Need for peace expressed with candlelight vigil

Crowd forms to show belief in Arias plan

By Kristin Roncarati
Staff Writer

More than 150 students and local residents joined together in song and spirit Wednesday night to express their concern over the need for peace in Central America.

The event, "Candlelight Vigil," was an effort to increase student awareness of the situation in Central America. It was co-sponsored by Students For Social Responsibility and the Multi-Cultural Center.

Joe Clokey, a senior ornamental horticulture major and president of SSR, described the vigil as "a real coming-together event." Clokey said he feels it is crucial for students to show their support for the Arias Peace Plan in the Central American states, approved by the leaders of those countries Aug. 7.

Dave Gross, a Cuesta College student, said he attended the vigil because, "I'm a passivist in nature and I like being around people who share that."

Lois Barber, a San Luis Obispo resident and owner of L.M.B. hand-rehabilitation products, said she came to the event because she was "curious to see what students were doing. I think it's important for all of us to be involved with the peace initiative... It's the first really hopeful thing that has happened."

Students and community residents gather around candles and sing songs to support peace Wednesday night.

Featured at the vigil were three Cal Poly guitarists, Justin Lahey, Russell Autrey and T.J. Cape, who led the group in a series of songs by Bob Dylan, John Lennon, Cat Stevens and Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young.

Bruce Valde, a member of Action Central America, told the group about his experiences in Nicaragua. He stressed that contrary to the beliefs of the Reagan administration, the people in Central American countries do want peace.

Valde urged the crowd to write letters to congressmen, senators and the president to convince them to end U.S. support to the Contras.

The vigil was the fourth one to be sponsored by SSR, which was formed in 1984. World Peace and the Nuclear Test Ban Treaty were discussed at previous vigils.

SSR has approximately 100 members. Clokey said the group's goal is to help students learn more about the world.

New faculty office building slated

By Diane Wright
Staff Writer

The Cal Poly administration has established a committee to oversee plans to build a new faculty office building on campus.

"This is the first step in solving our faculty office problems," said E. Douglas Gerard, executive dean, facilities administration.

The committee requested construction of the new building by proposing the renovation of 95 existing two-person faculty offices to one-person faculty offices.

The project is expected to be finished by March 1990.

The committee, made up of representatives from the statistics, biology, physics, mathematics and soil science departments proposed the new building to alleviate problems caused by faculty members sharing offices in the old Science Building.

Committee chair Philip Bailey, dean of the School of Science and Mathematics, said this is the first time in the CSU system that the state

S. Senate hears from candidates, discusses student-city relations

By Alison Skratt
Staff Writer

The Student Senate heard from nine of the 10 San Luis Obispo City Council candidates Wednesday, and also discussed last year's audits for the Children's Center, University Union and ASI.

Senators seemed most concerned about group student housing in relation to the noise ordinance and zoning for fraternities and sororities. Topics ranging from city growth and busing to Cal Poly's polluting creeks and the downtown's future were also discussed.

Kyle Shepard, senator from the School of Engineering, asked several candidates about their position on the current noise ordinance, which states that 50 decibels is enough to shut down a private gathering or party.

ASI President Stan Van Vleck said that a decibel meter had been purchased to see how loud 50 decibels was, and that the level during the senate's discussion was about 65 to 75 decibels.

Most candidates said better community relations would be the best step to avoid having noise problems come up at all. Candidate Jack Gatz suggested that students living off campus should start by cleaning up their exterior image, such as keeping their yards well cared for and not leaving trash cans out all week.

Candidate Ron Bearce said the noise ordinance has created more tension than it has solved. "It's like South Africa, where the minority rules the majority," said candidate Robert Anawaty.

The community seems to forget that this is a college town, he said. "And without students, San Luis Obispo would be Atascadero."

Candidate Gary Fowler said that the 50-decibel limit is unenforceable and unconstitutional.

"It's a basic physics question," said candidate James Maxwell. "The limit should be at least 100 decibels," he said, pointing out that 100 decibels wouldn't be twice as loud — 500 would, because 10 times the number means twice as loud.

Van Vleck said it is very important that the candidates work with students on the noise ordinance because right now, the students are being "brushed off" by some council members about the ordinance.

Bearce said a Greek row would help solve some of the noise complaints, free up some housing in town and therefore reduce rent for students, and bypass the need for the Greeks wanting to live together to get zoning permits.

The council is going to have to zone for fraternities and sororities sometime, said Fowler.

Mayor Ron Dunin, who is running unopposed for re-election, promised to look into the housing and noise problems.

In other business, the senate discussed last year's audits. Accountant Brad Hair of the

Sexual safety is too crucial to be ignored

The condoms are flying in the U.U.

Members of the Health Center's peer education sexuality team have been handing out condoms to passers-by in hopes of preventing sexually transmitted diseases, unwanted pregnancies and other such ugliness. Why is this necessary? Because the Student Senate, under the staunch leadership of Kevin "I have morals" Swanson, dropped the ball on the issue last spring.

The senators who authored a resolution to place condom-dispensing machines in campus restrooms were on the right track. Swanson's controversial veto of the resolution, which made a health issue into one of morality, was misguided.

So what's stopping you now, senate? Are you afraid Big Brother is looking over your shoulder? The faulty reasoning of one ASI president should not keep condom dispensers out of campus restrooms. Making contraceptives available is not making the choice for students or "promoting promiscuity"; it is simply making an option convenient enough to prevent a few lives. Or save some.

Handing a condom to someone in public is forcing that person to announce to the world that he is sexually active. Some people are so uncomfortable with this idea (or the idea of going to the corner drug store) that they may skip the precaution and the responsibility.

The new Student Senate must pick up the ball that Swanson deflected and try again to make condoms convenient. The well-being of our fellow students is at stake.

Letters to the editor

Prof ignorant of student needs

Editor:

Professor Starr Jenkins, in his Oct. 19 article, brought up some important problems facing our campus. However, I believe he addressed them in a somewhat one-sided manner, ignoring the impact his solutions would have on the students.

The first issue raised was food and drink in the classroom. Most students would argue that food and drink in the classroom is harmless and I would tend to agree. Nonetheless, if someone feels otherwise, all they need do is convince the Student Senate that food and drink disrupts the lectures or interferes with other students' classroom experiences. If this was shown sufficiently, the senate could then ban food and drink from classrooms much the way smoking has been banned.

Next, Jenkins addressed the abundance of eateries and vending machines on campus as a source of much litter. Perhaps a lot of litter comes from these sources, but they are not at fault. Lest anyone living off campus forgets, there are more than 2,000 students living on campus, all of whom are required to purchase a meal plan and prohibited from cooking their own meals. Foundation Food Services can only offer food in limited amounts for limited hours. Therefore, removing any food opportunities on campus would unfairly exacerbate the dorm residents' meal situation.

Jenkins would also have us abolish the bulletin boards on campus so HE won't have to see this "continuous deluge of offensive trash." Perhaps he is referring to math club signs announcing Friday softball games or flyers for fraternity flings, as well as the commercial postings. I wonder where Jenkins derives his authority to "rip them down every day"? Bulletin boards and flyers are somewhat of a college tradition and are seldom opposed even in places such as UC Berkeley where the volume of fliers poses a fire hazard.

Finally, Jenkins opposes the circulation of the Mustang Daily in academic buildings. I doubt that the journalism department could publish 16,000 copies of the Daily daily. I feel that disposing of a Daily after reading "Bloom County" is far worse than leaving a copy in a classroom. If everyone "deposited" their Daily after one read, they would then deny others the chance to read it without rooting around the "roundfile."

Overall, I feel Jenkins brought up some valid points about places at Poly with room for improvement. However, I think his solutions did not take into account a crucial aspect of Cal Poly: the students. I have often heard other university students boast that the students were a number one priority at their campus. I would hope the same is true of Cal Poly.

Letter writer is incredible jerk

Editor:

I am writing in response to Ted Moncure's letter to the editor calling Joe Clokey an "anachronistic flower child."

To be blunt, Ted, you're an incredible jerk. How can you accuse Joe of being closed minded and unrealistic when you are the definition of those words? And to assume that Joe cannot think past "granola and working on VW vans" is about as accurate as the rest of your letter. Not only is Joe knowledgeable and up-to-date on environmental issues, but he is very active in his efforts to make the world a better place. You may view this as silly hippiness, but most people would find his accomplishments and dedication admirable.

I would like to challenge you to meet with Joe or any intelligent person to discuss the issues you raised. I think you would find that your arguments are the ones that need to be more thought out.

Street justice

Editor:

I would like to commend Officer Mike Kennedy for the outstanding job he did apprehending a trouble-making youth Friday night in the U.U.

After restraining the suspect facedown on the concrete, Officer Kennedy took the precaution of slamming the suspect's body onto the pavement a few times. I don't think this was a malicious act, nor do I think Officer Kennedy derived any pleasure from it. I think it was what the suspect needed and deserved.

There's nothing like a little street justice to straighten out a misguided youth.

The sad wanderings of a Farmer's Market orgasm

San Luis Obispo certainly ranks on the list of "funky" California cities. Not anything wild and woolly, like Berkeley, but not anything sterile and suburban, like (— fill in the blank: Thousand Oaks? Fair Oaks?).

And to ensure that we will be forever funky, a Farmer's Market was created just for we the citizens to enjoy and patronize. Of course, the majority of people living in the city of San Luis are neither farmers nor related to farmers, but no matter. It's our baby. Any given Thursday, a plethora of fun and frills is just tingling to an orgasm as the cops barricade Higuera Street (Spanish for "motel" by the way).

I was wondering last week, but it could have been any week since 1985, when it first opened. It's always the same. The same vendors every week; the same lines of people waiting to chomp on a big hide of somethin'; fruits and veggies sellin' faster than condoms at the Health Center; the same stores open after hours hoping that enough customers will come in to save their business from going under.

Which brings me to Riley's: "The Central Coast's Finest Department Store Featuring National Brands" or something like that. This is Americana at its finest (pardon my nationalism). Every town has something similar to Riley's. They all were founded in 1876, with some good-sounding family department store name like "Johnson's" or "McGregory's" or "Fred's." The store then makes a habit of gradually taking over adjacent stores and knocking down walls to form some morgue of a store (and one hell of an overhead). The only reason these stores stay in business is because your mom goes down there to buy your socks and underwear. Your dad lunches with the owner at the Rotary Club.

Invariably, I wander into Riley's on a Thursday's eve whenever I need to add to my Frank Sinatra ashtray collection. Usually the staff, either my age or pushing retirement, looks bored to tears and prays to punch out. Usually when my normal voice is the loudest sound in a store, I leave.

Within the streams of nobodies at Farmer's Market, one always runs into acquaintances. Some good friends, some drunken ones, some otherwise.

"Hey, Stew, hawzitgoingoodtaseeyagain hawzschooltreatingyathatsgreat. Seeyasoon ohbythewayCALL ME! Letspartiesometimedude seeya."

And I'm still scratching my head trying to figure out "Who the hell was that?"

After running into maybe half a dozen or so of these conversations, it's time to wander by some of that good old down-home entertainment. Like breakdancing, which refuses to die on the streets of San Luis. Or KSLY or Z-93 with their not-so-live pickup/Winnabago remotes blasting mind-numbing Top 40 garbage while the intern DJ's sit there giving hot and heavy PR. Last night I dreamt of San Louie ...

You can't help but like Farmer's Market. It does give you a semblance of really, really, really small-town life while putting off studying another hour or two. It also saves the downtown financially while keeping the Madonna Road and Central Coast Plazas a laughable nightmare in shopping convenience. It gives me something to do besides going to Meat-In-The-Box and forking over my last bit of green for some processed turkey-n-beef Lots-O-Lumps sandwich.

Invariably, I wander into Riley's on a Thursday's eve whenever I need to add to my Frank Sinatra ashtray collection.

It gives me a chance to make every weekend a little closer.

Legislature approved construction of faculty offices without an addition of faculty members.

"It was a matter of all of us doing the work together to put in a proposal," said Bailey. "We lobbied very vigorously to the Board of Trustees two years ago when we pushed this through," said Gerard.

Gerard said the legislature has said this project at Cal Poly will be approved, but that it would not set a precedent.

Preliminary plans for the building, showing walls and floors are being developed by the Steinberg Group, an architectural firm from San Jose. Gerard said the Legislature granted $74,000 for the preliminary plans.

The three-story building, Faculty Offices I, will contain 95 single faculty offices 110 square feet in size. It will be constructed in an arc shape along Poly View Drive, curving from the C wing to the D wing of the old Science Building.

The center of the arc will be broken by a staircase with seats beside the stairs. Bailey said, "It will be a nice community-type area." A new path will be constructed to allow easy access to the Administration Building.

"There will be a lot of big trees removed," said Bailey. "A lot of them are diseased and would have to be removed anyway."

Bailey said single faculty offices will provide an atmosphere for better interaction between teachers and students. Students will be able to speak privately with their instructors and interruptions will be lessened. Teachers will not have as many unwanted distractions.

Faculty members from the School of Science and Mathematics, the statistics department and the soil science department can occupy Faculty Office I. Although soil science is part of the School of Agriculture, faculty members will be given the opportunity to move because their offices are in the Science Building.

Bailey said some faculty members may choose to stay in their offices, because of privacy.

They are also larger than the offices in the new building. He said faculty members in other departments will be able to move to vacated offices.

"It will affect about one-half of the faculty on this campus," said Bailey. Bailey said faculty members in the computer science department might want to move into offices vacated by statistics instructors. The entire statistics department is planning to move to the new building.

Gerard said further construc-

“p hillipsaulding is inlove patti peluso”

Peluso's portrait of Patti

Interpretive photos act as guide to emotions

Stories by Kim Holweger, Managing Editor

Also at the galerie ...

Sharing the stage with Peluso in the U.U. Galerie is former Cal Poly student Mary Fullwood.

Fullwood graduated from the art and design department with a photography option last spring and is working toward her master's in fine arts at Pratt Institute in Brooklyn.

Fullwood's portion of the exhibition, which also explores aspects of portraiture, is extremely thought-provoking.

Galerie director Jeanne LaBarbara said she feels Fullwood wants her work to confront the viewer. "You can't walk on by Mary's works," she said, referring to the main body of her photos as a "feast for the eyes."

Possibly the most intense of Fullwood's photos is a close-up, tightly cropped shot of a man's face. LaBarbara said the work brings many questions to the minds of viewers. "You think 'Who is that?' 'Why is he looking like that?'" she said.

One intriguing series of eight photos seems to represent Fullwood in relation to the male principle. The figure of Fullwood seems to fade in and out throughout the series, illustrating what could be viewed as relationship conflict.

LaBarbara said what the viewer brings to the show is just as important as what the artist has presented.

"I think it heightens (the display) that you don't have all the information," she said.

The room is empty, save an illuminated television and the back of a chair which intrudes on the simple scene. Magazines are tossed underneath the TV in disinterest. A heavy-set girl sits spread-eagle just feet from the TV screen in a T-shirt, pants, socks but no shoes. Her hair is short-cropped and untidy. Her hands rest on the floor between her thighs. Her shoulders are forward and her attention focused intently on the screen before her.

This is a portrait of Patti.

It is one of many portraits documenting Patti's life, as interpreted by photographer Marta Peluso. Patti is more than a mere subject to Peluso; she is her sister.

Twenty-four-year-old Patti, born with Down's Syndrome, is the focus of Peluso's portion of "Face 2 Face," a show on display in the University Union Galerie Oct. 15 through Nov. 7.

Much of Patti's life centers around the daytime drama the "Guiding Light." She watches the show daily, tape recording each program and taking extensive notes on what happened each day. A common theme in her notes, which are also on display in the galerie, is that Phillip Spaulding, a show character, is in love with her.

Peluso said part of Patti's involvement in the program is "she vicariously lives certain things through this program — certain things that she's sheltered away from because of her situation."

Peluso, an instructor at Cuesta College and former Cal Poly instructor, earned her bachelor's degree in art and English from Allegheny College in Pennsylvania. She also received a master's degree of fine arts from UC Davis.

She has spent approximately 12 years taking pictures of Patti, but it wasn't until about seven years ago that she realized just how special the pictures were.

"It was at that point that I started realizing that I had some really wonderful pictures of her and so I wanted to start seriously photographing her," she said.

Peluso said there is a projection of herself in the photographs that's "not something that I can specifically define. They're a reflection of myself and I think other people, viewers, can see me in these photographs. So they're not just about my sister. They're about me and the images that I decided to show."

The editing process tells a lot about the artist."

She said putting the exhibit before viewers wasn't difficult at all. "It was difficult sometimes making decisions to present photographs where she doesn't look flattering. I'm right on the edge ... I don't want to be too sentimental because it is someone that I'm very close to. I don't want to take advantage of her because of her situation of having Down's Syndrome. I wanted to give people some sense of what her life was like."

"I did choose some which are very intense and very stark but also portray an aspect of the way sometimes people perceive her."

Peluso said part of the reason she chose Patti as a subject was to educate people about Down's Syndrome. She presented about five images of Patti a-year-and-a-half ago and said the response "just totally blew me away. People would come up to me and say 'How sad' and ask me 'Do you have a relationship with her? I mean, can you talk to her?' I just couldn't believe how naive people were."

"It even convinced me more that I really wanted to expand this series and really present her life to people so that they would start understanding that she's a human being who actually is a very joyful person."

Peluso said although she was worried about sending the invitation photograph to her parents, she felt they would be interested in what she was doing. "They don't say anything bad. They don't say 'Oh, you shouldn't be portraying your sister like this.'"

"My parents know how close I am to my sister — that I really love her — and I think they trust my intentions of not trying to take advantage of her or do something that would hurt her."

"They may not always understand, but they trust what I'm doing."

Mustangs top Chapman in sluggish battle, 1-0

By Julie Williams
Staff Writer

The Cal Poly men's soccer team held on to an early first-half lead Wednesday to get by Chapman College, 1-0, in a game comparable to a ping-pong match.

After Tim Hire scored off a Fabian Van Der Graaf volley, the Mustangs seemed happy just to contain Chapman and ride out their lead.

"We played down to their level," said forward Poe Allen, who thought the defense carried the team. "It was frustrating because we were a much better team, but they were fast and very physical."

Cal Poly's defense has proven itself game after game, becoming the backbone of the team. Wednesday night was no different. Goalie Eric Nelson made some beautiful saves, especially late in the game, when Chapman began delivering some tough shots. Meanwhile, the Mustangs' offense produced few real threats for Chapman.

"It was the worst game we have played all season," said head coach Wolfgang Gartner. "But it is nice to know we can play a poor game and still win."

Junior Dan Campbell, the Mustangs' leading scorer last year, did not play because of an ankle injury. Gartner said

Poly squelches Gauchos' furious rally to win

By Colin Campbell
Special to the Daily

SANTA BARBARA — If it was the "$25,000 Pyramid" it would have gone something like this: "a see-saw ... a yo-yo ... the Cal Poly volleyball team ..."

"Things that go up and down!"

"Right!"
The Lady Mustangs finally came up with the right answer too, using five games to beat No. 14 UC Santa Barbara Wednesday night, 12-15, 7-15, 15-7, 15-8, 17-15.

Game five was one of the most exciting, agonizing and thrilling games Cal Poly has played all year. After playing well early in the match and then struggling in games three and four — "A real Jeekyll and Hyde performance," said head coach Mike Wilton — the Lady Mustangs came alive in the fifth, leaping out to a lead of 14-6.

Fourteen points was so much fun for the Lady Mustangs they did not want to leave. So there they stayed. It was only after Santa Barbara rattled off nine points to take the lead, 15-14, that Cal Poly put it back in gear.

The Lady Mustangs fended off three Santa Barbara attempts at match point. Cal Poly's Claudia Hemmersbach then stuffed Judy Bellomo for a sideout. After Karen Anderson served, Santa Barbara's Jill Horning hit the ball out, evening the score at 15.

Again Anderson served. This time, Bellomo hit the ball out, putting the Lady Mustangs on top.

"I was stressing," Anderson said about her match-point serve that flew off a Gaucho's arm and into the stands for an ace. "They wanted it as much as we did, but in the end we wanted it more."

Said Wilton: "Where that spark (down 15-14) came from, I don't know. I challenged our kids to win this match, no ifs, ands or buts about it. I'm not talking about playing a good game. I'm talking about 'Let's win this puppy.'"

Michelle Hansen and Theresa Smith led Cal Poly with 23 kills each, while Darci Pankhard added 20 kills and some key play down the stretch. Santa Barbara was led by Bellomo's 28 kills and Yami Menendez's 23.

The Lady Mustangs' record improved to 12-8 overall and 4-6 in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association. Cal Poly will host UC Irvine Friday and 11th-ranked Cal State Long Beach Saturday. Both games will start at 7:30 p.m.

Campbell may not be back before the end of the regular season, although he could be ready for the playoffs.

Cal Poly (4-0-1 in the California Collegiate Athletic Association and 7-3-2 overall) is tied with fourth-ranked Cal State Northridge for the conference lead. The Mustangs will try to continue their hot streak when they face Cal State Bakersfield Saturday in Mustang Stadium. Kickoff is 7 p.m.

auditing firm of Glenn, Burdette, Phillips and Booker said the Children's Center "ran very well overall." Last year there was a minimal loss of $657, a 7 percent increase in days usage and a doubling of parental fees to help the strain on subsidies.

SCHEDULE

□ Volleyball vs. UC Irvine, 7:30 p.m., Main Gym.

SATURDAY

□ Men's cross country at Bonelli Park Invitational, San Dimas.

□ Soccer vs. Cal State Bakersfield, 7 p.m., Mustang Stadium.

□ Football at Sacramento State, 7 p.m., Hornet Field, Sacramento.

□ Volleyball vs. Cal State Long Beach, 7:30 p.m., Main Gym.

the University Union last year were the audio/visual area (Polywood), and the copy center. The firm suggested an "adjustment in costing method" to make Polywood a profitable enterprise. They also suggested careful monitoring of the copy machines to assess future profits and to keep on top of machine breakdowns.

In the ASI budget, $30,000 was transferred from the general fund to the designated fund.
