'Beyond War' holds briefing stressing alternatives to war

'War is not acceptable, even as a last alternative. We want people to start thinking about this instead of relying on war as a final solution to conflict. Let's start by changing our attitudes and then worry about elimination.'

Remember the Alamo. Remember to call your mother. Remember Nicaragua.

Nicaragua? Wait a minute. Isn't that the little country in Central America that was supposed to be the next Vietnam? Whatever happened down there?

If you feel uninformed about what is going on in Central America, you're not alone.

A recent survey sponsored by a new student organization, Beyond War, found that students are not as knowledgeable as people might think.

One question from the survey — In the list below, circle the countries whose governments actively support non-military solutions to conflict in Central America: Argentina, Brazil, Colombia, Costa Rica, Guatemala, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Peru, Uruguay, Venezuela — was almost always answered incorrectly. All 11 of these countries support non-military solutions for peace.

This is where Beyond War wants to step in. It hopes to get people to take action by providing information. It hopes people will then make the right decision about the situation.

The club is sponsoring a briefing on Thursday, Oct. 22 at 7:30 p.m. in the University Christian Center.

"The briefing is designed for people who know absolutely nothing about the Central America situation," said Staci Youngberg, coordinator of the group.

Beyond War sees itself as an educator and wants to motivate people through education. A quote by Thomas Jefferson is one of its guiding mottos:

"I know of no safe repository of the ultimate power of society but the people. And if we think them not enlightened enough, the remedy is not to take the power from them, but to inform them by education."

The long-range goal of Beyond War, however, is not just to inform people about Central America, or nuclear war, but to change the way people think about war all together.

"War is not acceptable, even as a last alternative," said Youngberg. "We want people to start thinking about this instead of relying on war as the final solution to conflict. Let's start by changing our attitudes and then worry about elimination."

Youngberg has been aware of the existence of Beyond War, a national organization, for about five years. However, she has been involved for only about two years.

THE QUESTIONNAIRE

1) In the country of El Salvador: a) 25 percent of the population owns 50 percent of the arable land, b) 10 percent owns 60 percent, c) 10 percent owns 80 percent.

2) The fastest growing segment of Central American agriculture is: a) primitive peasant farms producing only enough for subsistence, b) large agribusinesses seasonally employing landless peasantry to grow crops for export, c) small farms selling bananas and fruit on the international market.

3) One study of farming in Central America found that on the average, farms smaller than 10 acres cultivated 72 percent of their acreage. Large farms cultivated only: a) 65 percent, b) 43 percent, c) 14 percent, d) 8 percent.

4) During the last 35 years, agriculture exports from Central America have increased approximately 8 percent per year. Yet two out of every three children under the age of five suffer from malnutrition. The main reason for this is: a) the land is used to grow crops for export and not domestic consumption, b) the poor are ignorant about nutrition, c) communist guerrillas are blowing up local food markets.

5) For nearly 100 years, Costa Rica has exemplified the democracy of small farms that Thomas Jefferson envisioned as ideal. Yet while the Soviet Union awards Costa Ricans 1,500 scholarships a year to study in the USSR, the number of scholarships the United States awards each year is less than: a) 1,200, b) 500, c) 100, d) 50.

6) Adjusting for inflation, during the 1980s, U.S. military assistance to governments in Latin America has: a) doubled, b) tripled, c) quadrupled, d) increased eightfold.

7) In the list below, circle the countries whose governments actively support non-military solutions to conflict in Central America: Argentina, Brazil, Colombia, Costa Rica, Guatemala, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Peru, Uruguay, Venezuela.

8) Costa Rica, Nicaragua's southern neighbor is: a) borrowing money from the United States to build up its military defenses, b) has a long tradition of having no army and has no interest in establishing one, c) supporting the United States/Contra efforts to overthrow the Nicaraguan government.

9) The Arias plan (proposed by President Arias of Costa Rica) and the Contradora plan (proposed by four Latin American presidents) are efforts to: a) destabilize the Nicaraguan government, b) bring the United States and Soviet Union to the negotiating table over Central America, c) engage the Central American countries in a non-violent, negotiated process to solve their problems.

Answers: 1) c, 2) b, 3) c, 4) a, 5) c, 6) d, 7) every one, 8) b, 9) c.

Dow gains 102 points in panicky trading

NEW YORK (AP)—The Dow Jones industrial average bounced back about 102 points Tuesday, but its biggest point rise ever erased only one-fifth of the previous day's Depression-sized market crash.

Both the Tokyo and London stock exchanges posted their biggest losses ever on Tuesday. Worldwide, stocks lost well over $1 trillion in a 24-hour period.

Declining stocks outnumbered advancing ones by more than 5 to 2 in heavy, panicky trading in the broader New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 102.27 points — a one-day record — to 1,841.01, according to a preliminary reading, after having fallen a record 508 points on Monday.

The volume of trading — a good measure of the market's confusion — soared to 603.8 million shares, a shade below Monday's record-shattering 604.33 million-share day.

"There is still a certain amount of sensitivity and nervousness in the market," John Phelan, the chairman of the New York Stock Exchange, said at a news conference.

Investors floundered helplessly between optimism over a big drop in interest rates and pessimism over the chance of a recession — possibly triggered by the stock market's plunge itself.

The evaporation of paper wealth threatened to undermine the confidence of consumers, leading to reduced spending and higher saving. Those virtues, if overdone, could wipe out the demand for goods and services that keeps the economy growing.

"If people retrench enough, it would mean we'd have a disastrous Christmas season and we'd have a recession," said David Levy, a partner in Levy Economic Forecasts of Chappaqua, N.Y.

The Dow's plunge Monday wiped out 22.6 percent of the index's value, a bigger one-day decline than the Crash of 1929.

UC Berkeley sabbatical hard to bear for Poly professor

By Diane Wright
Staff Writer

Cal Poly organic chemistry professor Jan Simek described his recent sabbatical leave at Berkeley as miserable.

"Personally and professionally, I'm ecstatic to be back at Cal Poly," Simek said.

Simek said the state Legislature designed the UC system to be primarily a research institution, not a teaching institution for undergraduates. "There is no such thing as just a teacher at Berkeley."

He said teaching students is not the first priority of Berkeley professors.

"Students are often misguided into thinking that because (the UC system) has a good reputation, they will get a good education," said Simek.

"Students are often misguided into thinking that because (the UC system) has a good reputation, they will get a good education," said Simek.

Simek taught organic chemistry to non-chemistry majors at Berkeley from August 1986 through May 1987. He said teaching a class for an hour and a half twice a week was supposed to be a half-time position, allowing him time to do research.

However, Simek said the administration and preparation involved in teaching a class of 500 did not allow him the time to pursue research. He described the teaching as a major undertaking.

Simek said he asked a teacher at Berkeley why the classes were so large and was told that it wasn't efficient to teach small classes. He said the faculty's attitude toward undergraduates was "contemptible."

Simek said 1,000 students were allowed to register for a biology class held in a room that could only accommodate 500 students.

"They expect the students not to come," Simek said, adding that the university did provide a couple other classrooms where students could watch the lecture on TV, and a video tape of the lecture was shown later in the day.

Bush's bluntness is better for business

Last week, as Vice President Bush began chasing Reagan's job, he promptly put his foot in his mouth and spouted forth what will certainly be the first of many inappropriate campaign statements.

Bush said Russian tank mechanics are more skilled than Detroit auto workers. And he made this statement just before a campaign visit to Detroit. Not the best timing, certainly, but at least Bush is speaking his mind.

Later, he said of his comparison, "I'm sorry ... But I think the American people want quality." Well George, you're right. We do want quality, and we think it's time America was back at the forefront of quality manufacturing. Japanese cars are so popular in America because Americans recognize that they are better than their own country's products. And loyalty is short when debating a $15,000 trash heap, relatively speaking.

While Bush's insult may have been inappropriate and badly timed, it was not inaccurate. In fact, it went straight to one of the most crucial issues in America today: the competitiveness of American products in world markets.

Bush is the frontrunner in the '88 campaign, and he may even have the position wrapped up. If he continues with this type of honesty, he may even be a good man for the job.

Get your surfing in before oil walks the red carpet

"Man is prolific enough to explore across the land, but he can only do so at the expense of the organic diversity essential to the only world that he can live upon ... Man needs an Earth International Park, to protect on this planet what he has not destroyed and what need not be destroyed. In this action, all nations could unite against the one real enemy — Rampant Technology. Here might be rescued the natural places where answers can always be sought to questions man may one day be wise enough to ask." — David Brower

The ocean north of Morro Bay was as smooth as glass as I watched the sun kiss the water. Behind me was a full moon and beneath me my surfboard. I paddled under a huge wave and experienced the full meaning of riding with the flow of nature. The barrel caught up with me, and as I popped my head out of the water, a seal looked at me with a smirk. Seals seem to enjoy fellow surfers.

This complete "nature high" experience, which I often get on the Central Coast, is something I never get when surfing in Santa Barbara County. The main reason is that an oil rig offshore ruins the natural scene, not to mention the fact that it pollutes the air equivalent to 20,000 extra cars. Also, the obtrusive sight and smell of the onshore facilities ruin any possible "wild nature" experience inland. Now, Donald Hodel intends this same offshore oil scene for our beautiful Central Coast. Hodel, Reagan's secretary of the Interior, proposes a five-year plan to drill the West Coast completely for its possible oil reserves.

The Hodel plan includes the coasts of Morro Bay, Cambria and San Simeon, not to mention other pristine areas on the West Coast such as the Arctic Wildlife Refuge (which was supposedly set aside for future generations).

What makes me so angry is that the same administration that is currently saying it is a matter of "national security" that we rape our coast (for a few months' worth of oil), has also cut out programs for wind power, solar power and, most importantly, conservation policies. One example of Reagan administration moves is the lowering of the efficiency standard for cars. This step alone wastes more gas than could be gained by drilling off our coast.

Captain ecology

Joe Clokey

Our current leaders don't have a balanced energy program, so why should we allow them to wreck our coast? There are better alternatives that don't damage our few remaining places of "wild nature."

The evidence is clear. As Frank Bush of the Sierra Club stated (during the KCPR oil debate), "This administration is so one-sided that it doesn't represent the public good, it represents corporate business efforts. They're trying to get as much as they can for their friends in business before they leave office."

In the future I will be striving to inform you of events that decide our environmental future. Awareness of events is informative; action is what's needed. I hope you join me in catching the wave of an environmentally healthy future.

Letters to the editor

Professor's opinion is — quite valid

Editor:

In response to Monday's Prof's Forum, it is about time students (and faculty) clean up their acts on campus. Although professor Jenkins' suggestions may be a bit drastic, his concepts of laziness and lack of discipline are valid.

I am appalled by the condition of the U.U. Plaza, a direct result of student ignorance or environmental surroundings. The litter is not due to a lack of garbage cans: I watched a student kick around a Mustang Daily page and leave it on the ground within six inches of a trash can.

The problem lies within our attitudes and the notion that someone else will pick up after us. All the rules in the world will not prevent people from littering. It is an individual responsibility, not a job for a state employee. If we can't keep our campus clean, imagine what will happen to our parks and wilderness areas, where they don't have the resources to keep trash from polluting the landscape.

— Karen Kawczynski

— rubbish

Editor:

I would like to respond to professor Starr Jenkins' column by asking him exactly when he sees all these incredible abominations taking place here on campus? Scavenging wild cats by the dozen? Continuous drinks, rock music, snacks, lounging, littering and loafing in the classroom? I guess, as an English professor, he feels some need for the visual imagery he creates, but somehow when I think of the Cal Poly campus and classes, this exact image doesn't quite come to mind. Maybe I should compliment the clean-up crews on campus for not letting it deteriorate to that extent, but most of the Poly students I know are certainly not the generation of obnoxious, littering, filthy slob the prof speaks of.

Are we so disgusting? I mean, sometimes we are too busy to lounge around, make a meal for "meal time," eat, drink and loaf, so we have to do it all in class. I suspect "meal time" usually has a little different meaning for a professor who goes to class to say the exact same thing two or three times a day. Whereas a student trying to plow through his homework, study, write papers and find time to eat sometime in between might take a slightly different view. I guess it's just a way of saving some time, if some professors aren't inspiring enough to keep us from doing these things in class instead of listening to them. What a horrible struggle for control some of them must feel when they can see their lectures are boring and lifeless! Come on professor Jenkins, if students are "listening to rock music" in your class, maybe you should give them something worth listening to.

Perhaps the prof would like to impose a few more grade-school rules on us like no holding hands on campus, or no gum chewing. Maybe he would like us to stick it on our noses to teach us. Well, maybe someone should tell him where he can stick it!

Some of professor Jenkins' ideas were good, but overall, as a member of this "generation of slob," I think this Prof's Forum was a pile of rubbish.

War Powers editorial corrected

Editor:

A correction of your Oct. 14 editorial "War Powers Act leaves no choice" is necessary since students have been referring to it in class.

In the editorial, you wrote "It is too early in the game yet for the all-or-nothing, black and white choice mandated by the War Powers Act. If Reagan were to do as Congress begs and invoke the act in the face of 'imminent hostilities' in the Gulf, Congress would have 90 days to either declare full-on war or remove all U.S. troops from the hostile area." This is simply not the case.

Troops must be withdrawn in 60 days (or 90, if the president states that the more time is necessary) unless Congress has declared war or extends the deadline (or has not convened because the U.S. is under attack).

I am not taking a position on whether Congress should invoke the War Powers Act. What I wish to emphasize, however, is that there are three, not two, eventual options laid out under the act: a pullout, a declaration of war or simply an extension of the status quo with troops remaining in the area!

political science professor

Mustang Daily regrets that its editorial was incomplete, but the editorial board maintains its position on the War Powers Act. The new information does not show the act to be any more effective as a diplomatic tool.

Flushing toilets cause owner of home to file $50,000 suit

RANDSBURG, Calif. (AP) — A woman has filed a $50,000 lawsuit against Kern County, claiming the value of her home has gone down the toilet since public restrooms were built within earshot of her front door.

The county denies the damage, Deputy County Counsel Mark Nations said.

Reba Jo Dix, in a suit filed in Kern County Superior Court, contends her house was ruined when the county built the toilets on the grounds of the county museum, near her home.

Dix "can hear the toilets flush literally hundreds of times daily," said the suit, filed by Ridgecrest attorney Roger Stein. She has owned the home for 15 years.

The suit said the restrooms, built in May 1986, are within a few feet of Dix's property line.

Nine die, 25 hurt as military jet crashes into Indiana hotel

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A military jet crashed a mile short of an Indianapolis International Airport runway Tuesday, plowing into a hotel where at least nine people died and others were injured as the plane exploded in a "fireball," authorities and witnesses said.

Up to 25 people were missing and nine were confirmed dead in the accident at the seven-story Ramada Inn Airport, which occurred just after 9 a.m., authorities said.

"Nine is the total unless they find something under debris," said Charles Green, the chief investigator for the Marion County coroner.

Neil Sullivan, a spokesman for the county sheriff's department, blamed a "counting" error for earlier reports that 14 had died.

U.S. convoy heads for strait after raid on Iran platforms

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Navy began a new convoy operation for reflagged Kuwaiti tankers Tuesday, just one day after American ships destroyed Iranian off-shore platforms in the central Persian Gulf.

The Pentagon, in a brief statement, said the new convoy began sailing from Kuwaiti waters around 9:30 a.m. local time (2:30 a.m. EDT), steaming southward toward the Strait of Hormuz.

The convoy consists of two reflagged Kuwaiti ships — the 80,000-ton product carrier Ocean City and the 46,000-ton liquefied petroleum tanker Gas King — and the guided-missile frigate USS Ford, the Pentagon said.

"The convoy is now progressing uneventfully in the central gulf," the Pentagon added.

This is the 12th protected convoy.

'Tasteless' 70s curse haunts San Francisco polyester show

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The short-lived polyester shirt craze that died a quick death in the late 1970s will be resurrected on Thursday when a museum exhibits a collection of 200 of the flamboyantly painted garments.

The collection of shirts ranges from "the merely tasteless to the eye-gougingly garish," said Jack Mingo, a board member of the Museum of Modern Mythology.

One of the attributes of polyester is that the petrochemical composition of the fiber holds colors well. Makers of the chemical cloth developed a printing process that permanently bonded the colors into the knitted and woven fabric. The paintings reproduced on the shirts still remain brilliant to the eye.

The exhibit is arranged according to themes depicted on the shirts.

Raley's grocery store sells coupons to help feed poor

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A grocery chain with stores in northern California and Nevada is selling coupons at the checkout counters to help feed the poor in both states.

The Raley's grocery store program, known as Food for Families, will offer $1 and $5 tax-deductible coupons to shoppers and use the donations to buy food at wholesale prices for 32 non-profit food banks.

"People are hungry not only on Thanksgiving and Christmas but throughout the year," Raley's President Charles L. Collings said in an article published Tuesday. "With the support of a giving community, we hope to keep food closets full all year."

Raley's also will donate $50,000 toward the purchase of frozen meat for Christmas.

East German eludes guards, crosses West German border

HANOVER, West Germany (AP) — A 26-year-old East German man scaled border fences and fled to West Germany after eluding communist authorities who detected his escape, police said Tuesday.

The man, identified only as a bricklayer, crossed the border near the West German town of Bad Sachsa on Monday night, said West German border police in Hanover. Bad Sachsa is about 60 miles east of Goettingen.

Police said the man's first attempt to climb the barriers set off an alarm that alerted East German border guards, who began searching the area. The man hid and climbed over during a break in the search.

At least 134 people have fled to West Germany or West Berlin this year.

somebody needed to do something."

This year Youngberg met with students from college campuses throughout the state and they wrote a manual for the new student chapters.

"The splitting of the atom has changed everything save our modes of thinking, and thus we drift towards unparalleled catastrophe," said Albert Einstein. This quote relates directly to the cause of Beyond War. It wants people to realize that with today's technology, the way we think about war can be deadly to all, Youngberg said.

"It's not a matter of balance of power," she said. "As time passes more and more countries will build their defenses until they have equaled that of the United States and Russia, and the situation just escalates. People say that 'Maybe it will never happen,' but I'm not willing to base the future of the world on maybes."

Beyond War's goal is not just to see the elimination of nuclear weapons because they realize that once the technology is there the weapons can always be restored.

"The philosophy must start in the home," said Jeff Ramos, a member of Beyond War. "It's something that is very personal."

The group hopes to begin by changing the attitudes of individuals and for them to plant themselves throughout society and spread the communication.

"What we're doing emphasizes dialogue and openness to other points of view, especially to those of other countries," said Youngberg. "Everyone has an opinion."

"We're not saying conflict is bad," said Ramos. "In fact, we believe it's important in solving problems. Resorting to violence, however, is what we want to avoid."

Ramos said: "People don't realize that they can make a difference, that there are alternatives to violence."

Central America is the module, or program, for the group until Oct. 24, when its attention will shift to other issues. Discussion will center around current events in Central America and spreading the philosophy of non-violence.

"It's a tough task we're facing," said Ramos. "But it is the only way we can begin to move beyond war."

'Out of Africa'

Student travels to rural Ghana, finds more than she bargained for

By Marty Neideffer, staff writer and Dawn Jackson, lifestyle editor

"These were the poorest people I had ever seen and could have ever imagined. They had nothing.

The women generally didn't own anything more than a piece of cloth they tied around their waists and used to carry children on their backs.

A man might own as much as a casaba field, a goat, a few chickens and a few wives. They had polygamy there. Between all of his wives, a man probably had between 25 and 30 children.

Most of the children had protruding stomachs. But it turned out that it wasn't because they didn't have enough food, they didn't have the intelligence to know what kinds of food to eat.

But what surprised me the most was that they were the happiest people I had ever seen. They just seemed so content with their lives, and that really struck me.

It made me realize that of all the things we're taught to strive for in America, personally I don't believe any are the things that make people happy.

I feel I was more content living there than I have been living here. I was really happy.

Basically all I did for six days a week was work, eat and pray. I felt really whole."

Kristi Hooper (top) wears a dress she bought in one of the large cities in Ghana. Villagers dance in their new church (above) to show their appreciation to Hooper and the other missionaries who built it.

So spoke Kristi Hooper, who experienced first-hand the living conditions in the African bushland.

Hooper spent one month last summer in Ghana, a small country on the southern coast of west Africa. About the size of Oregon, Ghana has 13 million residents with 60 percent of them living in rural areas. About half of its citizens are younger than 14. Its yearly gross national product per capita is less than $400, placing it among the poorest countries in the world.

Hooper was part of a missionary group, called Teen Mission, that traveled to the village of Obese (pronounced O-bay-say) to build a church and school for the natives. As one of 25 students from all over the United States and Canada who were in the group, she said she was lucky to have been able to experience the country and its people. And she accomplished much more than building a church.

"It's funny to recall my premonitions about what the bushlands of Africa were going to be like. I couldn't help being a little bit scared that I was going to meet up some wild cannibals or something," said Hooper, a freshman English major.

The bus ride from the capital city of Accra to the village didn't help much to ease her mind.

"It was a two-hour bus ride. As we looked out the window people had less and less clothing on," she said. "We went from a bumpy road to just weeds. We were just driving through the weeds. I didn't think we were ever going to get there."

What she saw when she arrived she described as a page out of National Geographic magazine. "I didn't think those people in the pictures were really real, but that's exactly how they were. Then I was actually going to live in the middle of them," Hooper said.

She said women generally didn't wear tops and they carried everything around on their heads. "They figured out a way to swing their hips so they could balance anything. I guess it's the best way for muscles to handle carrying things without it being uneven."

The children didn't wear much clothing either. But the first thing she noticed about them was their belly buttons — they were more the size of potatoes. She said she supposed it must be from infection. "It was really easy to get used to that though. It didn't seem so sad anymore," she said.

The huts in the village were built with grass, leaves and branches. There were no bath tubs or showers. The restroom was a hole in the ground with two boards laying across.

"At first I was horrified to see that people actually had to live under those conditions," said Hooper. But she added, "By the time we left I was feeling sorry for us and the conditions we have to live under."

Her change in attitude came over time. From working with the people, and observing their way of life, she grew to love the little village with its slower pace of life, lack of competition and ease in which the people lived their lives.

She also noticed that there didn't seem to be any animosity between the people.

"They seemed so much happier than us. They always had smiles on their faces, and they never seemed to argue," said Hooper.

The only time she can remember seeing an argument was when a missionary gave one of the villagers a can of condensed food. Another villager heard of it and wanted the can for himself. A mild argument followed.

The incident made her wonder if she was doing the right thing by tampering with the simplicity of the community.

"It was like we were messing up this perfect little village," she said.

In spite of this conflict, she feels the work the team did will be of great benefit to the people of Obese. The 25- by 45-foot building took the team only three weeks to construct.

"We had a team of 17 women and four men, all between the ages of 14 and 22. Of the four leaders only one knew anything about construction," Hooper said. "Nothing against my gender, but I couldn't help wishing we had more of the male sex with us."

At first the project seemed to be a bit more than the group could handle. "For the first week we just did some sightseeing. We had to contribute some of our spending money for building materials because it wasn't all there. We waited a week for them to arrive. Ghana time is pretty slow."

The group worked 10-hour days to complete the building on time.

The building is the only solid structure within a 20-mile radius of the village. It is also the only structure around that doesn't leak when it rains.

The church/school will be run by a Baptist missionary and his assistant. Hooper said the village is in dire need of the school.

"I think 99 percent of the people in that village are completely illiterate. If they do not get educated they are more likely to be taken advantage of," she said.

She added that the villagers also need to be educated in nutrition. Their diet consists of fermented corn meal and casabva roots. And while there is no shortage, the two foods don't provide them with the nutrition they need.

Looking back on the experience, she said it was the most rewarding one of her life.

"There people are exactly the opposite of you and me. They're the exact opposite color, their social structure is exactly the opposite and everything else you can think of is exactly opposite.

"But deep down they're exactly the same. It took living with them to realize this.

They are living in the same world we are. They have the same feelings, the same basic drives and needs. And they have the same God, too."

She said that finally realizing this has changed her life.

"I never believed that it would be possible to bridge a communication gap like that. I couldn't understand a word they said and they couldn't understand a word I said. Because of this I thought I might be kind of distant from them."

But she said just the opposite was true.

"We'd teach them our songs and they'd teach us their songs. We'd all work together.

"They would always be staring at us, but I'm sure we were doing the same thing to them also. Both cultures were really curious about the other."

Hooper said she really got to know the people well. "It made me realize that it doesn't always take words to communicate."

Recalling when she first arrived, she said she expected to get just a glimpse of another culture. "But by the end of the month, that glimpse was magnified into a vivid, vivid picture. It was just incredible."

Carey in a big rush to tackle offenses

By Kristie Kuechler
Staff Writer

Cal Poly defensive end Tom Carey said one of the reasons the Mustangs are off to their best start in 14 years is the coaches.

But defensive coordinator Bill Dutton said Carey has done more than his share to contribute to the success.

Carey is the team leader in tackles with 51, 18 more than the next defender. After having 11 sacks last season, he already has 13.5. The junior from Maine was named to the all-Western Football Conference second team last year.

Dutton said it is Carey's attitude, desire and commitment that has made him the great player he is.

"He wants to be as good as he can be," said Dutton. "Carey is like a sponge, he absorbs and responds."

After the summer break, Carey returned in excellent condition and was ready to play, said Dutton. This year, he is more of a team player with leadership ability. Dutton said he did not have that last year.

Carey said the team has a more positive attitude this year and the coaches have a lot to do with that. The team practices harder and the coaches demand more discipline.

"There are no dirtbags, only good players," said Carey. "We're going to keep on kicking booty."

Carey's performance in the Mustangs' victory over Cal Lutheran in September won him WFC defensive player of the week. He made seven tackles (four unassisted), three quarterback sacks and four quarterback hurries.

"Carey's performance won us that game," said Dutton.

Carey also was named WFC defensive player of the week last season for his performance against Sacramento State. In that game, he had 12 tackles (eight unassisted) and two quarterback sacks.

Dutton said Carey has the ability to repeat as an all-conference player and reach even greater heights if he continues to work on his pass-rushing skills. Dutton has helped place 19 players into the National Football League.

Dutton played football at UC Berkeley before going on to coach there, Stanford, Cal State Los Angeles, Santa Ana Junior College and Boise State. He also coached in the United States Football League and the Canadian Football League.

Tom Carey (56) leads the team in tackles with 51.

New sports Hall of Fame to induct 13

Former Oakland Raiders coach John Madden, Giants pitcher Mike Krukow and Cardinals shortstop Ozzie Smith will be among the 13 inductees into Cal Poly's new Athletic Hall of Fame and Distinction.

The entries, chosen by a committee and approved by Cal Poly President Warren Baker, will be inducted Nov. 20 at a $50-per-plate dinner and reception at the Park Suite Hotel. They also will be recognized during the next day's Cal Poly-Santa Clara football game.

Other inductees will be Vic Buccola, LeRoy Hughes, Perry Jeter, Tom Kline, Gene Lenz, Hank Moroski, Robert Mott, Richard O'Neill, Stan Sheriff and Karin Smith.

Madden twice was an all-conference tackle for Cal Poly before graduating in 1960. He guided the Raiders to a Super Bowl victory in 1977 before becoming a color commentator for CBS and a pitchman for Lite Beer. He also sponsors the annual John Madden Celebrity Golf Classic, which raises funds for Cal Poly football.

Krukow, who was a Mustangs pitcher from 1971 to 1973, this season helped the Giants win their first divisional title in 16 years. He was a leading candidate for last year's Cy Young Award after winning 20 games. Krukow holds or shares most of correction

In the Oct. 19 edition, Mustang Daily incorrectly reported that Red Ribbon week is taking place this week. The event will take place the week of Oct. 25.

Red Ribbon week is part of a statewide promotion for a drug-free society.

Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity, sponsors of the event, will be distributing red ribbons printed with the theme "The Choice for Me... Drug Free!"

Mustang Daily regrets the error.

He said Cal Poly students have a broader outlook on life.

"In ability, the students are roughly comparable," Simek said, but added that only the top 20 percent benefit from attending a university like Berkeley. Opportunities are terrific for top-level students at Berkeley, he said.

But at Cal Poly, "We're trying to educate everyone; not just the top-level student. We don't ignore the bottom two-thirds of the students," said Simek.

The lab for Simek's class at Berkeley was supervised by teaching assistants. He said professors at Berkeley do not supervise labs.

"There, (the students) get the short end of the stick," Simek said, adding that the equipment available in labs for undergraduates was minimal or nonexistent.

Simek attempted to implement the teaching techniques he uses at Cal Poly when he was teaching at Berkeley. He had five office hours a week and students flocked to his office. He said this was the result of the attitude he projected to the students.

Simek said he gave tests similar to the ones he gives here, which are not computer Scantron scored.

Cal Poly's pitching records.

Smith was at Cal Poly from 1974 to 1977. Considered by many to be the best shortstop ever to play the game, he and the Cardinals defeated the Giants last week to gain a berth in the World Series.

Buccola, a Cal Poly physical education instructor, was a Mustangs football, boxing, and track and field standout. A co-founder of the Western Football Conference, he has been its commissioner since 1982.

Hughes coached the Cal Poly football team from 1950 to 1961. His teams won 73 games, lost 37 and tied one.

Jeter was a running back in the mid-1950s. An all-American, he went on to play with the Chicago Bears.

Kline, a wrestler, won three NCAA titles in the late 1960s. He is president of Supporters of Mustang Athletic Teams.

Lenz was Cal Poly's first all-America swimmer. He represented the United States in the 1959 Pan American Games and the 1960 Olympic Games.

Moroski is the only basketball player to have been a four-year starter and an all-conference player each of those seasons. He led the Mustangs in scoring all four years.

Mott was a baseball coach, faculty member and head of the physical education department in his 32 years at Cal Poly. He established the series of coaching workshops still held each year.

O'Neill, who has been instrumental in helping the athletic department achieve financial stability, helped found SUMAT in 1985.

Sheriff, a center in the early 1950s, was the first Mustang ever to play in the East-West Shrine Game. He also played with three NFL teams. He is the athletic director at Hawaii.

Smith, who holds the NCAA record for the javelin, was an Olympic Team member in 1976, 1980 and 1984. She placed eighth in both the 1976 and 1984 events.
