Holocaust recalled to conquer prejudice

By Sharon Sherman
Staff Writer

The lights were dim and the mood was solemn among the 200 people gathered in the Cal Poly Theatre for the 1988 Days of Remembrance, a commemoration to the victims of what has been referred to as the darkest chapter in human history, the Holocaust.

Underlying each presentation was the common message that the tragedy and the evil of the Holocaust must never be forgotten.

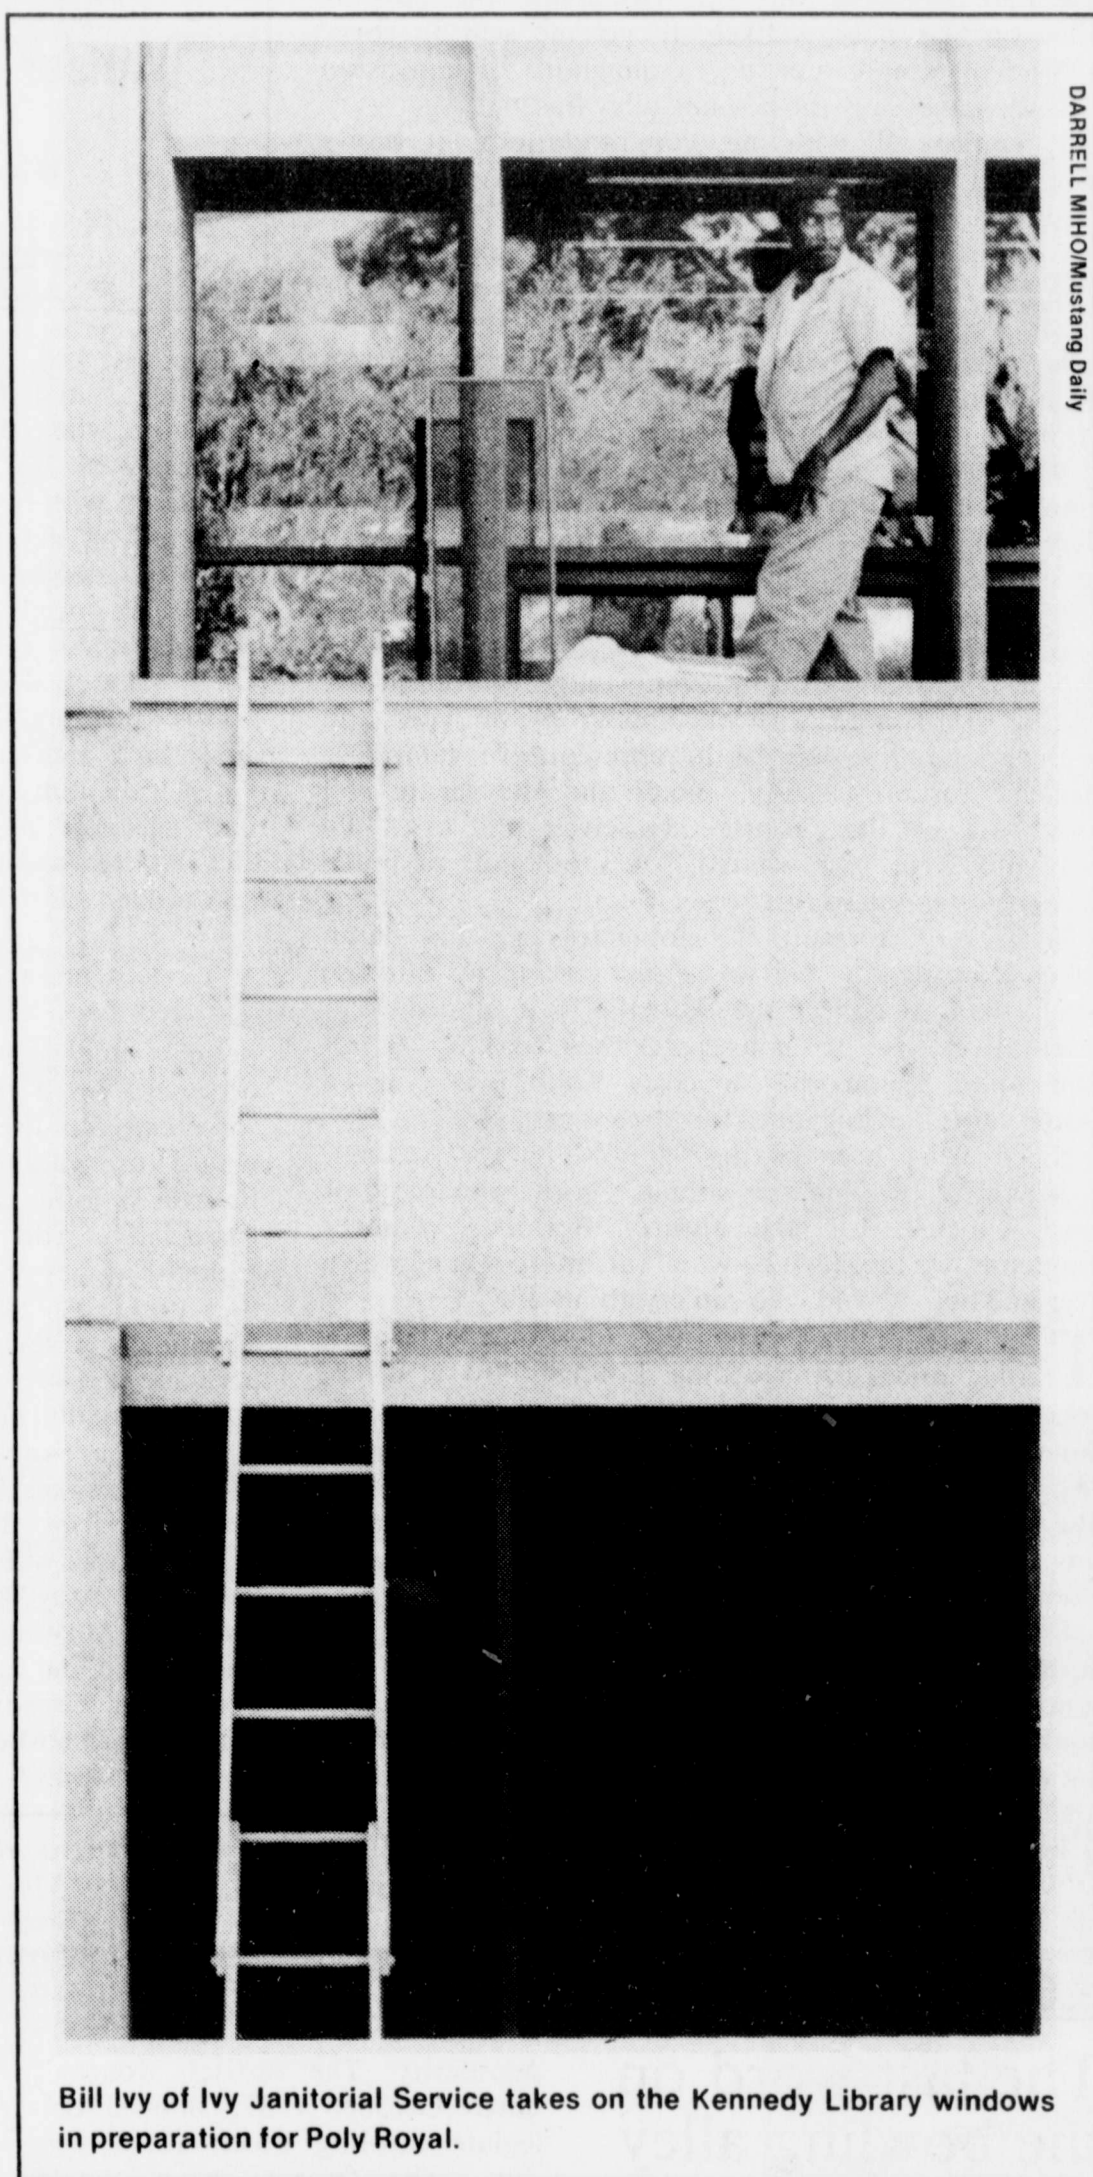

"The horror, the terror, the tremendous magnitude of the death camps and the genocidal campaigns are well documented, although it is still almost incomprehensible to many people today," said John Carsel, a member of the San Luis Obispo Holocaust Memorial Committee.

In 1980, the U.S. Congress made a national commitment to institutionalize a reminder of the Holocaust with the formation of the Holocaust Memorial Council.

Tom Rogers, a Cal Poly philosophy professor and member of the local committee, said the federal law was passed to commemorate and to educate people about the Holocaust, so that it will not happen again.

In San Luis Obispo, Mayor Ron Dunin was instrumental in the formation of the local memorial committee and also proclaimed the week of April 10-17, 1988 as the Days of Remembrance in San Luis Obispo.

ASI elections tomorrow

Fee increase, UU space use on ballot

By Claire Nickelson
Staff Writer

A proposed fee increase and the ongoing bowling alley/fitness center controversy will be decided by the students in the ASI elections tomorrow and Thursday.

If passed, the fee increase would bring ASI programming up to full budget from last year's 20 percent cut, and would help pay for rising insurance costs.

"It is strictly for programming, not staffing, and we can't have programming without insurance," said ASI Vice President Donald DeJong of the proposed $4 per quarter fee increase. "Our fixed costs have gone up while our income hasn't."

According to an ASI report, its insurance premiums went from $13,400 in 1984 to $122,900 in 1988.

"Insurance coverage is what really puts us in the hole. We insure nearly all campus organizations, both ASI-funded and non-funded. The only way to drastically reduce these premiums is to cut high-risk programs," said Sean Tuite, ASI controller.

Cut from ASI comprehensive insurance plan, many of these high-risk clubs such as Cal Poly Rodeo and the Ski Club might have a difficult time obtaining insurance on their own. Without insurance, these clubs can't operate.

ASI President Stan Van Vleck said that the proposed fee increase would help pay these premiums and put money back into clubs for operation at 1986 levels before last year's 20 percent cut.

"If the increase passes, it should take care of us for a couple of years," said Van Vleck. "If not, next year will be difficult, and we'll have to make more reductions."

Without the increase, each of the officers said that budgeting for 1989 would necessitate drastic cuts.

"Students will lose in the long run if they don't pass the fee increase," said DeJong.

The bowling alley/fitness center referendum is also on the ballot for student consideration.

The fitness center, which has been recommended by the University Union Executive Committee and the Student Senate, will go before the CSU Board of Trustees for approval should it be chosen over bowling alley renovation in the election.

The proposed fitness center would have aerobics and weight lifting facilities as well as a group of offices. After the Rec Center opens in three years, the space would be used for campus meetings and student offices.

"There is inadequate space on this campus for fitness. Overcrowded facilities sparked an interest to give students a place to recreate," said John Stipicevich, assistant director of operations for ASI.

The estimated $340,000 construction costs for the fitness center would come out of Foundation reserves set aside for such projects, and would not be borne by student fee increases, said Stipicevich.

If the bowling alley passes, the fitness center would not go before the CSU Board of Trustees at their May 18 meeting, and would be subject to re-evaluation by Cal Poly President Warren Baker.

Stipicevich also said that going on past statistics, bowling alley renovation could require a $2 per quarter fee increase for students.

The referendum's result is expected to be the last in the ongoing battle, and will only serve as a policy guide for Baker's decision, said Stipicevich.

Senate has special meeting to review ballot measure

By Alison Skratt
Staff Writer

Discrepancy over the addition of a fee increase to the bowling alley choice on this week's ballot prompted a special Student Senate meeting on Monday night.

A new ballot was approved under which the bowling alley and fitness center facilities would be "absorbed by the Rec Sports budget," which would eliminate the need for a fee increase to accompany a vote for the bowling alley.

Last week, the senate approved a ballot that said the bowling alley "will result in a $1 per quarter increase in the Student Body Center Fee, effective FALL 1988." It also said the fitness center "will not result in a student body center fee increase."

After last week's meeting, bowling advocates complained that if needed at all, a $1 increase would only be necessary for two quarters to compensate for the projected $30,000 the lanes are expected to lose a year.

This week's proposed ballot would have done this, requiring a $1 fee increase during winter and spring quarters, starting winter 1989. It would have cut the amount put aside to fund the project from $45,000 a year (which the first ballot asked for) to $30,000.

Placing the facilities under the Rec Sports budget eliminated the need to determine whether bowling is a new or continuing program. New programs have no budget allocations, and must

Nicaraguan children get support

MADRE raises money for diapers, plates in Managua

By Shelly Evans
Staff Writer

The spaghetti ran out at the Unity Church in San Luis Obispo Saturday night when about 150 people attended a dinner to benefit the Aracelly Perez Children's Center in Managua, Nicaragua.

The event, sponsored by Friends of MADRE, raised approximately $700 for the center, said coordinator Gail Comer.

"We're probably three-quarters of the way to our goal of $1,700," Comer said, adding that funds were also raised at the bowl-a-thon held by the Human Development Club at Cal Poly.

The $1,700 is going to buy 400 diapers, 200 plates and cups and two large pots for the center, which cares for 200 Nicaraguan children ages 1 to 5, Comer said.

Friends of MADRE is affiliated with the national MADRE group, an association between women and children in the United States and in Central America and the Caribbean.

Gail's Care, Comer's day-care center in Los Osos, was recently "twinning" with the Aracelly Perez

Center in an effort to create friendship bonds between the children in Nicaragua and the children in the United States, Comer said. Twenty-six day-care centers throughout the United States have already been twinned with centers in Latin America by the MADRE association, she said.

"If you raise your children to not be afraid, then when they grow up, they won't do things out of fear," Comer said, explaining that she believes Americans fear Nicaragua out of a lack of knowledge about the Sandinista government.

Pat Engle, a human development professor at Cal Poly, spent the 1986-87 year in Guatemala doing research on malnutrition and two weeks in Nicaragua working with UNICEF last summer.

Although Engle did not visit the children's center in Managua, she said she is concerned with the situation in Nicaragua and plans to assist Friends of MADRE in its effort.

"The Sandinistas are a government of the people, more so than in other Central American countries," Engle said. "They're experiencing great economic difficulty and the constant feeling that they're in war. We have to do whatever we can to show that the Sandinistas are trying to help the people."

Engle said she feels as though MADRE is committed to Central America.

"Twinning (day-care centers) is a way of making the sharing between people really personal and immediate," Engle said.

Grades will be handed out today and Wednesday in the University Union.

My stab at the bowling conflict

EDITOR'S NOTE: Due to mechanical difficulties, Monday's column by Matt Weiser was not published in its entirety. The following column is the corrected version.

Believe me — you've no idea how much I really hate to bring this up. Discussing the bowling alley on this page is likely to get me sent to cover a Student Senate meeting, a quagmire of confusion that surpasses only the bowling alley fiasco.

If you're still with me, congratulations. It shows that you, too, are bowled over by the avalanche of feces that is the bowling alley controversy.

Courtesy of the people who brought us this disaster (ASI, U.U., Foundation, Chancellor's Office), we are graciously being given the chance to tell "them" how much we would like to see it disappear. This week we get to "guide policy" by voting in the now-annual bowling referendum.

What we're really doing is participating in a giant opinion survey. Our votes simply tell President Baker and the Student Senate what we want to use the bowling alley space for. Beyond this, the vote is meaningless. Baker and the senate can do exactly what they want with the bowling alley.

Nevertheless, it is important that everyone vote. If you're irritated with this mess, please vote and give the powers that be a representative sampling. Because for all eternity, Baker and the senate will look back on this, excuse themselves, and say "We only did what you wanted." It's our job to make sure the referendum rings true.

Whatever the result, it's going to cost. The damn thing is costing us big now, and serving no purpose other than to collect the dust that our student representatives use to congregate their brains. A recent audit found that it costs $28,637 a year to watch some bowling lanes for three years.

Since we've been paying for nothing for so long, it makes sense that we should choose the path of least expense for the future. Besides, whatever happens, we'll end up with far more than we've ever had before, and who can cry about that?

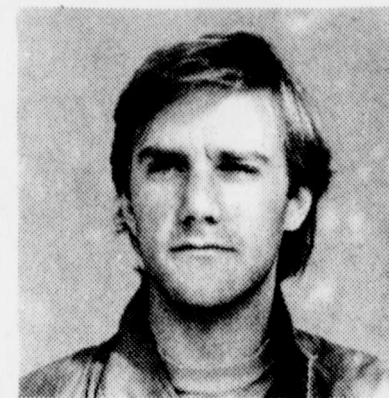

The path of least expense is to keep the bowling alley and turn Mustang Lounge into a fitness center. It will cost roughly $33,000 to reopen the lanes, 10 times less than a new fitness center would cost in its place. Politically, many students would like to see the bowling alley reopened. Financially, this is the cheapest, most attractive alternative at a school so recently addicted to fee increases.

Politically, Baker and others seem to have a sick desire for a fitness center. But it would only be functional for three years, until the nearly mythological rec center raises itself like a zit, making all other forms of recreation and fitness obsolete.

Truthfully, it would be nice to have a fresh place to work out. The old bomb shelter beneath the gym is better suited for mass burials than weight lifting. And when the rec center does raise itself from the ashes of our dreams, we'll certainly have no complaints with two sweatshops.

A WEISER PERSPECTIVE

If we ever get tired of so much exertion, we can simply go bowling. And if the rec center proves to be all we need (why wouldn't it), the Mustang Lounge/fitness center could be easily converted into a desperately needed meeting facility.

This bowling/fitness option gives the greatest versatility, and thus should satisfy the most people. A ridiculous option that does neither is the one that calls for a fitness center where the bowling alley is, and a pizza parlor where Mustang Lounge is. A pizza parlor! Who's responsible for this?

First of all, we have enough places to strap on a feed bag, all of which are becoming more expensive and less satisfying. Second, the changes necessary for a pizza parlor would make it difficult to reconver the area again. Third, Rec Sports would lose valuable space for its popular activities. Fourth, a joint that sold only pizza would flounder financially. Add beer, however, and they'd make enough money to reduce student fees. Finally, if the pizza is anything like the disks at Vista Grande, I would transfer to Cal Poly Pomona — permanently.

So it's really not a question of whether or not we will have a fitness center, but where it will go. If we put it where the bowling alley is, we will get a "pizza" parlor in Mustang Lounge, lose the right to bowl and many of us will have to work even harder to stay in school. If we put the fitness center in Mustang Lounge, we will improve fitness space, keep the lanes, send the school to the Schick Center for Greedy Universities and rid the campus of cardboard frisbees splashed with Ragu sauce.

Any questions?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The last word on the bowling alley

Editor — Matt Weiser's column regarding the bowling alley (see above) left out some important information that could affect the vote on this issue.

He was correct in stating a recent audit showed the bowling alley space costs $28,637 a year while idle. What he failed to point out is that the same audit projected the bowling alley to lose $29,861 (salaries and maintenance) when it is reopened. This shows the bowling alley would operate at a loss larger than if we left it closed.

The bowling alley was losing money before it was closed, and is expected to continue doing so. Bowling magazines have shown a continuous decline in bowling popularity. The Bowlers Journal, dated October 1987, showed collegiate bowling down 12.15 percent. The fitness center would not be operating at a loss because money to cover expenses would come from the Rec Sports budget.

As I see it, both the bowling alley and the fitness center are going to cost students money. We can either vote for a short-term cost covering the renovation of the bowling alley or vote for long-term costs covering the projected yearly losses of $29,861 to operate the bowling alley.

JOCELYN JONES

It's all in a name

Editor — I was appalled and embarrassed by Sally Davis's letter (April 11), an uncalled-for attack on the journalism major who called Cerro San Luis Obispo "Madonna Mountain." There is nothing wrong with calling a landmark by its vernacular name. The name change does not take away from the beauty or history; that which we call a rose by any other name should smell as sweet. The use of the vernacular makes it much easier for people who don't possess Davis's knowledge of history.

Secondly, Alex Madonna does own the mountain, but the M was placed by Mission Prep.

As for calling it Cerro San Luis Obispo because that is what the Spanish settlers called it, that may also be a mistake. The Chumash Indians named mountains after those who lived at the base. Alex Madonna lives at the base, so according to the Chumash, Madonna Mountain is perfectly acceptable.

Election days: April 13 and 14

The following standard questions were asked Student Senate candidates by Mustang Daily reporters. The first five deal with issues facing Cal Poly. The sixth was a personal question — so if there was any skepticism about a candidate's answer to the preceding five questions, they'd have at least one chance at a straight answer — maybe.

Many candidates were unavailable for an interview, so pre-written statements have been inserted. Good luck!

1. What should be done with the dormant bowling alley space?
2. How do you feel about the proposed fee increase?
3. If enrollment increases, how should Cal Poly handle it?
4. What would you do to increase minority enrollment?
5. How do you see relations with the city?
6. Have you ever smoked marijuana?

School of Architecture and Environmental Design, three candidates for three offices:

Paul Marcillac:

1. Supports the idea of a fitness center in the space formerly used for the bowling alley and would like tanning booths incorporated in the plan.
2. Sees no need for activity fee increases if the current budget is properly managed.
3. Opposes enrollment increases because of the university's lack of facilities and faculty.
4. Minority enrollment should be based on each individual's capabilities rather than a blanket ethnic quota.
5. Cal Poly students are always trying to increase and strengthen the communication between themselves and the community. Events like Good Neighbor Day should be continued.
6. Question concerning candidates' use of marijuana has no relevance to the election.

Dan VanBrabant:

1. Favors a multi-purpose use for the bowling alley space; the bowling lanes should be torn out and the area used for other sports.
2. Activity fee increases are only reasonable if students see a return on their money while they are still enrolled. Students shouldn't be paying for something in the distant future.
3. The idea of an enrollment increase is ridiculous since the university currently has too many students trying to get needed classes.
4. Doesn't see any problems with existing minority enrollment policies and proposes no changes.
5. Sees Cal Poly's relationship with the city as "pretty one-sided."
6. Has used marijuana.

Matthew Wisbey:

1. Looking for a plan for the bowling alley space that won't require a fee increase. Would consider a combined use, maybe fewer bowling lanes.
2. Fee increases are ultimately up to the students but they should never be used to cover mismanagement of ASI funds.
3. Enrollment increases are inappropriate, and until the university can provide a four-year degree program in four years, increases shouldn't be considered.

4. Should reflect the minority population of the state. Admission should be granted on a case-by-case basis.

5. Likes what he termed the "happy mix" of students and other city residents.

6. Has never been involved with any controlled substances, including marijuana.

School of Science and Mathematics, two candidates for two offices:

Dave Freistoffer:

1. No opinion.
2. Supports fee increases because of problems such as "rising insurance costs and inflation. We have to take a fee increase or services will be cut. Everything has been streamlined as much as it can."
3. Does not support a substantial enrollment increase because, "San Luis Obispo would lose its small-town charm."
4. No opinion.
5. "We're doing well with the city, but I don't think they know it. We support this town, and it would be nice if they supported us."
6. A definite no.

Walt Cook:

1. "It should be used as a bowling alley. There's a good chance it could make money because of the publicity it's been getting. A second chance could pull it through."
2. Supports a practical fee increase for students that would go toward hiring additional teachers like English teachers.
3. Supports the idea of an enrollment increase at Cal Poly because, "someone has to do it and we are a good choice for something like that happening."
4. Does not agree with giving minorities enrollment privileges. "I don't believe that minorities should get special advantages. People could take advantage of it because not all minorities would need a special advantage."
5. No opinion.
6. No answer.

School of Professional Studies and Education, six candidates for four offices:

Thaine Allison:

1. It was a mistake to take out the bowling alley before they had anything to do. They should have kept the bowling alley in until they put the physical fitness center in.

2. Is not in favor of fee increases. They just got a whole bunch of money last year.

3. The funds increase for teachers and space should go along with that. We already have enough trouble as it is getting classes.

4. We have a pretty strong minority education program. Is not particularly in favor of quotas or anything like that, but thinks everybody should be given the same chance.

5. We have the good neighbor day and a lot of community relations.

6. Information not available.

Dan Fitzpatrick:

1. Should go into some useful purpose — possibly for a recreation center.

2. Should be a last resort. A well-planned budget should be able to alleviate a fee increase.

3. First of all, registration for classes. New system should be looked at. If this does happen (more incoming students), changing majors could be even harder if it stays the way it is right now.

4. It's a problem that will probably take care of itself. Would like to see more diversity. Does favor minority enrollment but doesn't think that it will be a wise decision to give minority students priority.

5. Cal Poly and the city have a really good relationship. There's always room for improvement.

6. Information not available.

Roy Gough:

Information not available on the listed issues, but would like to bridge the communication gap between the Student Senate and the School of Professional Studies and Education with a newsletter.

John Kershaw:

1. A fitness center would relate to the students a lot better.
2. Would not be for any fee increase.
3. Says it is a good size right now but is not against an enrollment increase... If there was a restructuring of the C.A.R. system, then would be for one — especially if there was a faculty increase to make up for the student increase.
4. Doesn't see it as a problem. The minorities would have to meet all the requirements.
5. Would enhance the idea of a lot more community involvement. Any activities where we help the community... that created any kind of positive atmosphere.
6. Information not available.

Steve Popp:

Information on issues not available. However, would like to see a curb on fee increases. Also worries that there is no place on campus to relax with a cold one. Supports the sale of beer at football games.

Jeffrey Smith:

1. The bowling should be saved and returned to what it was because money is a big issue now.
2. There have been enough (fee increases) for now. There was, quite an increase last fall.

3. University needs more space. They have the new agriculture building but I think it's better if we have a low student-to-teacher ratio. Against it unless they accommodate more space and teachers.

4. No comment.

5. Cal Poly needs to open its arms a little and help the city out. We have our good neighbor day. Maybe we can think of other programs.

6. Information not available.

School of Liberal Arts, five candidates for three offices:

Teresa Huffman:

1. A line of suggestions needs to be opened up to the students, and they should be offered other options other than just a bowling alley and a fitness center.

2. It's inevitable. It is not fair to pay for classes and not get any.

3. We need to address the problem of the unavailability of classes by increasing the number of general-education classes.

4. Cal Poly should provide integral programs that gave minorities more of an identity.

5. Although the Greeks at Cal Poly do a lot for the community of San Luis Obispo, relations could be strengthened. Students should vote on issues concerning the city and get more involved within the community.

6. Has never smoked marijuana.

Ryan Iwanaga:

1. Would like to examine all the alternative uses of the bowling alley space before a decision is made.

2. Believes that fees are already too high and is against a fee increase.

3. Sees both good and bad in the situation. "It would bring a more diverse crowd to Poly, but until we do something about class space there should not be an increase."

4. Doesn't feel there is a problem with Cal Poly's present minority enrollment situation; however, it is an issue which will always be attacked.

5. Cal Poly is San Luis Obispo's "livelihood" and the relationship is a good one.

6. Yes. It was "adolescent and experimental" and has not smoked since being at Cal Poly.

Andrew Overden:

1. Should be left as is until the issue has been restudied. Believes a decision needs to be made, but isn't sure what that decision is.

2. Students pay too much already and the university could save money cutting a lot of corners.

3. Believes enrollment numbers should be frozen until additional class space can be added.

4. There needs to be more promotional work aimed towards minorities as well as keeping enrollment fees where they are.

5. Cal Poly is an integral part of the city. He feels the relationship could be improved by compromises on both sides as well as an increase in student-community involvement.

6. No.

Doug Roth:

1. Should be turned into a fitness center.

2. Fees should be kept as low as possible — an increase is not necessary.

3. Before there is an increase in enrollment, there needs to be an increase in the number of classes. Any other arrangement would be "ridiculous."

4. Doesn't know much about the issue, and wasn't aware of any problems. As long as the same requirements are met everyone should have an equal chance at being enrolled.

5. Cal Poly is an important part of San Luis Obispo and the relationship between the two is "pretty good."

6. "There are a lot more important, pertinent issues that could be discussed rather than the personal life of the candidates."

Wes Wells:

1. Is in favor of keeping the bowling alley. Does not yet know much about the issue but said the facilities should be returned to the students.

2. Without increases Cal Poly would not be able to cover necessary costs, such as insurance, of groups and clubs.

3. Believes enrollment numbers should be frozen until additional class space is provided. There should be a priority system, such as pre-registration.

4. Believes that we should try to raise the number of minorities enrolled at Cal Poly. "Special provisions should be made for minorities."

5. Increased involvement would enhance relations if organized groups and club did volunteer work each month.

6. No.

School of Agriculture, 10 candidates for five offices:

Brett Berridge:

1. Is pro-fitness center because students will benefit more from the fitness center than the bowling alley.

2. Is in favor of the fee increase because the money that goes into this fee increase will come back to students in the form of support for campus clubs.

3. Is against increased enrollment, because of the impact it will have on our general education classes. More space and teachers are needed before we can let in any more students.

4. Information not available.

5. Information not available.

6. Information not available.

David DeJong:

1. Information not available.

2. The fee increase is necessary because the money will go back to the students. More information should be passed on to the students about where their money is going. If students understand what their money is used for they will be more positive toward a fee increase.

3. Minorities should not be given special treatment when applying to Cal Poly. Whoever is the most qualified should be allowed to attend. All students should have to go through the same system and meet the same qualifications.

4. Information not available.

5. Information not available.

6. Information not available.

ent Senate candidates

Richard Echeverria:

Information not available on the listed issues, but would like to continue a second term in the Student Senate and carry over projects he has worked on this year including goals of the long-range planning committee and the foundation/student relations committee.

Paul Fitzgerald:

Information not available on the listed issues, but says he has grown tired of dealing with the nightmare of C.A.R. and is sick and tired of forking out money and seeing nothing in return.

Michael Gomes:

1. Supports the development of a fitness center because the other fitness facilities on campus seem to be lacking and more students would use the fitness center than the bowling alley.
2. Information not available.
3. Cal Poly shouldn't be allowed to expand its enrollment until it solves some of the more pressing problems, such as an understaffing of teachers and a lack of classroom space.
4. Information not available.
5. It needs to be improved. Both sides need to work together in order to develop a strong, lasting relationship.
6. Information not available.

Mike Gnos:

1. Is in favor of turning the bowling alley into a fitness center because the weight rooms on campus are under equipped and a fitness center might improve the quality of fitness facilities.
2. Supports the fee increase. Says that as long as the cost of insurance rises, fee increases are a must.
3. Enrollment expansion is good, as long as certain criteria are met.
"I think that as long as the university has enough teachers, and adequate facilities for the students, then it would be OK to expand the number of students."
4. Information not available.
5. Information not available.
6. Information not available.

Mike Jacobsen:

1. Is not opposed to the bowling alley, but thinks that the space should be used for what the students want.
2. Information not available.
3. Is against expanding enrollment because the university is already overcrowded. Says the university does not have the proper facilities to accommodate all of the students.
4. Information not available.
5. Believes the relationship between the city and the students is fairly decent. Feels that the residents are really helpful toward students and that students have done a lot for the community.
6. Information not available.

Jeff Plyman:

1. Supports the fitness center option more students would use it and it's what the students want.

2. Information not available.

3. Information not available.

4. Information not available.

5. Believes the relationship between Cal Poly and the city of San Luis Obispo is essentially a good one. One thing students can do to help the situation is publicize all of the positive things done for the community.

6. Information not available.

Ellen Sanders:

1. Supports the fitness center in place of the bowling alley, but thinks ultimately students should decide. If the students vote for a fitness center to be built there then it should be a fitness center and if the students want the bowling alley to stay a bowling alley, then that is what it should be.
2. Supports the fee increase because money from this increase will come back to students in support for their clubs.
3. Anybody who applies here and meets all of the criteria should be allowed admittance. Doesn't think anyone applying here should be given special treatment.
4. Information not available.
5. Information not available.
6. Information not available.

Mark Shannon:

1. Supports the fitness center option because something needs to be put in the space that benefits all students.
2. Is against fee increases because the money is going to benefit other campuses.
3. Information not available.
4. Information not available.
5. Doesn't think the relationship between Cal Poly and the city is very good. Both sides don't seem to appreciate what the other is doing. Both sides need to communicate more and let each other know how each side benefits from the other.
6. Information not available.

School of Engineering, six candidates for five offices:

Armand Cilijian:

1. Should reinstate the bowling alley. Should not be fitness center because of plans to have Rec Center in two years.
2. Each increase should be viewed separately. Without this proposed increase, clubs won't get insurance.
3. Concerned that students get classes to graduate. Why take in more students if we can't take care of ourselves?
4. The way we help the minorities is exceptional. However, there shouldn't be reverse discrimination.
5. The student body does well, but individuals cause problems. Groups on campus should talk to the city, not just when there's a problem.
6. No, but has a beer now and then.

Peter Goodyn:

1. The bowling alley is just wasting money. Doesn't like fitness center idea either. Could be used for dances, etc.
2. Paying enough already. However, more money is necessary to keep up with inflation, the cost of insurance.

3. The school is designed to handle 15,000 people and should stay that way. But more money will be allocated to Cal Poly as enrollment increases.

4. Cal Poly is a white, middle-class, boring school. Would love to see more minorities. However, doesn't believe in lowering standards.

5. Relations depend on how much we're talking with the city, the mayor, and the school.

6. Whether has or hasn't does not reflect political abilities.

Craig Maier:

1. Fitness center sounds like a great idea. Or, great location for a pub.
2. Should be halted. Students should not be paying it, the government should.
3. We should expand the number of classes available. If we do that then hopefully the staff will increase, which will increase the number of classes.
4. Let them in if they're qualified. If someone is not qualified, regardless of who they are, they shouldn't be let in; they don't belong.
5. It's improving, especially over the past two years. A Greek row would help. Have a place out of the city and then their only neighbors would be other Greeks.
6. Has anybody at Mustang Daily ever smoked marijuana?

James Martin:

1. The space would be well served as a multi-purpose room. Could use it for things like concerts, or to house computer terminals.
2. Essential for campus clubs. However, the increases should benefit everyone.
3. Concerned for general education courses. Knows there are plenty of teachers, but should use cross-overs within a department.
4. Cal Poly shouldn't lower standards. Should keep accepting minorities but with no set quota.
5. The local papers should have more on Cal Poly, and Mustang Daily should include more city news to increase awareness.
6. No, can trip out on own imagination, doesn't need a drug.

Charley Matthews:

1. Fitness Center has most support. Should be whatever the students agree on.
2. Should only have an increase if it'll benefit students.
3. Some applicants to Cal Poly just choose a major in hopes of getting into an impacted one later. Concerned about unbalanced staff-to-student ratio.
4. Important to help them out, like financially, but they shouldn't be overemphasized. But if they're not as smart, shouldn't receive unfair boost in departments.
5. Seems to be a dividing line between Cal Poly and the community. Students are giving themselves a bad reputation, which needs to be fixed.
Because of drug testing, doesn't want to mess job chances up by smoking marijuana.

Joe Sanguinetti:

1. Should be using (the space) until the fitness center is put in. Pizza parlor idea is great.
2. Not all fees should go up but

OK for parking permits to increase. If there is an increase, should be explained.

3. Concerned that students won't be able to get general education courses to graduate. To fix this increase the number of classes to meet the need. Possibility of bringing in student teachers.

4. Doesn't believe in quota. Enrollment should only be based on G.P.A., extracurricular activities, etc. Everyone should receive the same treatment.

5. Cal Poly is doing a perfectly good job. Thinks they've developed a good relationship.

6. No comment.

School of Business, six candidates for three offices:

Linda Flintzer:

1. Supports the addition of a fitness center in the U.U. because it would eliminate the $2,400 monthly expenses of maintaining an inoperative alley.
2. Without an intermittent fee increase, clubs could not continue to fund their programs because of continual cost of living expenses, and inflation.
3. An enrollment increase would be acceptable only if facilities were greatly expanded, including parking, classrooms, and teaching staff.
4. Qualified minority applicants must be sought out, encouraged to apply to Cal Poly, and accepted when they meet the same qualifications.
5. Should work hard at becoming a respected component of the community.
6. Have you?

Dave Garrido:

1. Almost $300,000 in capital costs can be saved by reopening the bowling alley and awaiting the Rec Center's completion, projected in three years.
2. Shouldn't have a general fee increase until existing programs have been carefully examined for value and cost savings.
3. Enrollment increases can only hurt Cal Poly and the city of San Luis Obispo.
4. Measures should be geared toward recruiting the very best minority students and helping them adjust to academic and social life at Poly, rather than toward lower entrance requirements.
5. Regular meetings of A.S.I. representatives with the mayor and other city officials are essential.
6. No.

Todd Leavey:

1. Will support whatever the students decide in the current election.
2. If the school can manage money properly, there is no reason for an increase.
3. Doesn't want to see enrollment increased at Cal Poly. Strict entrance policies help give an air of exclusivity that can only help when job hunting.
4. Existing minority policies are fine.
5. Cal Poly's relationship with the city must be based on good communication and cooperation. Supports any progress toward bettering these two areas.
6. No, has never smoked pot ... Ginsberg did and look where it got him.

Brad Lindholm:

1. Students should be given an initiative so that they can make their choice and so that choice can be carried out immediately.
2. Is against fee increases and will go to any means to find new alternatives to raise capital to avoid such increases.
3. Getting classes would be a major concern if enrollment is increased.
4. If a student is qualified, the student should be accepted to Cal Poly regardless of age, sex, or ethnic background.
5. The city is hypocritical in their relationship with Cal Poly students. They're willing to reap the benefits of the students, however, their help is often hard to find when the students need it.
6. No comment.

Jeff MacLean:

1. The space should have a revenue-generating, student-oriented use, and the implementation process should be expedited so that the space does not remain dormant for an indefinite period of time.
2. If the increase is not passed, many students would be limited by the services and programs that they use and participate in.
3. Concerned about the decline of the quality of education due to less class space, and a larger student-to-instructor ratio.
4. A quota should be set on the percentage of incoming students able to participate in special minority admittance programs for impacted schools and majors.
5. More meetings between city and university officials to discuss the students' importance.
6. No.

Tomas Zazueta:

No information available on issues, but does feel fee increases should be avoided. Suggests more student input in policy decisions such as fees, parking and class availability. Also would look into the possibility of constructing a multi-level parking structure to alleviate parking problems.

DON'T BE FOOLED.

The UU Director wants us to spend $339,364, not including equipment, on a temporary fitness center with Rec Sports offices until the new Rec Center opens. He would like us to believe that reopening the bowling alley would require a fee increase, but a fitness center wouldn't. This doesn't make sense with the raid on UU reserves for construction, followed by increased operating expenses for the fitness center; in addition, the UU budget includes expensive programs, such as the Gallerie ($72,976), which could be cut. Operating the fitness center would take money from other Rec Sports programs, whereas the bowling alley would be a source of revenue.

Wheelmen place high in UCLA time trials

SANTA CLARITA — The Cal Poly Wheelmen returned from last weekend's UCLA meet with more than just sunburn and windburn. Four team members placed in the overall category for their respective events.

The meet consisted of a 10-mile time trial, a 7-mile, mass-start, hillclimb and a .6-mile flat loop criterium.

Cal Poly's Robert Enzerink placed first overall for the men's A's. Enzerink was the fastest in the time trial and finished second in the hillclimb.

Mike Bennett finished third overall for the A's by winning the hillclimb.

For the men's B's, Cal Poly's Derek Steiner was the overall winner. Steiner placed second in the hillclimb, seventh in the time trial and ninth in the criterium.

Steiner was also voted most outstanding rider of the week by his teammates.

And in the women's events, Elizabeth Vanderliet took second place overall. She came in second in both the time trial and hillclimb, and finished ninth in the criterium.

Cal Poly had top individual finishers also.

In the time trial for the A's, Angelo Guinasso finished fourth.

Cal Poly fared even better in the hillclimb. Rick Keenan and Paul Hewes took third and fifth place for the B's, respectively. Ben Holland finished fourth for the C's.

The team had three fifth-place finishes in the criterium: Guinasso for the A's, George Garibay for the B's and Cameron Fraser for the C's.

The Wheelmen will travel to King City this weekend for two road races sponsored by UC Santa Cruz.

The Wheelman had four top overall finishers in the UCLA meet.

therefore be subsidized by a fee increase, which needs to be approved by the students. As far as the senate and Cal Poly President Warren Baker are concerned, said Union Executive Committee Chair Bretten Osterfeld, the lanes were officially closed three years ago.

Last night, ASI President Stan Van Vleck warned senators that if the program were classified as "new," the issue must be clear in their minds "beyond a shadow of a doubt." He said any misunderstanding could be cause for future litigation.

HOLOCAUST

Dunin said he made the proclamation in memory of the victims of the Holocaust, and in the hope that people will always strive to overcome prejudice and inhumanity through education, vigilance and resistance.

Carsel said the people of San Luis Obispo must work to ensure that the Holocaust is not repeated and that the people who suffered and died did not do so in vain.

"We must do our part to make sure that the constructive energies of humankind shall now and in the future be dedicated to the eradication of prejudice, dedicated to the eradication of bigotry and dedicated to the eradication of inhumanity," Carsel said.

Dan Krieger, a Cal Poly history professor, said the lesson of history is to remember what happened during the Holocaust, so that in the future people can use the guidance of this tragedy when making decisions about following the orders of those in command.

"We can't forget," Krieger said. "We'll never learn if we forget."

A survivor of the Holocaust, Sam Berkowitz, said that in 1981 survivors met in Jerusalem and "pledged to never again let it happen to our people."

YOUR FIRST STEP TOWARD SUCCESS IS THE ONE YOU COULD TAKE THIS SUMMER.

At Army ROTC Camp Challenge you'll learn what it takes to succeed—in college and in life. You'll build self-confidence and develop your leadership potential. Plus you can also qualify to earn an Army Officer's commission when you graduate from college.

Army ROTC Camp Challenge. It may be just what you need to reach the top.

Find out more. Contact Larry Stayton at SLO-ROTC (756-7682).
