PCPA Casting Director to Give Master Class Nov. 1 at Cal Poly

SAN LUIS OBISPO – Erik Stein, casting director for Pacific Conservatory of the Performing Arts (PCPA), will present a vocal master class at 5 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 1, in Room 218 of the Davidson Music Center (Building 45) at Cal Poly.

During the class, several leading voice students in the university's Music Department will perform and be critiqued. Stein will be joined by his wife, actress Jacqueline Hildebrand, in working with the Cal Poly singers. The public is welcome.

PCPA is known for its professional and entertaining performances on the Allan Hancock College campus in Santa Maria and at the Solvang Theatre during summer months. PCPA is a training program that specializes in helping singers prepare for careers in musical theater performance, direction and stage craft.

The free master class is made possible by Cal Poly's Opera Workshop and is sponsored by the Cal Poly Music Department, College of Liberal Arts and Instructionally Related Activities program.

For more information on the class, call the Music Department at 805-756-2406.
