European NATO troops may have to expand

MONTEREY (AP) — NATO countries must consider boosting their conventional forces if nuclear arsenals are slashed as a result of the proposed arms pact with the Soviet Union, Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said Monday.

Weinberger, opening three days of meetings with NATO's

15-nation Nuclear Planning Group and bilateral talks with several defense ministers, said the alliance would discuss the effects of the agreement to reduce short- and intermediate-range missiles in Europe.

"As we take down nuclear capabilities, as we reduce them, it brings into focus much more sharply the conventional imbalance against us as an alliance," he said. "We all need to do more on that."

However, he said, the NATO countries appear to be reacting favorably so far to the proposed pact.

"I haven't sensed very much in the way of opposition to it," he said. "Basically, as far as we can tell ... the reaction among these countries is quite favorable."

Weinberger said verification of the treaty remains a key issue that has not been settled.

"What we have to be sure of, as sure as we possibly can, is that the Soviets are not, as they have done so many times in the past, cheating on this agreement," he said.

If, as planned, the treaty is signed by President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in Washington on Dec. 7, some European leaders have said they would like to see the pact implemented immediately and not

Nominations for favorite teacher begin

By Kristie Kuechler
Staff Writer

It's that time of the year again for nominating a favorite professor for the Distinguished Teacher Award.

The award is given to a teacher based on the recommendations of students and faculty. It is a way for students to show their appreciation of a professor.

"It is an award that comes from the heart," said Philip Ruggles, a graphic communication professor.

There are boxes all over campus filled with nominating forms for students and faculty to fill out. Completed forms can be dropped off at the library information desk and at the U.U. information desk.

The deadline to turn in forms is Dec. 11.

The teacher being nominated must meet certain criteria before he will be considered for the award. The nominated teacher must have a high degree of interaction with students, faculty and staff; must be well organized in lecture; must show concern for the student as an individual; and must be a full-time, fully tenured faculty member teaching during this academic year.

A teacher cannot win the award twice. Award winners are eligible to sit on the board that selects the winner.

The board consists of five teachers and two students. The committee is part of the Academic Senate so it chooses the students who will sit on the board. This year

Flasher increasingly violent with attacks

By April Karys
Staff Writer

Campus police received five reports of indecent exposure last month and warn women who park or walk in the Slack Street or Pacheco Way area to be careful.

Ray Berrett, campus police investigator, said the offender is about 5 feet 11 inches tall, has dark, wavy, shoulder-length, thinning hair, very light skin and a mustache. The flasher wore grey Dolphin-type running shorts and a light gray or white short-sleeved T-shirt during each reported incident, Berrett said.

"This guy is not a runner — that's just his cover," Berrett said. "He waits in the bushes for a lone woman to walk to her car, or park and walk to class. Then he jumps out and follows her."

The flasher struck one victim on the buttocks, and reports of each incident show that his behavior became more lude and violent with each incident, the investigator said.

Groundskeepers will trim all shrubbery in the area around the Cal Poly track, but the flasher could move to another area, Berrett warned. Anyone who has been a victim of indecent exposure or who sees a man of the above description should call Public Safety at 756-2222.

Free bicycle registration for dorm residents will be held Thursday, Nov. 5 in the U.U. Plaza at 11:00 a.m. California vehicle code 21206 requires that bicycles be registered with campus police. Dorm residents may also register their bicycles at Public Safety (Building 70).

Aluminum valued at $15,635

Club finds extra income on campus in can recycling

By Joan M. Halpin
Staff Writer

The Society of Environmental Engineers has tapped an extra income source by recycling aluminum cans collected on the Cal Poly campus.

Club president Kathy Garrison said it makes good sense to recycle, especially since the price of aluminum has increased.

Today aluminum scrap is valued at about 35 cents a pound. With the large number of cans purchased by Cal Poly each year, there is potential for a substantial loss every time a can is tossed away as trash instead of recycled.

Cary Yamashiro, a city and regional planning major working on his senior project, said figures from the All American Bottling Company in Santa Maria estimated Cal Poly may be losing about $15,635 a year by not recycling.

This dollar amount is a total from various places on campus that supply soft drinks in aluminum cans. These places, including vending machines, are located throughout the campus.

The environmental engineering club makes a profit on the recycling — usually enough to cover operation expenses and provide trips for major-related conferences.

Profit was a practical motive for starting the recycling program, but Garrison said club members brainstormed to find a business venture representative of their major.

Roy Kuroiwa, vice president and chairman of the environmental engineer aluminum can collection committee, said the club's major goal is to get the environmental engineer major publicized. "Some companies don't realize our major exists," said Kuroiwa.

Kuroiwa said "the industry is booming," and since the environmental engineering major is an accredited program at Cal Po ly, company representatives have a choice of selecting a specialized field.

So far, the club's recycling containers are located in front of Kennedy Library and at the Campus Store. Other environmentally conscious groups have aluminum containers around campus. Some are located outside the U.U., near the machine

Ginsberg: the right place at the right time

Bork is gone. Now a frazzled Reagan is trying to shoehorn Douglas Ginsberg into the rejected man's receding footprints.

This time the choice is no better. Bork was controversial because of his track record, supported by a long list of opinions, papers and federal judicial experience. Ginsberg is controversial because of his lack thereof.

Douglas Ginsberg is 41 years old and has served in the federal court system for only one year, following an appointment by Reagan. He has been called a yuppie judge by some, but most who know call him simply inexperienced. This time, instead of saying, "His opinions are too conservative," congressmen are saying "What opinions?" and the legal community is saying "Who is this man Ginsberg?"

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vermont, a member of the judiciary committee, said in an interview on CNN, "We will make the record that doesn't exist." This is an admirable approach to evaluating a Supreme Court nominee, but a judge cannot be evaluated by generalizing about potential case topics.

Unfortunately Ginsberg's inexperience also makes him politically uncontroversial, and a shoe-in for the job.

Educational responsibility lies with the student

Students who bitch about their teachers are missing the point

As I go about my studies on and off this campus, I am continually amazed by the lack of responsibility that some students have for their own education. I've stopped counting the times I've heard one student remark to another, "Professor X is terrible — he/she didn't teach me anything!"

If those students were being responsible and objective, they would realize it wasn't that they weren't taught anything, but that they didn't learn anything.

Most students here are incredibly serious in their scholastic pursuits and they inspire those around them. And while I'm not innocent of the occasional complaint session or procrastination break at Spike's, the kind of person I'm talking about is the student who is perfectly capable of learning, but who expects to have his knowledge hand-fed; the ones who constantly put the blame elsewhere — on the professor, the textbooks, the system — anywhere but on themselves for their failure to learn.

We are all here by choice. Some may disagree, saying that their parents make them go here. But by the time we are old enough to attend college we are certainly old enough to decide not to. And since we all decided to be here, we should go ahead and squeeze every last drop of learning out of this place that we can.

Yes, the GE requirements are stiff. Yes, you practically have to pay tribute to get into those classes. But in every system there are flaws that everyone must either go with, go around, or fight to change. These are all responsible and constructive actions.

Don't forget that part of the general education that every student gets at a university occurs with learning to work within a system — to try every alternative for getting what we want from the system, or to reform the system, if that is what would be needed to make it work.

The same applies to daily learning in the classroom. If the professor doesn't make a concept clear to a student, it is the student's responsibility to himself and to his colleagues to make the professor aware of it; to ask for another explanation, and another, until an understanding is reached. If there is no class time, there are office hours. There is the library. There are other professors who teach the same subject and who may be willing to give a student a more understandable explanation of the concept. And there are a student's peers — only a study group or phone call away.

In short, the responsible student learns to learn. He decides to learn because, fundamentally, no one can teach him, but only help him to learn. And the only lessons the student can ultimately retain and later utilize are those he teaches himself.

Once you've got that down, the rest may not be easy, but it will certainly be less frustrating.

Letters to the editor

The restroom is for condoms

Editor:

In response to Debbie Johnson's letter (Oct. 29) about condom machines in bathrooms, sex is a moral issue, I will grant that. But let's get out of the dark ages, please.

I don't think you fully understand the AIDS epidemic in the world today. Sex today is a life or death situation. Condoms are no longer the enigma of "cheap, dirty sex." They are a means to save your life. You honestly can't expect people to be abstinent until a cure for AIDS is found! I am completely offended by your statement "It is a person's right to have sex with everyone who walks down the street and is ashamed to face up to it, that is their problem."

There are a lot of responsible people out there and I don't feel going to the bathroom to buy a condom is something to be ashamed about. You should be ashamed to knowingly have sex with someone unprotected. How many people have to die before we face the AIDS problem? Let's make the world safer — make condoms more easily accessible. The Health Center is not open 24 hours a day, you know. Neither is the drug store.

If you want to talk responsibility, let's talk about why you can't inform your children about condoms. Do you feel they will never experiment in sex or are they immune somehow? If you want to talk about machines, what about Tampax machines? If people are so responsible and always prepared, why do you think they put those machines in there? Surely your children must ask questions about those machines.

— Elise Stewart

Editor:

In Debbie Johnson's letter (Oct. 29) it is quite obvious that her feelings about sex are personal. Therefore, she does not want to see condoms readily available for individual purchase in public bathrooms.

I view sex as a very personal matter that is only done with someone you love, but who am I to judge the behavior of other people? It is her kind of hush-hush attitude that got us in trouble in the first place. Everybody does it, but nobody likes to talk about it. It is clear that most people do not take responsibility for their actions, but does that mean we sit around and complain how it just isn't fair? Not hardly.

As a society we need to help others that need it. The accessibility of condoms in public restrooms is a pretty good start!

— Laura Robinson

Gay bathroom activity unfair

Editor:

I'm writing this letter in response to the article in the Mustang Daily, dated Oct. 28, entitled College Homosexuality.

During the past quarter I have noticed an extreme amount of vandalism occurring in the Fisher Science men's room located on the first floor. It seems that members of the gay community have found it necessary to communicate with each other by writing pornographic messages on the back of the toilet seat covers and bathroom walls. I have also been forced to use other bathroom facilities on campus because of the sexual activity in the Fisher Science bathroom.

There are two types of homosexuals on campus: those who respect property and the rights of heterosexuals and those who leave dirty messages on the bathroom walls and otherwise make life difficult for heterosexuals by engaging in sexual activity in the bathroom.

— Arnold Burgess

Park and ride

Editor:

This letter is regarding Friday's article on parking which stated "Students looking for a more convenient spot are taking spaces reserved for staff."

One solution might be for Poly to have a small people shuttle, similar to the Disabled Student Services transport carts. The shuttles could run from the H-14 and H-16 lots to the campus edge, and be paid for by student parking permit fees. It would be cheaper than one ticket.

— Robert Morrison

Letters degenerate

Editor:

I have been concerned about the recent letters in the Mustang Daily, as well as the lack of humor in Cal Poly students.

Over the last two weeks the letters have degenerated into personal attacks. This is disquieting because I watched similar degeneration in the Ventura College Press. In the next step, letter writers secure positions on the paper staff, gaining the authority of a byline to support their views. The result is a paper no one reads or takes seriously.

The attacks and the seriousness of the average Poly student are depressing. It's scary when teachers tell better jokes than students.

That's why I would like to thank John Zuchelli for his recent letter. He showing us the red scare tactics of the letters and the Gumby loyalty in each of our hearts. His letter makes letters worth reading.

Cocaine ring leaders arrested for alleged executions in LA

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cocaine ring leaders, who operated their network in a mirror image of a legal business, allegedly executed three members who failed to live up to the group's hand-written code of conduct, authorities said.

The ring, calling itself the "Simply Raw Crew," allegedly used application forms and a list of operating rules which included death penalty offenses, spokesmen said.

District Attorney Ira Reiner called the organization "an ugly dark mirror image of legitimate business."

The high level of organization and employee control described in documents seized during the recent arrest of four people in Kansas City, Mo., led investigators to draw parallels between the drug ring and legal trades.

"They run it like a business," Deputy District Attorney Steven Barshop said of the South Los Angeles rock-cocaine operation.

"However, in a regular business, when you get terminated you get unemployment compensation," Barshop said. "Here, when the job terminates, so does the employee."

Arrested were Gregory "G-Man" Franklin, 28, alleged head of the gang and Gerald "Smurf" Hardy, 19.

Lake Kaweah to be restocked after carnivores cleared out

WOODLAKE, Calif. (AP) — Restocking of Lake Kaweah with fish that don't eat other fish is expected to begin about the middle of this week.

All the fish in Kaweah Lake and downstream waterways in Tulare County have been suffocated with rotenone to get rid of carnivorous white bass, which state officials say could threaten striped bass and salmon if they ever migrated to the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta.

Now, as promised, the state will begin restocking.

"We'll probably be putting catchable trout in the lake (Kaweah) around the middle of the week," said George Nokes, the Department of Fish and Game's regional manager.

A total of 120,000 trout big enough to be of legal catching size will be planted during the winter.

Kaweah Lake and other Tulare County waterways were declared detoxified last week, meaning the effects of the rotenone chemical sprayed since Oct. 9 have dissipated. Meanwhile, the state was to spray 50 miles of the Kings River and its tributaries beginning Monday.

Pilot chases speeding driver down Vegas airport runway

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A quick-thinking pilot played a game of tag with a motorist on a runway at McCarran International Airport Sunday night after the errant driver whizzed past the nose of his Lear jet.

Pilot James Walker obtained permission from the McCarran tower before racing his jet down one of the airport's two main runways, trailing the speeding car until it grounded itself in a muddy median.

The car's driver, Mark Berry, 36, was arrested and charged with driving under the influence of drugs, possession of narcotics, driving without insurance and leaving the scene of an accident, police said. He was booked into the Clark County Detention Center.

Metro Police Sgt. Tom Keller said the chase reached speeds of 70 miles an hour.

Police say the incident began when Berry lost control of his car on Reno Avenue, just south of the Tropicana Hotel. Keller said Berry's car plowed through a chain-link fence bordering the airport and sped along airport property before reaching the runway.

The Las Vegas pilot was speaking to tower controllers at the time and asked for permission to chase the car until police arrived.

High court retains lawsuit filed by transsexual inmate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court Monday refused to kill a lawsuit against Indiana prison officials by a transsexual inmate who says he is being denied adequate medical care and protection from other inmates.

The justices, without comment, let stand a ruling that Lavarita Meriwether's suit deserves more study. Indiana authorities sought to have the suit thrown out, arguing that denying Meriwether estrogen treatment does not violate his constitutional rights.

Meriwether, 28, is a male, pre-operative transsexual who has undergone surgical augmentation of the face, breasts and hips so that his body shape is that of a female.

He has feminine mannerisms, wears makeup and feminine clothing when allowed, considers himself a woman and, in fact, has been living as a female since age 14.

Before his imprisonment in 1982, Meriwether had undergone nine years of estrogen therapy under the supervision of physicians. He is serving a 35-year sentence for murder.

Prison officials decided to treat Meriwether as any other male prisoner, and he was denied all treatment.

Gorbachev: Kremlin critics impatient, timid on reform

MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev accused his Kremlin critics Monday of being either too timid or too impatient about the pace of reform, and advised "revolutionary self-restraint" in the drive to modernize the Soviet Union.

The Soviet leader said Josef Stalin committed "enormous and unforgivable" crimes and announced resumption of a campaign to rehabilitate the dictator's victims. He also praised the communist state's second leader, however, for collectivizing agriculture and industrializing the country.

Gorbachev's nationally televised speech, which lasted 2 hours 41 minutes, was part of the 70th anniversary observance of the 1917 revolution that brought the communists to power.

It was his first address since the disclosure last week of a top-level fight over the pace of "perestroika," Gorbachev's program aimed at improving the quality of life by streamlining bureaucracy, encouraging individual initiative and boosting production of consumer goods.

In a mention of his visit to Washington next month for his third summit with President Reagan, Gorbachev pledged to seek a "palpable breakthrough."

Young leaders come to power in Chinese political reshuffle

BEIJING (AP) — Premier Zhao Ziyang took over as chief of the Communist Party Monday in a major leadership reshuffle that brought younger, reform-minded pragmatists to power in China.

The new line-up is the result of Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping's plan to replace an aging party leadership with new officials willing to continue his market-oriented reforms and open-door policy.

Deng, 83, stepped down from three top party posts Sunday at the conclusion of the 13th Communist Party Congress, but he was reappointed chairman of the powerful Central Military Commission, insuring that he will play a major role in China's political future.

In retiring from his posts, Deng forced leading conservatives, most notably President Li Xiannian and economist Chun Yun, to follow suit. Li and Chen, both 82, had opposed the pace of Deng's reforms.

The way is now open for Deng and his proteges to continue decentralizing the economy and further open the nation to the West.

"He stands taller and sees farther than us," the People's Daily said Monday of the 4-foot-11-inch Deng.

"He is a great man," the paper said.

Mustangs were demolished by No. 4 Portland State Saturday, 31-7. So ended five consecutive weeks Cal Poly was among the nation's elite.

The Mustangs (6-2 overall, 2-2 in the Western Football Conference) entered the poll at No. 18 in late September. It was the first time they had been ranked since 1980. They reached their peak at No. 8 two weeks ago, before falling to 14th after losing to Sacramento State.

Cal Poly rodeo team starts fall season with strong performances in Fresno FRESNO — The Cal Poly rodeo teams opened their fall season last weekend at the Fresno Rodeo, with the women taking first and the men finishing second.

Julie Adair and Lynn Burns tied for the all-around title to lead the women. The men finished behind West Hills College.

Cal Poly's top performers:

•Breakaway roping: The Lady Mustangs swept the top three spots, with Burns in first, Wendy Vestal in second and Adair in third.

•Goat tying: Adair won the event, while Burns took third.

•Barrel racing: Wendy Kaufman took second.

•Calf roping: Todd Gansberg placed second and Jeff Fontes was third.

•Steer wrestling: Fontes and Randy Bernard split third and fourth.

•Bareback riding: Jeff Hepper split second and third, while Mark Spencer took fourth.

•Saddle-bronc riding: Hepper won the short round.

RODEO

•Bull riding: Wally Connelly split fourth and fifth place in the first round.

•Team roping: Jeff Olson and West Hills' Clay Ring teamed up to win the event. Jason Rodriguez and Randy Bernard were second.

The team will host the Cal Poly Fall Rodeo this weekend at Collet Arena. Friday's competition will begin at 6:30 p.m. and Saturday's at 2 p.m. Tickets are $3 for students and $5 for general admission. Some of the West's best teams will participate.
