which had a proverbial chip on its shoulder. It was an advantage that showed up on paper only, and a Mustang team, playing the kind of football Vince Lombardi would have been proud of, completely dominated Northridge, 34-21.

What kind of football would Lombardi be proud of? The kind of football that a guy like Sal Cesario played. Poly's Cesario, who is living up to his pre-season all-American billing, pounded the Matador defensive line senseless. He paved the way for a total of 418 yards on offense and the Mustangs' second impressive win in a row, setting their record at 3-4 on the season.

"Sal (Cesario) is absolutely dominant," said Jim Sanderson, head coach of the Mustangs. "Sal is particularly good at pinning people. He's got the size at 6'5", 265 pounds, and the strength, speed and tremendous athletic ability — and is probably one of the best offensive linemen in Div II football."

Cesario, along with the Mustang running game that is back to full strength, embarrassed the Western Football Conference's leading rushing defense, Northridge, 4-3, which allowed only 88 yards a game prior to Saturday's contest, had not met a offensive line with the caliber of Poly's.

"They hadn't been tested. They had a false sense of security and they really weren't as good as their stats," said Sanderson. "The basic difference was our offensive line kept their offense off the field," said Sanderson.

The Matadors had also not met a runningback like Jim Gleed this season. Gleed, who is playing with a broken hand, gained well over 100 yards for the second straight week.

The game was never really close, but did contain one costly miscue. Mustang quarterback Robert Perez, who played otherwise flawless football, fumbled at the Mustang 26-yard line. The fumble resulted in a brief glimmer of hope, known as Mike Doan's fieldgoal for the Matadors, but it was the only charity Cal Poly would allow.

The Mustangs then made the Matadors pay for their gift as Sinclair Miles went coast to coast for a 100-yard kickoff return. Sinclair, a 5'10" junior from San Luis Obispo, had over 163 yards in three returns and intercepted a pass. The return not only put a severe clamp on any Northridge comeback attempts, it gave the Mustang special teams their first big play of the season.

The only other problem the Mustangs had was a pleasant one, and that was deciding which of the fullbacks to play. Joey Kolina and Paulo Pueliu, who have played like interchangeable blocks of granite this season, romped for 55 and 78 yards, respectively.

They also added further to the frustration of the CSUN defense when it came to blocking. It all added up to an offense that moved at will, and it was the will of Perez that moved the game, passed for 129 yards, while completing 10 of 18 passes and no interceptions.

Perez didn't have a great day with the statistics, but then again he didn't have to — Perez just handed off, and allowed the destructive force of the offensive line take its course.

The Mustang offense, which had only one turnover, answered one of two question marks that existed before the game. The other question mark was the defense, but it is fast improving game after game. "I think our defense is playing as well as we can expect them to play at this time," said Sanderson.

The Mustangs may not dominate the conference in defense, but this is due to the fact that the margin for error in critical situations is very tight this year, said Sanderson.

Yet the outlook on the defense appears clearer each week. They have now shut down, in convincing fashion, two of the conference's best passers. Northridge quarterback, Chris Parker, one of the WFC's leading passers, did throw for 234 yards, but had two passes picked off and threw only one touchdown pass.

Northridge, a team that lives and dies by the pass, mostly died Saturday. The Matadors also came into the game with a chip on their shoulder. The chip was that the Matadors hadn't lost to Cal Poly at home since 1979.

Notables

Kudos to the following:

□James R. Hutchinson — this graphic communication professor has been awarded a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts. A member of the Cal Poly faculty since 1971, he will use the award to help him prepare a technical manual on the application of typographic principles to word processing.

□Dairy cattle — Cal Poly teams placed second at the 1985 National Collegiate Dairy Cattle Judging Contest recently. The team fell short of first place in competition after finishing in a dead heat with the University of Wisconsin after the six breed classes and reasons class at the event.

Contest rules use results of the reasons class to break ties and Wisconsin was awarded the team championship.

In the individual standings for the contest held as part of the 1985 World Dairy Expo in Madison, Wis., Matt Nunes, a senior dairy science student, won the high individual award and Sue Durrer, a sophomore dairy science student, finished fourth.

Patient waits for heart

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Richard Dallara, hoping a donor heart will arrive soon to replace his temporary artificial heart, joked with his family Monday and ate his first solid food since mechanical pumps began taking over all the functions of his diseased heart.

Dallara, 33, of Sonoma, was listed in serious but stable condition as doctors searched for a human heart to transplant.

About 90 patients around the country have been aided by the twin, pneumatically driven pumps, which circulate the blood outside his body. But Dallara is one of the first patients to have the pumps take over all the duties of both sides of the heart.
