Professors blast US assistance to Contras

By Julie Jordan

Staff Writer

United States support of the Contras in Nicaragua was denounced Monday by two Cal Poly professors, who said U.S. intervention in that country violates international conduct statutes and betrays Central Americans.

The professors' presentation was the first topic of Central America Awareness Week. Although the event was originally scheduled as a debate, Central America Study and Solidarity (CASAS), the group sponsoring the week of events, failed to find anyone to argue in favor of the Contras.

Bob Wolf, a Cal Poly math professor and member of CASAS, said, "We could not find any faculty member or person in the community willing to represent the point of view of the Reagan administration."

Reg Gooden, a professor in the political science department, began the discussion with a description of the evolution of U.S. views on Nicaragua. "Our first views toward Nicaragua reflected concern for American safety," said Gooden. The U.S. felt that Europe was a threat and that by isolating the hemisphere, safety would be achieved, he added.

In the middle of the 19th century, however, Nicaragua realized that the aggressor was not Europe, but the U.S., said Gooden. When the Marines pulled out in 1933, they left behind a professional army led by Anastasio Somoza — "an army which the U.S. had trained," said Gooden.

The Somoza regime was greedy and the level of excess was so great that when disaster relief was provided after the 1972 earthquake, blood plasma that was

Athletes campaign for fee increase

By Jennifer Smagala

Representatives of Block P, a student athletics organization, claim that the organization is non-political, but members of the group said Wednesday that they are planning to go door-to-door to distribute information for the pro campaign on the athletics referendum.

The members, who chose to remain anonymous, said that some Block P members will distribute information throughout the residence halls to make students aware of the referendum.

"We want to hand out the information door-to-door because we want to make sure people think about it. Normally they treat it as trash if someone doesn't hand it to them," a Block P member said.

The referendum, to be voted upon Nov. 4 and 5, proposes a $4 student fee increase for athletic scholarships.

Block P is a club recognized by ASI. It had been dormant until a year ago and consists of student representatives from each of the 17 varsity sports. "They are responsible for running the concessions in the gymnasium, they sponsor an end-of-the-year awards banquet, participate in fund-raising, select an athlete of the month and serve as a communications link between myself and the athletes," said Athletics Director Ken Walker.

Block P President Katie Manning said, "I will not and Block P members will not distribute the information. Even though Block P members may distribute the information (on their own), it doesn't necessarily mean that the Block P (as an organization) will be doing it."

Block P has not formed an opinion on the referendum, but

Career workshops begin

By Julie A. Williams

A three-part career planning workshop series began Tuesday to help students decide on interests in their field, skills, work environments and careers. The workshop is sponsored by the Counseling Center.

"The workshop will benefit those who know they like their major, but aren't quite sure if they know everything they can do with it," said career counselor Jill Hayden.

"We get a lot of people started and more enthused about a career search. It's a major decision and takes time," said Hayden. "It's not

Tenants have rights

Many students complain about their landlords, yet few seem willing to do anything about it. The most distressing complaint concerns landlords who withhold cleaning/security deposits without valid reasons.

What can a student do? Talk to the landlord and let him know in no uncertain terms that you mean business. You'd be surprised at how effective this approach can be. But if it doesn't work, take him to court.

There is no need to hire an attorney. In fact, if you do, the attorney's fee may be greater than the deposit. If you are convinced a deposit is being withheld wrongfully, and that is a crucial if, file a claim against the property owner in small claims court.

If you appear before the judge, remember one thing: the judge will be hearing many cases that day and doesn't like to waste time. Don't get emotional, or become bogged down in trivialities. State the facts and stick to the point. For instance, if a cleaning deposit is being withheld, bring photographs of the clean apartment to court and hand them to the judge.

If you have a valid claim, you may find the court appearance to be unnecessary. Just a notice from the court to the landlord specifying the date and time of the pending court appearance can bring favorable results.

Keep in mind, there are a few landlords who will withhold deposits from tenants for unsubstantiated reasons. Students are particularly easy targets because they aren't usually permanent residents. Don't let someone take advantage of you. Stand up for your rights (and your money).

How much will you pay the piper?

I like music. I consider my stereo to be a vital preserver of my sanity. If you feel like I do about music, you ought to know about something.

It's called the Home Audio Recording Act, and it was introduced into the Senate (S1739, House of Representatives companion bill HR2911) by Sen. Mathias of Maryland on Oct. 7, 1985. The bill proposes to do the following:

□ Home taping of copyrighted albums would be formally legalized — if no attempt is made to profit from the copy.

□ A penny-per-minute tax would be levied on all high-quality blank audio recording tape — both reel and cassette.

□ A 5 percent tax would be added to the wholesale price of all home cassette decks capable of stereo recording. Automobile systems and play-only portables would be exempt.

□ There would be a special levy (25 percent of the wholesale price) assessed against "double decks" which are designed to copy cassettes.

□ The money raised for these taxes would not be considered public revenue but would go directly to the recording industry through a special slush fund managed by the Federal Copyright Tribunal. Furthermore, the bill does not specify the terms of distribution — i.e. who gets what — from this fund,

DOWN TO EARTH

but states flatly that the recording companies will themselves decide.

The sponsors have gushed all over this bill as being fair to the recording artists. It is in fact a national ripoff authored by and for the handful of one-eyed recording conglomerates that now control the music industry.

The bill proposes to free us all from the terror of being jailed for home taping, though the industry has rarely been able to enforce the copyright laws. The bill's proponents seem to be saying that if you can't control a handful of violators, tax everybody instead. This is grossly unfair.

There are many uses for high fidelity cassette equipment other than copying records. Many audiophiles like to preserve their cheaply pressed $9 albums by taping them fresh out of the wrapper and listening to the cassette. If I buy an album for my living room, should I have to buy the same prerecorded cassette for my car? And what if I wish to tape an album that is rare or out of print — an album I can't buy at my neighborhood record store at any price?

On top of all this, the royalty reimbursement will never be fair. Our megabuck pop stars skiing in cocaine are not being mortally wounded by home taping. The obscure artists on the smaller labels, such as Windham Hill, might be hurt, but what chance does Windham Hill have against Warner, Elektra or Asylum when it comes time to divvy up the pie in Washington? The artists who are really being hurt by home taping will never see the money.

There is an ulterior motive operating here. With the advent of compact disc players for cars and joggers, the industry no longer needs the cassette format. Why sell a $10 tape when you can sell a $15 CD? And of course only the big labels can afford high-tech CD manufacturing equipment.

This bill was not acted on during the past session of Congress, but it will be reintroduced next year. It might have a different name and number, but it'll be back. If you like this bill, all you have to do is sit back and watch your congressman dance to the tune of big money.

If you don't like the bill, let Senators Wilson and Cranston know. They are both original co-sponsors, on behalf of Hollywood. You can also contact the Audio Recording Rights Coalition, which is opposing the measure. Fight now — or pay later.

Development of SDI defended by reader

Editor — Well, now I've seen everything. How ignorant can a newspaper be? I suppose you are entitled to your opinion. So SDI is the problem, is it? It has nothing at all to do with human history, human nature, or the current state of world affairs. This latest Soviet stance could not be more consistent with those its historical record confirms. As evidence you can read the "Scientific American" article on superpower relations regarding the ABM treaty for starters, printed not too many months ago.

First of all, the ability to wipe out entire cities (with one blow) has been around since 1945. SDI does not create the capability of this sad but true state of the art.

Secondly, I submit to you that the roles are reversed. Well-informed sources would testify to the fact that the Soviet government has had space-based military systems, including SDI-similar systems, under development for the past 10 to 20 years. Can we afford to let this go without reacting?

The Daily's editorial implies that President Reagan is at fault for attempting to do what the American people placed their confidence in him to do in the first place. Don't forget that you still have the freedom to write editorials like that one.

I really wish the Daily's editors wouldn't defend the Soviet government in cases like these. It's doing just fine without your help.

ACLU wants Thomas in school

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The American Civil Liberties Union is asking a judge to order a 5-year-old AIDS patient readmitted to the kindergarten that barred him after he bit another student.

The exclusion of Ryan Thomas from Santa Rosa Road Elementary School in Atascadero has become politicized, the ACLU argued in a motion filed Monday in U.S. District Court.

The motion for a preliminary injunction blocking the boy's suspension comes in a suit filed last week against the Atascadero Unified School District.

Thomas, who contracted AIDS from a blood transfusion, was suspended from school Sept. 8, just days after his parents won a months-long battle to get him into classes with other children. The school board voted to bar him from school until at least January, accepting the recommendation of a placement committee that found the boy immature and likely to bite again.

"He cries when his parents take his brothers to school," said ACLU attorney Mickey Wheatley. "Ryan thinks he's been taken out of school because he's dumb. He's starting to get an inferiority complex."

"The mere fact that he has AIDS is not the reason," said Roger Grass, attorney for the school district. "Our position is he does have a biting behavior."

Dr. George Rowland, health officer for San Luis Obispo County, estimated that the chance of someone contracting AIDS through a bite that breaks the skin is between one in 10,000 and one in 100,000.

Reagan's performance at summit is assailed

Editor — Did Ronald Reagan bargain well for our security in Iceland? He had a chance to start limiting nuclear weapons with the Soviets to reduce the arms race that has plagued the world since the 1950s. I feel he allowed this chance to slip away.

The concession he would have had to make was to limit research of SDI to the laboratory for 10 years. Instead, he insisted that we test our defensive shield in space. I wonder if he plans to test the x-ray laser in space? If so, he would have to send a nuclear weapon into orbit and detonate it. The day this happens will be a gloomy day for mankind.

I feel that using SDI as a bargaining chip to bring the Soviets to the bargaining table, and to get concessions from them, was ingenious. The concessions the Soviets made included not counting the French and British nuclear weapons when limiting the number of nuclear weapons in Europe. This was a major stumbling block that had been overcome, but we did not limit SDI.

I think Reagan did this because there are so many defense contractors looking to make money from SDI that if SDI got put on ice these contractors would have to go out of business.

Flaws in new tax law prove to be plentiful

WASHINGTON (AP) — When the cheering stopped and the 99th Congress became history, football fans at Louisiana State University and the University of Texas found themselves doing high-fives over a special tax break.

But their tax advantage, involving full deductions for gifts to their universities' athletic scholarship programs, is likely to be as brief as a first-quarter lead in a closely fought game.

Competing schools are crying "foul," the two universities are telling their fans to forget it and congressional sponsors are ready to drop it.

All of a sudden, it's the tax break that nobody loves.

It is one of hundreds of special-interest provisions in the landmark tax overhaul bill that President Reagan will sign into law Wednesday, and it's a textbook example of the unscientific way that federal tax laws are written.

There are other examples.

Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, worked diligently to win a special tax provision worth $8.5 million to benefit a home-state company, Ruan Transportation Management Systems Inc.

The Senate approved it as part of the tax bill. House-Senate negotiators knocked it out. But Grassley prevailed. The provision will become law, although not as part of the tax bill. It was tacked onto a budget-balancing measure.

Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., originally won an amendment allowing a handful of investors in a New Mexico coal operation to keep preferential treatment of capital gains, although the tax bill ends that break for all other Americans.

Negotiators killed the $2 million provision, but it still will become law Wednesday. A typist erroneously left the benefit in the 879-page bill, and a companion measure correcting that and hundreds of other mistakes in the legislation was lost.

That's also why the special benefit for contributors to athletics at LSU and the University of Texas remains in the bill.

In 1984, the Internal Revenue Service issued a ruling which, though totally logical to tax authorities, was as welcome to football fans as a moocher at a tailgate party.

The IRS held that a fan who makes a contribution to an athletic scholarship program and, in return, is given the privilege of buying preferential seating for home football games may deduct a portion of the gift.

The IRS reasoned that the privilege of buying seats on the 50-yard line is worth something. So, the ruling goes, if you give $500 and the privilege of buying prime seats is worth $200, you may take a deduction for $300.

Shiite group claims kidnap of American

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An underground group said Tuesday it had kidnapped an American writer of children's books, claiming the long-time resident of Beirut was a spy for the U.S. and Israel.

A handwritten statement in Arabic purportedly from the Revolutionary Justice Organization said it had abducted Edward Austin Tracy, 55, of Rutland Vt., one of a few Americans who stayed in Moslem west Beirut despite the kidnapping of 60 foreigners there since January 1984.

Seven Americans are among the 20 kidnapped foreigners who still are missing in Lebanon. The Revolutionary Justice Organization, which is believed made up of Shiite Moslems loyal to Iran, earlier claimed to have kidnapped another of the seven Americans and three Frenchmen.

The brief statement Tuesday was delivered to a Western news agency in west Beirut. It did not say where or when Tracy was kidnapped.

State-run Beirut radio quoted police sources it did not identify as saying Tracy disappeared Friday.

Accompanying the Revolutionary Justice statement was a color photograph of Tracy showing him from the waist up with a rough beard and wearing a blue shirt. He stared dully at the camera.

A photocopy of the first page of his American passport, also sent with the statement, gave his birth date as Nov. 20, 1930.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said he could not confirm Tracy had been abducted, but added: "There is a guy by the name of Edward Tracy from Rutland, Vt., who was born in 1930. Our latest information is that he has lived in west Beirut lately, but we haven't heard of him lately."

"This guy hasn't had any contact with the embassy in recent months," he said by telephone from the U.S. mission in Christian east Beirut. He spoke on condition of anonymity.

The statement from Revolutionary Justice said:

"In the name of the Almighty, 'The Revolutionary Justice Organization announces the arrest of a Jewish American spy called Edward Austin Tracy after he was definitely proven to be:

"A: feeding the Mossad and the CIA with information.

"B: Spying for the CIA."

It made no ransom demands. In Washington, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Tracy "has no connection with the U.S. government" and was "another victim of terrorism in Lebanon."

Government officials in Israel declined comment on the allegations that Tracy was linked to the Mossad secret service.

Tracy was said to be a friend of Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat before Israel's 1982 invasion drove Arafat out.

Things that go bump in the night

Darkness brings out the weird in people after hours on campus. Members of the night crew at Cal Poly have seen it all.

Night has fallen, and the Cal Poly students who have put in a hard day's work are asleep in their beds. All is quiet.

All? Not quite.

For a certain group of people, known as the night crew, this is the time when their Cal Poly lives begin.

Things happen at night that just wouldn't happen during the day. What? You don't believe it? Well, just ask them.

Ask Gene Wilkinson, who has been a custodian at Cal Poly for about three years. He works from about 2 to 7:30 a.m. every day of the week in the Graphic Arts Building. He has what you might call an interesting story:

"About a year ago, I was doing my daily rounds as usual. I entered the bathroom on the first floor, and got a start. There was some guy in the restroom, either drunk or on pills. He just looked terrible. I thought nothing of it, and went on with my work. The next night, I pressed the button for the elevator, but it didn't come down. It seemed like hours before I finally got it down, but when the door opened, I couldn't believe my eyes. There was the same guy from the night before, only now he was sitting at a desk chair asleep! In the elevator! When the elevator opened, he woke up, looked at me groggily and said, 'I've got it all straightened out!' I think he was talking about either a homework problem or a girl problem, but in any case, I escorted him out, and haven't seen him since. He must have been in the building for two nights solid!

"Fact of the matter is, you never know what you're going to run into at night. It differs all the time. I see quite a few people that don't seem to know who they are or where they're going. It's kind of scary, because you're usually all alone on the floor," Wilkinson said.

Gerolamo Salomino (nicknamed "Jerry" to those who know him), who was born in Switzerland and has been a California resident for 27 years, is also a custodian in the Graphic Arts Building. He is a fun-loving fellow, and his love of mankind is reflected in his views on his job:

"I see very little out of the ordinary, except an occasional wandering person who doesn't know where he or she is. As for drunks and vagrants, I haven't seen these kind of people walking around Cal Poly, but I'm sure they're good people. I like young people. It's one of the reasons I love this job so much. When my shift ends early, I like to go into the radio station (KCPR) and talk to whoever's in there," Salomino said.

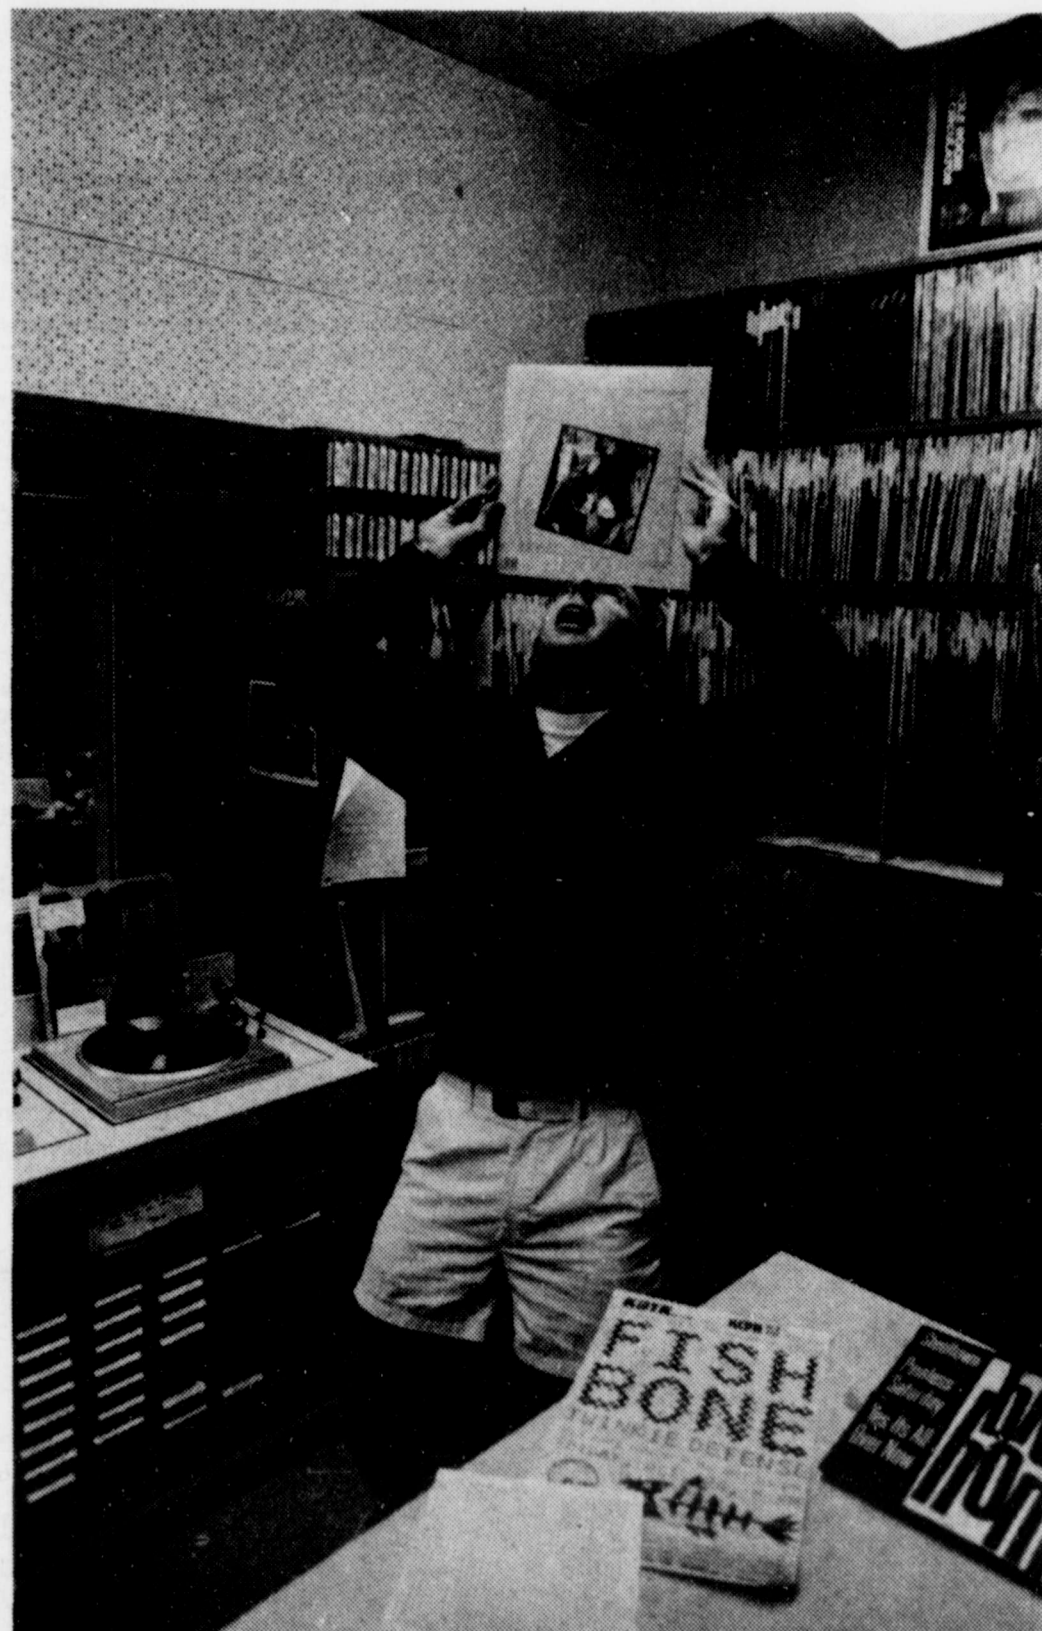

The people at KCPR have interesting night lives also.

Jay Steelman is a sophomore ornamental horticulture major, as well as a disc jockey at KCPR. He offered an explanation of his experiences there:

"It's a dungeon in there (the building). It's quiet — boy, is it quiet, for a couple of hours. Then, the janitor comes in and scares the hell out of you! Also, I always get people at night who want to come in and watch. I don't know who they are, so there's no way I'm going to let them in. Drunk girls like to call me every so often from parties, asking me to play their favorite song. If I don't, they say their party will be ruined. I don't mind it, though. It's all part of the job as far as I'm concerned," Steelman said.

Paul Beulow, a senior English major and DJ at KCPR, said:

"It is surprising, because the doors to the building are sometimes open, and you see people wandering around. You don't know who they are, and worse still, you don't know what they want. The exception is the janitors. They really like to come and talk to us. Sometimes, though, people who are really drunk will come up to our door and start pounding on it, demanding us to let them in. One time particularly stands out in my mind. Two guys came in when our door was open, and one was yelling, 'I'm Sylvester the Cat, and my own father failed me. He couldn't catch a mouse!' I knew I didn't want to let that guy in! Another time, at the beginning of the fall quarter, the janitors pushed loads of boxes and rolls of carpeting in front of KCPR's door. I guess they thought we weren't open. The DJ that night left a note on the door, saying: "Had trouble getting out of the station this morning. I just couldn't leave." It's things like that that make this job fun," Beulow said.

"The thing I like most is that you can come right up to the building, no parking problems, nothing. It's like there was never anyone here. It's really nice. I've never ran into Chris, but I hope to soon," he said.

Who's this Chris? He's Chris Borges, and he's probably the most active person at Cal Poly at night.

"I've been working at my job for about a year now, and it never gets dull. Basically what my job consists of is going around and asking people for their hall passes. If they don't have a hall pass, I ask them to leave. If they don't leave, I call Public Safety. That's my job in a nutshell, and I patrol about 14 different buildings. Still, it's never the same. Often times, I have come up on people trying to sleep in lobbies, but nothing major. Usually, it's pretty quiet, and most people that I come across are from the Mustang Daily staff. Of course, I have had my share of really strange experiences. For instance, there are a lot of people who live on the campus. I came across a room in the Graphic Arts Building where a vagrant kept his junk. It was disgusting. He also had a car where he kept his other junk. I don't know where he is now. All of his stuff just sort of disappeared," Borges said.

"Also, I have seen people who are trying to open a door, but when they see me, they take off. It's a weird job sometimes, but I enjoy it," he said.

What about the library? Surely it's always quiet, right? Wrong! Ask Gary Close, a junior industrial engineering major. He works in the Reserve Room of the library from 2 to 7:30 a.m., and to hear him talk of it, it's never dull:

"People put strange things on their request cards. Like they'll put

Thus, homegrown desperation born of poverty, military terrorism, and governmental injustices led to the emergence of the Sandinista opposition, said Gooden.

The recent capture of American Eugene Hasenfus by the Sandinista government after a rebel supply plane was shot down is a clear indication to the world of CIA intervention in Nicaragua, said Lars Hansson, who has been a freelance reporter in Central America on and off since 1981.

"The CIA is and has been and will continue to be directly involved in the attempted overthrow of the Nicaraguan democratically-elected government," said Hansson. He added, "The supply base from which Hasenfus' plane flew has been used by the CIA since 1950."

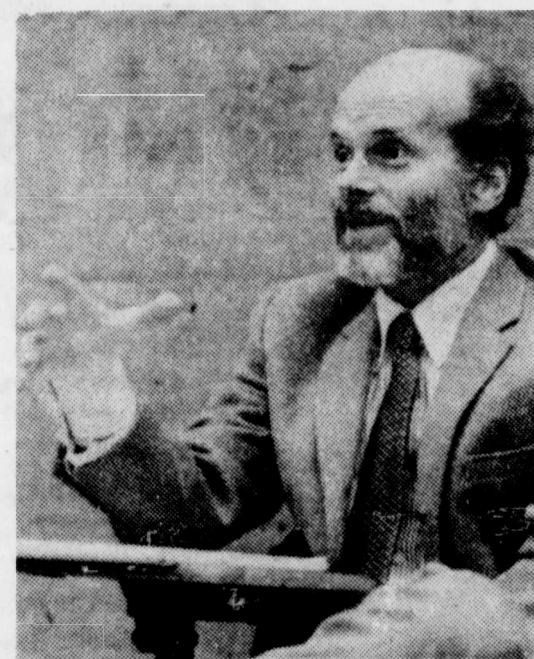

President Reagan's support of Contra activity is in direct violation of every international statute of conduct between sovereign nations, said Hansson. The United Nations World Court even ruled to that effect. The U.S., however, refuses to acknowledge its jurisdiction, he said.

Bill Little, a professor in the foreign languages department, said, "Central America looks to the U.S. for leadership, but we only betray it."

"Nicaragua is a nation of poets; the government is made up of writers, poets and priests," said Little. He asked, "Why would the U.S. government want to attack a junta of which four men are priests?"

There is an unwilling and unwanted ignorance present on the part of the U.S., said Little. "Let's get to know who we are really dealing with."

Number of new AIDS cases in LA doubles in past year

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Another 115 cases of AIDS were confirmed in Los Angeles County last month, roughly twice the number of new monthly cases one year ago, an official said Tuesday.

September's new cases, minus one previously reported case that turned out not to be AIDS, bring the total to 2,251 countywide, said Dr. Martin Finn, AIDS program medical director for the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services.

Of the total, 1,309 have died, for a death rate of 58 percent.

Another 140 possible cases await investigation and weren't included in the total, he said, adding that the county has about 8 million residents.

Finn said the monthly new case rate for acquired immune deficiency syndrome is roughly double that of a year ago, when 55 to 65 AIDS cases were confirmed each month.

As of Monday, AIDS has been diagnosed in 26,566 people in the United States and claimed 14,977 lives, according to the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

AIDS cripples the body's disease-fighting immune system, leaving its victims vulnerable to a variety of life-threatening infections and certain cancers.

AIDS is caused by a virus believed to be passed through blood and semen, but not through casual contact. Most often transmitted through sexual contact, AIDS also can be transmitted by transfusions of blood.

Japan asked to alter rice policy

SACRAMENTO (AP) — U.S. Senator Pete Wilson said Tuesday that the United States could retaliate against Japanese products if the Japanese government doesn't change its policy that has barred imports of California rice.

At a Capitol news conference, Wilson said there is a "broad range of opportunity for retaliation." He did not specify any commodities, but said that Japanese auto and electronic workers might find their jobs in jeopardy if nothing is done.

Wilson supported a petition by the U.S. Rice Millers Association to the United States Trade Representative, charging that Japan's virtual ban on rice imports unfairly restricts U.S. commerce within the meaning of a 1974 trade treaty.

The trade representative has until Oct. 27 to decide whether to pursue an investigation and make a recommendation to President Reagan.

Wilson said Japan is buying rice from Japanese farmers at 10 times the world price, a subsidy that costs Japanese consumers an estimated $25 billion.

The restrictions are costing U.S. rice exporters as much as $1.7 billion a year, much of which would go to California farmers, Wilson said. It is also cutting off rice farmers in Burma, Thailand, Pakistan and other developing countries from the Japanese market.

California rice exports have fallen from $300 million in 1981 to less than $90 million in 1985, Wilson said.

Wilson said he, like President Reagan, would be "reluctant to engage in anything that could be called protectionism." But he said he believed Reagan would act if pushed too far.

A Yuba City rice farmer, Alfred Montna, said in testimony prepared for a hearing by a Senate committee headed by Wilson that he feared the complaint by California rice farmers could be "neutralized" by referring it to an international trade tribunal.

"Recent history has shown that course to be ineffective in obtaining any meaningful resolution of petitions by other U.S. agricultural interests," he said.

"Some reports suggest that such a deal has already been struck between Washington and Tokyo. If that is true than the strong statements of this administration regarding fair trade and its actions to obtain such fair trade are inconsistent."

Poly student charged in rape, released

A Cal Poly student arrested Friday on suspicion of raping a woman in her residence hall room was released the same day after posting bail.

Timothy R. Fresenius, an 18-year-old construction management major, was charged with rape and released from San Luis Obispo County Jail on $10,000 bail, said Cal Poly Public Affairs Officer Don McCaleb.

McCaleb said Fresenius allegedly entered the woman's room through an unlocked door about 12:45 a.m. Thursday and allegedly raped her. McCaleb would not specify in which residence hall the incident occurred.

Fresenius and the victim apparently were acquainted, McCaleb said.

NIGHT

their telephone number down for their Social Security number. I also get some weird phone calls. One person called and asked, 'Does this teacher have this test on file yet?' Another person asked, 'I'm writing a report for such-and-such a class. What do you suggest I write it on?' And if you think the Reserve Room is always quiet, think again. One time, a sorority came in, got up on the desks, and started singing a sorority song at the top of their lungs for about 20 minutes, and then left. I didn't do anything about it, because no one else was there, and it broke the monotony.

"It's basically the same people here every night. Some of them will have stacks of books three feet high, and they'll leave notes on them, saying, 'Please don't put these away.' Then, they'll go to a couch, sleep for five hours, and go back to work. It's kind of inspiring to see how hard some students are trying. It gives me inspiration. Trouble is, toward the end of the quarter, the books pile up so much that it becomes detrimental to my job. Still, I like the quiet. You'd have to if you worked my job."

Such is just a sample of what Cal Poly is like during the wee hours. Imagine how much fun these people have with these jobs 365 days a year. Drop by Cal Poly some night when you're bored, and you might catch one of these people in action. Be assured, if the sun's down, they're always there.

REFERENDUM

the individual athletes have, Manning said.

The information that members may hand out states that Cal Poly athletics has won 17 national titles for the school, and if the referendum does not pass, Division I and II sports may have to drop down to the Division III league.

According to Walker, Block P conducts a lot of business that is non-political which services the needs of the athletics program. "This is very healthy. Many of our meetings are spent talking about the successes and even the failures of our athletic teams," he said.

Walker emphasized that the athletics department has no official political representative.

"Politics is a natural extension of an informed electorate," Walker said if the group was to form a political opinion, it would be like students and faculty meeting about divestment in South Africa.

Last year an assembly was held for all athletes during the vote for the recreation facility referendum. Many students associated this assembly with Block P. The purpose of the assembly was not to form any political opinions, Walker said. "We wanted to show the athletes that they have something in common and let them get together and talk."

Queen announced for Rose Parade

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Kristin Leigh Harris, a 17-year-old soccer buff and hospital volunteer who wants to be a fashion designer, was named queen of the 98th Tournament of Roses on Tuesday.

The Arcadia High School senior was chosen from a field of seven finalists and more than 800 initial applicants to lead the Rose Parade on New Year's Day. Her interest in soccer is particularly appropriate this year, since soccer star Pele, the so-called international "King of Football," is grand marshal of the parade and Rose Bowl football game.

Of her interest in soccer, she said: "I really enjoy it. I can see where Pele comes from."

She said she would like to own her own clothing store "and maybe design my own clothes to go in the clothing store."

Asked about a possible film career, she said: "I would love to do that, but who knows?"

Harris has lived in the San Gabriel Valley all her life. The brown-eyed, brown-haired daughter of Robert and Lu Harris of Arcadia has a 19-year-old brother, Rick, attending UC Berkeley.

Besides soccer, her hobbies include skiing, dancing, sewing and softball. And she is activities commissioner at her high school, where she is a member of the California Scholarship Federation. She also serves as benefits assistant for Arcadia Methodist Hospital Junior Auxiliary.

"My job is delivering food to the patients and to have a smile to cheer up their day," she said.

The Rose Queen attends church in Pasadena, at Lake Avenue Congregational Church.

Her court includes Rose princesses Sandra Lee Waltrip, 17, of Arcadia, Alicia Roshan Smith, 17, of Pasadena, Jennifer Lynn Hayes, 17, of Pasadena, Andrea Kathlene Milligan, 16, of Arcadia, Mary-Sandra Davis, 17, of San Gabriel, Diane Carole Welch, 19, of Arcadia.

US firms hurry to leave S. Africa

WASHINGTON (AP) — American companies, squeezed by a lagging economy in South Africa and anti-apartheid activists at home, are leaving the white-ruled country at a brisk pace, analysts say.

International Business Machines Corp. and General Motors Corp., two industrial giants, are the most recent concerns to announce plans to sell operations in South Africa.

Their decisions increase to 29 the number of American companies that have left or voiced plans to do so in 1986, according to Investor Responsibility Research Center, a Washington-based group that tracks U.S. business activity in South Africa.

The Coca-Cola Co., Procter & Gamble Co. and the Marriott Corp., are among the others who are pulling up stakes.

Thirty-nine American companies left in 1985, compared with seven in 1984. U.S. firms in South Africa number 244, with investment totaling $1.3 billion, down from $2.6 billion in 1981.

Disinvestment has long been a goal of American opponents of South Africa's apartheid system of strict racial separation. They argue that withdrawing U.S. capital sends a strong message to Pretoria's white government.

"This remains a major victory for the anti-apartheid movement," said Randall Robinson of the lobbying group TransAfrica. "We are going to see ... increasing isolation of that country."

The announcements by GM and IBM were especially significant because those corporations are big, well-known entities with global identities, Robinson said, predicting that more Americans firms will pull out shortly.

Disinvestment, however, is not a requirement of the sanctions legislation passed by Congress earlier this month. The law, which was enacted over President Reagan's veto, prohibits any new investment in South Africa, among other things.

The Rev. Leon Sullivan, a black Philadelphia minister who has dealt with with American firms in South Africa, has called for withdrawal of U.S. investment and a blockade of the country if apartheid is not abolished by May 1987.

For years, Sullivan urged U.S. companies to stay in South Africa as an engine for change, but he set the 1987 deadline as a means of stepping up pressure on Pretoria.

Sullivan devised the so-called Sullivan Principles, a code of conduct that many American businesses follow in hiring, training and promoting black workers in South Africa.

South Africa's recession-plagued economy has played a big role in the exodus of U.S. firms.

Poll shows most voters in state opposed to Bird

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A bumper sticker spotted in Clara County Public Defender's office, the first woman in a California governor's Cabinet, and the first and only woman ever appointed to the state Supreme Court appears likely to become the first justice of either gender removed by the voters in the 50 years of nonpartisan retention elections.

Probably even a skillful, professionally run campaign could not have saved Bird's job.

The chief justice has hired and fired several political consultants, and now is conducting her own $1 million campaign. She even writes her own 30-second television commercials, which amount to brief lectures on the court's role.

"I shouldn't go to some political manipulator, some political consultant, and have them go to a pollster and find out what emotional button to push, and then trick them into voting for me," she says.

The statement is vintage Bird: uncompromising, apparently unconcerned with the consequences. To opponents, Bird's defeat would remove the major obstacle to the death penalty. To Bird, it would mean that future justices would be expected to "kneel to the governor, kneel to the special interests."

No matter. The chief justice of California has become a symbol to opponents — of soft, criminal-coddling judges; of legal "technicalities" that set criminals free, and of liberalism in a conservative era.

Her inability to shed that symbolism is what has made it virtually impossible for Bird to dent her overwhelming deficit in opinion polls for the Nov. 4 election, two days after her 50th birthday, no matter how she replies to opponents' charges on the death penalty, lack of judicial experience, and political bias.

None of the convicted murderers whose death sentences Rose Bird has voted to overturn — joined, in all but three cases, by a majority of the state Supreme Court — has gone free, or is likely to go free anytime soon.

Her inability to shed that symbolism is what has made it virtually impossible for Bird to dent her overwhelming deficit in opinion polls for the Nov. 4 election, two days after her 50th birthday, no matter how she replies to opponents' charges on the death penalty, lack of judicial experience, and political bias.

Overall, the candidates appeared about even in PAC contributions, Zschau with $118,000 and Cranston with $114,000.

Also among the double-donators was the American Electronics Association, which gave $5,000 to Zschau, its former chairman, and $250 to Cranston.

Overall, the candidates appeared about even in PAC contributions, Zschau with $118,000 and Cranston with $114,000.

Interest groups donate to both candidates

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Forty-two special interest groups have contributed to both the major party candidates in California's hard-fought Senate race, with a variety of explanations as to what that might mean.

Political action committees donating to both incumbent Democratic Sen. Alan Cranston and Republican challenger Ed Zschau represent a wide range of interests, according to the latest filings with the Federal Election Commission.

Among the 42 PACs that gave to both sides are committees for the California Almond Growers Exchange, Handgun Control Inc. and the Mortgage Bankers Association.

The donations were reported Tuesday in Los Angeles Times.

"When PACs feel a challenger is likely to beat an incumbent, they will hedge their bets by donating to both campaigns," said Sandy Conlan, spokesman for Zschau. "This is a good sign for us."

Cranston campaign manager Darryl Sragow said the PACs "are giving to both sides in the race because that way, they get to support the winner."

Some PAC spokesmen said their groups approve of both candidates' stands on issues important to them; others said the split donations reflect the varied loyalties of corporate employees who donate to the committees; still others said they wanted to help Zschau win the Republican nomination but still favor Cranston in the general election.

"Generally speaking, it's a problem not to give money to an incumbent and have him win," said Vincent P. Reusing, vice president for public relations at Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., whose PAC gave $2,000 to Cranston and $1,000 to Zschau.

"Have we got our bases covered? I guess you could say that," said Jane DeMarines of the Mortgage Bankers Association, whose committee gave $4,000 to Cranston and $1,000 to Zschau.

Also among the double-donators was the American Electronics Association, which gave $5,000 to Zschau, its former chairman, and $250 to Cranston.

Overall, the candidates appeared about even in PAC contributions, Zschau with $118,000 and Cranston with $114,000.

Women's soccer club splits pair of games

By Dan Ruthemeyer

Sports Editor

After losing a tough 3-2 game to Cal State Northridge on Saturday, the women's soccer club came on strong Sunday to shut out Fresno State 6-0 and improve its record to 5-1 in the league.

The shutout of Fresno State was the Mustangs' fourth of the season and their most convincing win thus far. They scored five of their goals in the first half and were able to up that margin in the second half en route to the win.

Cal Poly's 3-2 loss to Northridge started out as a 1-1 halftime tie, although a missed penalty kick in the early going could have given the Mustangs the lead.

Northridge came out in the second half and scored two goals within 10 minutes of each other to put Cal Poly two goals back. The Mustangs came to within one on a penalty kick with 15 minutes to go, but were unable to score the tying goal.

In Fresno on Sunday, the Mustangs assumed the early lead and were able to give their bench some important playing time in the second half.

Freshman Caryn McNamee was the main force behind the Cal Poly offense, scoring two goals against Fresno and one against Northridge. McNamee adds these two goals to boost her scoring total to four goals, which includes two goals last weekend against USC and UCLA.

Cal Poly coach Vahid Saremi said the Northridge and Fresno State teams were very similar in that both had a few key players but weren't well rounded.

In contrast, he said the Cal Poly team is very well balanced and has a good number of players who have the ability to score. This season there have been eight players who have added to the scoring attack and 10 who have dealt out assists.

However, before the Mustang offense got going this season some changes were made.

Saremi said that after the team lost its first two games of the year, he moved one of his defensively-oriented players to a more offensive position. Michelle Gill was moved from stopper to halfback to add a little firepower to the Cal Poly offense.

Saremi said that because Gill has five years experience, she is a valuable part of the Mustang team. He said that Gill works well with halfback Megan Harding to help along the Cal Poly offense.

This week the Mustangs will play two home games at Cuesta College against San Diego State and Loyola. Cal Poly shut out this weekend's two opponents 1-0 and 4-0 several weeks ago when the Mustangs played down South.

Tapes are indefinite from Cerritos crash

WASHINGTON (AP) — A recording of cockpit conversations provides no indication that the pilot of a Mexican airliner that collided with a small plane near Los Angeles ever saw the smaller aircraft, a federal safety investigator said Tuesday.

But National Transportation Safety Board member John Lauber also said in an interview that the tape has "huge gaps" because of crash damage, and said that some exchanges between the two pilots may have been lost.

"There's no indication (in the tape recording) that they saw anything (unusual) at all," Lauber said. But he added that because of the tape damage, the board cannot "determine definitely" whether the pilots might have momentarily been aware of the other aircraft, a single-engine Piper PA-28.

Transcripts of the cockpit voice recorder tape, information from the Aeromexico DC-9's flight data recorder and other documents from the investigation into the Labor Day weekend accident are to be made public by the board late next week.

Lauber headed the NTSB investigation into the collision Aug. 30 over Cerritos, Calif., in which at least 82 people were killed, including all 64 aboard the jetliner and three in the Piper plane. At least 15 people were killed on the ground when the jetliner fell into a residential neighborhood.

The small, private plane flew without authorization into restricted airspace and collided with the jetliner at about 6,500 feet as the Mexican plane was making an approach to Los Angeles International Airport.

Blacks rumble in Zimbabwe

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — Mobs of blacks rioted through Harare on Tuesday in three hours of riots, fires and assaults prompted by the belief that South Africa played a role in the death of Mozambique's president.

Machel's Soviet-built presidential plane crashed in bad weather on a flight from Zambia to Mozambique. No evidence of foul play has been reported.

In the worst violence since Zimbabwe became independent six years ago, they set fire to two foreign airline offices, overturned cars and stoned missions of South Africa, Malawi and the U.S.

Malawi is the only black-ruled

African country that has full diplomatic relations with South Africa.

Rioters assaulted scores of shoppers and office workers, most of them white.

Several mobs involving a total of about 5,000 people surged through the city's downtown area in what militants said was a protest of alleged South African involvement in Samora Machel's death in an air crash Sunday just across the Mozambique border in South Africa. Police sources said many people were injured and more than 50 demonstrators arrested. They said none of the injuries were serious.

Zimbabwe's semi-official Inter-African News Agency said two black students involved in the protest were abducted by young whites at gunpoint near the University of Zimbabwe.

Before police gained control, mobs ordered frightened white men, women and teen-agers to chant slogans against South Africa. Many who refused were beaten.

At least six journalists, four working for foreign media, were punched or roughed up.

Police and government officials refused comment on the violence and gave no details of casualties or arrests.

Prime Minister Robert Mugabe cut short a private visit to Britain and returned hours before the trouble began.

It's a fact!

easy to set priorities and make choices, so the workshop helps wind people up."

The workshop will run for the next two Tuesdays from 3 to 5 p.m. in the Counseling Center. Students can sign up for one or more sessions; advanced registration is required.

The first workshop explored values such as motivation for working, prestige, recognition and the importance of salary.

The second topic regards helping people keep to in touch with their interests and finding out just what those interests are. This workshop will help students discover a work environment they are comfortable in and find skills they are good at and like.

"We will give each person 48 cards with different skills on every card, and they will then sort the cards into piles of skills they are good at and like and skills they dislike," said Hayden. "It's important for people to find the skills they like because even though someone may be good at typing, they may not want to do that for the rest of their life."

The final workshop is an orientation to researching careers. Students will be introduced to the career library which helps people find out what duties and salaries are involved in specific occupations. It also shows students how to use books, articles and computer programs offered.

"The computer offers 1,025 occupational profiles, and also helps students find graduate schools that fit their interests.

"The workshop works well for seniors as well as freshmen and sophomores just starting out in finding a career goal. It helps them find the type of employer or environment they want," said Hayden. "You can be perfectly set in your career goal and still be asking 'How do I decide between an IBM, Hewlett-Packard or a small retail store?'"

Hayden said she doesn't intend everyone to have the perfect career at the end of the workshops but to know which questions to ask themselves while searching for a career.

The workshops are encouraged by Hayden for people who like to work in groups. People who are not comfortable in groups can go in individually to talk or do the same organized projects.

"The groups are good because it makes people realize they're not alone; there are people with the same concerns, and it's OK to doubt. Cal Poly does not encourage you to be undecided," added Hayden.

Crackdown hurts state pot growers

UKIAH, Calif. (AP) — The state Campaign Against Marijuana Planting has revised its longtime value of marijuana grown on the North Coast from $2,000 a pound to $3,500.

"Pot is drying up," state spokesman Jim Berrera said on Monday. "It's a tough business to stay in."

"Prices are skyrocketing because it is more difficult for growers," said Mendocino County Sheriff Tim Shea.

State marijuana raiders this season pulled out about 50,000 fewer plants because far less is being grown, said Shea and Berrera.
