Company denies student's accusation of discrimination

By Karen Williams
Staff Writer

Guardian Industries, a glass manufacturer and fabricator, has denied a Cal Poly student's charge that its hiring practices are discriminatory.

William Volk, employee relations manager at the Kingsburg plant, said a misunderstanding occurred when a company interviewer gave a student false information.

Vickie Backman, an electrical engineering senior, wrote a letter of complaint charging Guardian Industries with discriminatory hiring practices. Backman sent copies of the letter to CSU Chancellor W. Ann Reynolds, Cal Poly President Warren J. Baker and Placement Center Director Richard Equinoa. The letter was published in the Nov. 1 Mustang Daily in the "Letters to the Editor" column.

In her letter, Backman stated Randy Parker, a Guardian Industries interviewer, told her that Guardian Industries did not employ any women engineers or women in management.

"The only credible reason for this complete lack of professional women in Guardian Industries is an unwritten policy to maintain the 'good-old-boy' network, and keep women out," stated Backman in her letter.

Volk said Parker did tell Backman that Guardian did not have any women engineers.

However, he said Parker was misinformed because there are women engineers at Guardian Industries, including Volk's wife, a design engineer at the company's Buchman plant.

Backman said she inquired about the number of women employed by Guardian Industries at the end of her interview. She said most companies volunteer information on the number of women they employ.

"They are very pleased to tell you they hire women," said Backman.

Volk said Parker was uninformed and is unfamiliar with the company's plants in the United States, since he has generally worked at plants overseas. Parker has worked at two different Guardian plants in the United States. Parker could not be reached for comment.

"We have many females in responsible positions," Volk said.

He said the Kingsburg plant has four engineers, all men, but did at one time employ two women engineers. One woman engineer transferred to another Guardian plant and the other left Guardian for another company, said Volk.

He said there are many women employed as personnel, production, and shift managers, as well as female engineers at Guardian Industries' 26 plants.

"The allegations are groundless," Volk said, "I would like to continue our relationship with the school."

"This is the first time we have had something like this happen."

Equinoa said he has talked to other students at Cal Poly and found no indication of discrimination by Guardian Industries.

Barbara Marsden, an electrical engineering major who also had an interview with Guardian Industries, said she was not discriminated against, but the interviewer was not as encouraging or receptive as other companies with whom she has interviewed.

Marsden praised Backman's high grades and on-the-job experience and said she was surprised that Backman was not considered for employment by Guardian Industries.

In response to Backman's letter, Equinoa has asked Volk to respond in writing and has also requested that Volk provide demographic information indicating the number of women employed by the company and in what capacity.

"I want to reconfirm their commitment to equal opportunity and affirmative action," said Equinoa. "I do not want to point fingers at this time... I am not condemning Guardian Industries, we do not have all the information yet."

He said it is appropriate to follow-up any complaints of discrimination because there are still gains to be made in the application of equal opportunity and unethical and illegal hiring practices still exist.

Companies who wish to recruit at Cal Poly are required to sign a statement which states they are equal opportunity employers.

Pickers rally outside of the Palm Theatre.

Moviegoers must cross picketline to view film

By Yumi Sera
Staff Writer

As moviegoers lined up to see the 8 p.m. showing of The Last Temptation of Christ Saturday, about 20 gospel-singing picketers protested the controversial movie now playing at the Palm Theatre.

"Our purpose here is not to stop people from going to see the movie. This is America and everybody is free to do as they wish, and we wouldn't have it any other way. But we just feel that this movie is fabricated on a lie," said San Luis Obispo resident Patrick Egan, who has not seen the movie but has read several excerpts.

"A lot of people may have not ever read the Bible, and they may go see this movie and believe that's Jesus Christ," said Egan. "Well, that's not Jesus Christ — that's a Hollywood fabrication. It's not the Jesus Christ in the Bible. Jesus is in your heart, he's not on the Hollywood screen."

Although the movie was released worldwide months ago, it was first shown in San Luis Obispo Friday night.

The film has caused an uproar because of its scene portraying Jesus in a dream sequence while being crucified. He dreams of a common life — one with marriage, sex and children.

Prof. 'looks backward' Krieger writes book about SLO history

By Suzy Wallace
Staff Writer

A Cal Poly professor will release his book about San Luis Obispo's history Dec. 9, which the County Board of Supervisors had declared as the city's Historical Heritage Day.

Looking Backward Into The Middle Kingdom is history professor Daniel Krieger's compilation of the area's past, beginning with the first exploration of San Luis Obispo County in the late 16th century.

"The book is an illustrated history with over 200 black and white and 100 color pictures of events and places throughout the county, and a lot have not been seen in the last 50 to 100 years," said Krieger.

Krieger worked extensively with Mark Hall, the director of the County Historical Museum, to discover and research the photos used in the book.

"I hope we're correct," said Krieger. "We tried our best to verify everything. I'm always worried about making a mistake and getting the criticism 'Krieger

Japan next step in expanded study program

By Suzy Wallace
Staff Writer

Cal Poly is planning to expand its overseas study programs in spring quarter by sending students to Iwaki, Japan.

Professor David Englund, who helped create the Spring Quarter in Japan program, said it has not received final approval yet.

Takao Takyu, the chief director of Iwaki College in Japan, will be here this week to speak with Cal Poly President Warren J. Baker about the program, Englund said.

"We're looking at approval by the end of fall quarter," he said.

Japanese students have been coming to Cal Poly from Iwaki in a similar program for the past 10 years, but this will mark the first time Cal Poly students will have the opportunity to live and study in Japan.

"It just never occurred to many people," Englund said. "The London Study program is quite recent and the idea is relatively new, but as we move more and more into the international age, I think these programs will become more popular."

The 10-week study would take place in Iwaki, a city of 250,000 on the Pacific coast, 120 miles north of Tokyo.

"It is a lot like San Luis Obispo because it is inland from the coast and it will be like spring here," he said. "There are virtually no Americans there, so it gives students a chance to experience an in-depth immersion in cultural Japan because it is off the beaten path and there are few tourists."

The program, sponsored by the psychology and human development department, the School of Professional Studies and Education and Cal Poly's office of International Programs, is open to all majors but is particularly geared toward human development majors.

A six-unit internship teaching conversational English in schools or other agencies is part of the program. The other six-units of the program are taught by Englund and cannot be used for general education credit.

"One of the good features of this is the ability to defray a significant amount of the cost by teaching English," Englund said.

A basic beginning Japanese language course is also necessary because of the location and the lack of interaction with Americans.

"There is almost a total language barrier," said Englund. "It is difficult because you can't read when everything is in characters and the customs and

Dukakis seems Poly's choice

Editor — Many people are smug in their feelings of holding the mainstream opinion. I challenge that notion. I recently took part in a survey which charted Cal Poly students' views on national security issues. The results were surprising. I will concede now that the sample was small, and has a fairly large margin for error, yet, I feel, not large enough to overcome the unmistakable trends. It was for the most part random, and the 170 students polled were all registered voters.

Ninety percent felt that the possibility of nuclear war is something to be concerned with. Further, 97 percent felt nuclear reduction was important. Apathy and the "It'll never happen" attitude are not mainstream.

Let's talk test bans: 68 percent supported a verifiable test ban treaty, and only 30 percent were against it. This flies right in the face of the "norm." Also, 68 percent were against SDI, based on the popularly accepted (by technical experts) assumption that it could only protect sites, not scattered populations of people. Fourteen percent favor it. Furthermore, 58 percent opposed the deployment of SDI in light of the fact that doing so could cause the Soviets to reject or withdraw proposals for nuclear reduction. Again, only 20 percent supported it.

In sum, 98 percent felt the nuclear arms issue was important in this election, and 73 percent said that they would vote for the man who shared their views. Guess what mainstreamers and bandwagon hoppers, that man is Michael Dukakis.

Help lower-level education first

Editor — This letter is in response to the "State's A. Senate says yes to 78" (Mustang Daily, Nov. 3). I find it preposterous that while the Statewide Academic Senate favors Prop. 78, they oppose Prop. 98 which would allocate more funds to lower-level public education in this state.

Their opposition is based on the fact that Prop. 98 may take away up to $800 million from other state programs including the California State University system. While I can understand their concern for the quality of higher education, they seem to disregard one of its major problems — that of the lower quality of students entering our system from California's public schools. Studies have shown that today's students are entering college with lower SAT scores in both verbal and math than students of a generation ago. This says nothing of high school graduates who enter the workforce functionally illiterate.

Prop. 98 will allow the excess revenues to first go to lower level education then whatever is left to be returned to the taxpayer. This excess revenue is vital for the betterment of instructional material, teachers' salaries (which will inspire quality educators to enter the profession) and the reduction of class sizes, which are worse in California than any other state in the union.

It is imperative to understand that reallocating funds to the lower levels of education will directly affect and improve the quality of higher education. A yes vote for Prop. 78 and Prop. 98 will help the population on the whole and not just the few of us who grace these ivory towers.

Let's get Hysen, Coy, Messrs out

Editor — In June 1986 the County Board of Supervisors voted monies to re-decorate General Hospital and move its tiny intensive care unit to a new area with more space. The ICU re-location meant the dialysis unit needed to be moved.

Today, the dialysis unit has not been moved. Its new $1 million home has not been finished. And, it was recently discovered that the old dialysis unit is not suitable for an ICU because of serious structural deficiencies. The entire purpose of moving the dialysis unit has been defeated. This is a $1 million error!

Who is responsible for this fiasco?

Nov. 8 crucial for women

By Ilona Ing

The outcome of tomorrow's presidential election will play a great part in shaping the everyday lives of American women for a generation to come. This is not political hyperbole but fact: the next president will probably name as many as three new Supreme Court justices, who can be expected to rule on constitutional law well into the next century. Just as great and long-lasting will be the impact of the next president's economic leadership.

Most obvious in their impact on American women are issues termed "women's issues." These include reproductive rights, child care, family law, and equal opportunity in the workplace. Let's look at each of them:

Reproductive rights: Michael Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen have stood firmly for a woman's right to make the most personal choice regarding her own body, abortion. At one time, George Bush also claimed to be pro-choice, but since that time he has sold himself to the far right for a few votes. As president, Bush can be expected to name Supreme Court justices in the vein of Jerry Falwell. Dan Quayle is even more extreme: he said bluntly that a teenaged girl, raped by her own father, should be required by law to carry the pregnancy to term.

Child care: In an economy where wives and husbands must both work, affordable child care is a necessity, not a luxury. Dukakis and Bentsen know this, and have proposed a support program for child care that can help working families without busting the federal budget. Bush and Quayle never addressed the issue at all until forced to — and then proposed a token program that would provide little real help, while adding $2 billion to the federal budget deficit.

Family law: Until a few years ago, married women were virtually denied a separate existence by law. The religious right would love to return women to this state of bondage — and a Bush-packed Supreme Court might allow them to. Mike Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen will appoint judges who will stand up for the economic rights of women and children.

Equal opportunity: Women still make about 65 cents on the dollar to what men make. Until recently, many job opportunities were denied to women altogether. These doors have been opened to women by the Democrats, not by the Republican right wing. No equal-opportunity policy can cause a woman to succeed in a position if she is not competent to fill — but the support of the law is often needed before a woman can prove her competency. The Dukakis-Bentsen team will uphold these laws; a Bush-Quayle administration will undermine them.

On all of these "women's issues" the differences between the two tickets are clear and sharp. The differences are just as sharp on issues that are not categorized as "women's" issues — but which have just as much impact on American women.

The Reagan-Bush administration claims that it has lowered taxes. It has — for the wealthiest 10 or 20 percent of Americans. Middle-income families are paying a higher percentage of their incomes in taxes than they did in 1980. Moreover, the Reagan-Bush deficit — about $1.3 trillion, or around $5,200 for every American — is an invisible tax that will be passed on to our generation and our children.

According to Reagan-Bush administration figures, unemployment has gone down. This "success" was created partly by blatant cooking of the figures, and partly by the great proliferation of part-time, low-wage, no-benefit jobs in recent years.

The truth is that young families are forced to take two jobs and work longer hours just to stay even. Home ownership — once taken for granted by middle-income Americans — has become a privilege of the semi-rich.

These negative changes in the American economy are not the result of inevitable economic forces. They are the result of deliberate Reagan-Bush policies — policies that a Dukakis-Bentsen administration will work hard to change. Dukakis and Bentsen would make well-heeled tax cheats pay up, instead of passing the bill to working families that can't evade their taxes. A Dukakis-Bentsen administration will end the $20 billion a year in subsidies to large farm corporations, and give more support to hard-hit family farms. A Democratic administration would spend its defense dollars on real defense readiness, not on Pentagon contractors and high-priced "consultants."

Finally, Dukakis will set an example of integrity and hard work. For eight years we have had a president who spent much of his time on vacation, while his underlings set an unequalled record for conflicts of interest and outright corruption. We deserve more than that. If we pull together, and serve the common interest instead of selfish special interests, the best America is indeed yet to come.

This is ineptitude pure and simple. It would not be tolerated in private industry.

It is time to clean house. How many tax dollars have been squandered elsewhere?

It's time for a new Hospital Advisory Committee — out with Messrs. Coy, and Hysen, who have been fleeced again, because they did not do their homework.

We need new county leadership. Please voters, vote. Your choices really do determine how taxes are spent.

Prop. 104 not one to vote for

Editor — In response to David Lawler's three-part series on the insurance initiatives (Oct. 27, 29, 31): You state that Prop. 100 won't cap rates and will also raise rates in two-thirds of the state by eliminating the present territorial classification system. This argument is the same faulty one the insurance industry has been using in its $43 million campaign to deceive the public.

Open your eyes. Prop. 100 says if insurance companies can prove territorial rates have a substantial relationship to risk of loss, they can continue using them. Heaven forbid that we give priority to one's driving record in determining insurance rates, as Prop. 100 intends to do. You also state that Prop. 100 does nothing for the consumer. It is ironic that it is sponsored by a consumer organization, Insurance Consumer Action Network (ICAN).

You also state that Prop. 103 will severely cripple the insurance industry. Is this the same insurance industry that is exempt from anti-trust laws, and according to a California Legislature study (Los Angeles Times Oct. 5), received $200 million in excess industry profits in 1985? The State Insurance Commissioner Roxani Gillespi stated that the insurance industry posted a return of 11.7 percent in 1987, not a loss.

You also state that the insurance industry in California lost more than $75 million on auto insurance in 1986. An article in the Los Angeles Times (Oct. 30) points out this figure can be very misleading. When insurance companies speak of losses they are generally speaking of losses before adding gains from investing funds that must be held in reserve to pay claims.

No-Fault has been proven to be a disaster in many states. An example is New Jersey where drivers pay the highest average auto insurance premiums in the nation. You state the California No-Fault proposition is modeled after the successful systems in New York and Florida. Yet, according to an article in the Los Angeles Times (Oct. 23) there is a "striking difference between Prop. 104 and the successful systems in New York and Florida in the ballot measure's almost complete lack of a call for state regulation of the insurance industry." It should also be noted that the main sponsor of Prop. 104 (No-Fault) is the insurance industry.

You also forgot to mention the cost of implementing Prop. 104, though mentioning others. Its initial implementation cost for

Vote Dukakis for president

Editor — My primary concern in the upcoming election, other than the government taking over the religious instruction of my child, is the environment. I believe that most Central Coast residents share my concerns. Many of us moved here from more populous, polluted areas of the state, finding them unsuitable places to raise our families. California, with the fastest growth rate in the nation, is becoming a complicated and perplexing place to live. Our kids are committing suicide because not only are they having trouble keeping pace with an often soul-less and rapidly advancing technological society, but the cloud of nuclear extinction hangs over their heads like a Grim Reaper, casting doubt as to the validity of even the future. Aside from the possibility of nuclear destruction in the next several decades, it is entirely possible man will disappear beneath a mountain of his own garbage.

Our sea lions are dying mysteriously. The black abalone population is being decimated in the Santa Barbara area. Fish are in decline near Diablo. These problems are surely linked to pollution. Does any ocean person, any surfer, sailor, diver or fisherman really believe that George Bush is going to protect our coastline, after his abysmal record on the environment?

I question the integrity of a man who has just launched one of the most unprincipled and acrimonious campaigns in recent political history: racist, slanderous, with half-truths like the furlough program (initiated by a Republican governor), and downright lies, like his statement on the defense positions of Michael Dukakis. Bush has set a trend that says negative campaigning works. Politics in the future, instead of addressing issues like assimilating our minorities and daycare and the hopelessness of ghetto life, will be more dirty laundry. If Bush is ahead in the polls, it's because of Dukakis' unwillingness to stoop to his level, attributing to the voter more intelligence and discernment than they seemingly deserve.

I am worried about the loss of liberty under a Republican administration, with three Supreme Court judges coming up for retirement. As it is, the court seems to want to roll back the clock on the civil rights issue, and you can be certain that abortion will be a dead duck. I am not pro-abortion, I think an unborn fetus does have rights, but I'm not for coat-hanger abortions, more babies in trash cans, or our sons and daughters dealing with the hardened criminal elements in places like Tijuana. I think that anyone considering abortion should have a serious talk to a right-to-lifer first, but the decision should be her own. Everything the Republicans do seems to have the opposite effect, for example, the war on drugs. The price of a relatively innocuous substance like marijuana having skyrocketed while the price of lethal drugs like cocaine and heroin is now at bargain basement prices. There is no reason to think that criminalizing abortion won't have the same effect.

Quayle's views are deplorable

Editor — In response to Donald Wallace's letter (Nov. 2), I would like to say that Dan Quayle's college record is not why I don't want him to be president. It's also not his age or his limited experience. It is simply because of his political views.

Republicans who have been trying to show that Mike Dukakis is out of the political mainstream should take another look at Dan Quayle.

He's almost another Jesse Helms! In voting against the Civil Rights Restoration Act (a bill that Bush was also against), Quayle said, "You know I have very little interest ... My own personal concerns are very minimal in that area."

There it is! Quayle himself has said that he has little interest in civil rights. This type of attitude is the reason Dan Quayle should not be heir to the presidency.

Concert to benefit youth shelter

By Anthony M. Romero

Staff Writer

A dance concert Thursday featuring two local bands will benefit San Luis Obispo Transitions Inc. youth programs, which will spend the proceeds on little extras most people consider basic — like birthday presents.

"We're going to use the money for punching bags, birthday presents and weights for the boys. Basically for things beyond basic needs," said Francie Johnson, program manager of the troubled-youth shelter.

Transitions was started in 1980 as a human-service provider. Its youth shelters board four types of youth. The first is a house for kids 7 to 17 years old who have psychiatric history of emotional disturbance. The troubled-youth house is for those who are potential runaways who might normally be on the street.

"Then we have two separate shelters for abused, neglected, or abandoned children," executive director Ron McMaster said. "These children are taken from their guardians or parents by law-enforcement agencies when there is evidence of sexual abuse, physical abuse, abandonment and neglect."

Cal Poly graduates and seniors represent 40 percent of the Transitions staff. Sigma Kappa sorority also lends Transitions a hand.

"Recently, we've become involved with the various dorm halls. Yosemite is going to sponsor our agency as a whole," McMaster said. "(We want to match) Poly students with kids in our programs, where they can be with them for social events, be a buddy and show them the good things in life. Many of them have had so much misery that anything good they can get is a good thing."

Johnson said small things like a pair of tennis shoes or maybe a donation of sweats are good ways to contribute to Transitions. Students often throw a lot of things away at the end of the school year, and an old radio or Walkman is like gold to a Transitions child, she said.

"Most people think that if the kids are here, they're bad," Johnson said. "The reason they come to us is because they are having a family conflict and they run from home. After being in contact with law enforcement officers they come here as a cooling-off period. Sometimes they don't have anywhere else to go."

Interaction between staff and the youth is quite touchy because of the nature of the kids, Johnson said. The staff members try to instill trust in the youths while maintaining their professional distance.

"One thing we try to impress upon them is responsibility for their own actions and let them know the support systems in the county," Johnson said. "There are some situations where they are not part of the all-American family. We try to get them to realize that and deal with it."

The staff realizes that it's difficult to get through to the children right away, so staff members find satisfaction in small ways, Johnson said. Some of the children are poets and short-story writers, Johnson said. Sometimes something as minute as teaching them calligraphy makes a lot of difference in how they feel they are expressing themselves, he said. Providing an outlet for each child's individual way of expressing himself is very important to the staffers.

"We try to give them a more positive attitude on the options they have, let them know they can come back here," staff worker Marie Murphy said, "and impress upon them to solve their problems in a positive manner instead of running away."

The dance concert is at Grange Hall, 2880 Broad Thursday from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. The bands featured will be the All Knights and Bingo Nite. The cost is $3.50 in advance and $5 at the door. Tickets will be on sale by Sigma Kappa sorority during activity hour in the UU, and at Pacific Pride clothing store.

Seniors lead women to 8th West Region title

By Terry Lightfoot
Sports Editor

Senior leadership and ability led the way to the women's cross country team's eighth West Regional Championship and a record overall team performance.

The Lady Mustangs scored a record low 19 points in capturing the championship, displaying their national dominance. The Mustangs finished ahead of UC Davis, Cal State L.A., Northridge and Hayward State.

Coach Lance Harter, who said he was as stunned as the crowd by the Mustangs performance, said "No one has ever scored that low before. The results continue to reiterate our dominance of the region."

Throughout the Mustangs' season, the seniors on the team Noreen Debettencourt, Pauline Stehly, and Sherry Minkler, have traded the leading role. On Saturday all three seniors captured the top spots for the Mustangs. Of the top six finishes, only second place went to another team — Sandra Rodriguez of Cal State L.A.

Debettencourt won top honors with a 17:42 course time. Third through sixth places all went to the Mustangs; Stehly 18:01, Minkler 18:04, Melanie Hiatt 18:05, and Patti Almendariz 18:07. Finishing out the scoring for Cal Poly was Jill Hoffman (21) with a time of 18:41 and Syndey Thatcher (24) with a time of 18:53.

With all three seniors doing so well, Harter said, "It looks like we're firing on all cylinders." Harter said that the team schedules its training so they are at top physiological form for the important national and regional meets. "The problem is that there is no way to know if the team will be ready psychologically. But it looks like the psychological level is coming around," he said.

Harter said that the team's performance will be a "springboard" for the nationals.

Booters finish season above .500

By Anthony M. Romero
Staff Writer

The Mustang soccer team accomplished more than a couple goals Saturday in its season-ending 2-0 victory over Cal Poly Pomona.

Mustang coach Wolfgang Gartner said the victory put the soccer team over .500 for the 11th straight year, which was a team objective. However, Dan Campbell fell one goal short of breaking Curtis Apsey's record of 52 career goals, which would have been icing on the cake.

"Dan (Campbell) had one opportunity last night but the goalkeeper made a great save," Gartner said.

The Mustangs' controlled Pomona's offense and exploited its defense with some scoring of its own. Grant Landby got the team rolling with a cross kick from the right end of the field into scoring territory. Tim Hire was also in scoring territory and kicked Landby's pass in for a 1-0 lead.

Hire decided to share scoring honors for the night in the second half as he passed the ball from the left side. Landby played like it was better to give than receive by passing his second assist to Bill Collins, who kicked it in from eight yards.

Coach Gartner said Hire, the first local to start for Gartner, played good soccer along with senior Brian Agguire.

Although Campbell didn't score on the night and break the career record, he said he was happy with the way the team played.

"Tim Hire and Bill Collins played good soccer," Campbell said. "As far as the record is concerned, I'm glad I tied it with Curtis. We will be playing together in two weeks against Pepperdine."

"I'm happy Dan tied the record," Gartner said. "He's had a lot of physical abuse because he's so fast, the only way to slow him down is to bump him. He averaged about 14 goals a year, (which) is like a football player scoring 14 touchdowns in a year."

Campbell said he will miss soccer but is glad it is over so he can concentrate on school and relax a little more. Campbell will graduate in June with a degree in mechanical engineering.

"The thing I want to be remembered for is dedication," Campbell said. "I was dedicated to the sport and I hope people who play after me are dedicated."

Campbell said he liked playing for a non-scholarship program because none of the players had the superstar mentality. Campbell said if he could change one aspect of Mustang soccer it would be to have better transportation and sleeping conditions on road trips, because the team often had to sleep on the floor.

Punter offers 2, Poly gets 7

The Cal Poly football team kept its slim playoff hopes alive by defeating conference foe Southern Utah 23-10 Saturday night in a game decided in the third quarter.

The game was deadlocked at 10-10 in the third quarter when the Thunderbird center snapped the ball over punter Troy Veach's head. Veach used trick thinking in kicking the ball out of the end zone for a safety.

But the referees ruled intentional kicking and instead of a two-point safety the Mustangs got the ball on the Thunderbird one-yard line. Todd Henderson ran it in for the touchdown and put the Mustangs ahead 17-10, and they never looked back.

The Mustangs put one more score on the board when running back Rod Riley scooted 46 yards to paydirt. With a failed extra-point attempt the Mustangs stretched their lead to 23-10 for the final score.

Head coach Lyle Setencich was complacent about the win. Setencich said winning is normal.

"Our offensive line got their (Utah's) D-line tired in the fourth quarter and we were in better shape," Setencich said. "When they got tired, we took it to them."

"Our line was real physical and we knew they would get tired," Henderson said. "The offensive line blew out big holes for us and we ran the ball real well."

Henderson ran for 76 yards, equalling conference leader Kelvin Minefee from Southern Utah, but the leading rusher of the game was Rod Riley with 82 yards. Cornell Williams made a big second half contribution with 54 yards.

The Mustangs showed their dominance in the second half by running up over 130 yards rushing and passing for 80 more, and the defense did their job as well.

Chris Dunn led the defensive pack with 10 unassisted tackles and 12 total, while John Fassett had eight. Shawn Ramirez and Pat McGuirk each had one interception.

"We knew they had a good running back, but we just played our game," said linebacker Rene Oliver. "We just closed on their running game well."

The second quarter provided all the excitement of the game.

SU started things off with a 24-yard punt return to the Poly 36. Although they only got the ball to the Poly 31, it was enough for kicker Herkey Marxen, who booted a 47-yard field goal.

Quarterback Keith Jarrett came in for Tom Sullivan, and started the Mustangs' attack. Passing for 47 yards in a 64-yard touchdown drive, Sullivan hit receiver Claude Joseph from 8 yards out to put the Mustangs ahead with 5:42 left in the second quarter.

The Thunderbirds came right back on an 83-yard drive, which took three plays and ended with receiver Dave Becerra in the end zone on a 32-yard connection from quarterback Rick Carver, for the Thunderbirds last lead of the game.

Jarrett went to work again and this time directed a 71-yard drive that was characterized by passes to Terry Cole, Rick Lineweaver and Joseph. The drive ended when the Thunderbirds forced three incomplete passes by Jarrett and the Mustangs settled for a game tying 27-yard field goal by Dan Eastman.

The Mustangs' win puts them at 5-3-1 and leaves the Thunderbirds at 4-6.

Politicians rally for state votes

Dukakis camp energized by last minute gains in polls

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Democratic campaign workers energized by polls showing Michael Dukakis gaining on George Bush rallied Saturday while Republicans a few blocks away hung Bush campaign signs over gang graffiti.

Republican Sen. Pete Wilson, well ahead of his Democratic rival, Lt. Gov. Leo McCarthy, going into Tuesday's election, still pounded on doors in Westminster as McCarthy urged campaign workers in the San Francisco area to work to get out the vote for his bid to take Wilson's seat.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., told 300 campaign workers who packed a south central Los Angeles church auditorium that the presidential and Senate races hinge on whether Democrats can bring people to the polls.

"You and others in the state of California can put them over the top and win a great victory," Cranston told the cheering crowd in an event also attended by entertainer Rita Moreno and Olympic track athlete Willie Banks.

A CBS poll released Friday showed Bush leading Dukakis by seven points among probable voters, down from the 12-point lead in a survey taken earlier in the week.

Other polls show the California margin much smaller.

"Let it not be said after this election that it was lost in your precinct, that it was lost in south central Los Angeles," said Cranston.

Dukakis' running mate, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, brought a similar message to 250 precinct workers and other supporters in East Los Angeles, telling them that the Republicans are "dropping like a rock in the polls."

"My friends, this is the big one — 47 electoral votes," he said. "We win it in California, we win it across this nation."

A group of Republican women, meanwhile, prepared for Bush's the Bush campaign in California.

In Orange County, Wilson walked a Westminster precinct with campaign workers and knocked on doors despite polls showing him well ahead in the race.

A Field Poll showed the Republican leading McCarthy 50 percent to 36 percent.

"We intend to go full-court press right up until 8 o'clock Tuesday. We feel good about where we are."

"But we're taking nothing for granted," said campaign manager Otto Bos.

McCarthy, meanwhile, centered his efforts in Northern California, scheduling get-out-the-vote rallies in San Jose, Oakland, San Francisco, Richmond and Sacramento, said spokesman Steve Hopcraft.

In the initiative battles, a poll showed that the more people know about the AIDS measure, Proposition 102, the less they like it.

The measure would require health care professionals to report the names of those infected with the AIDS virus.

Opponents, which include virtually every health organization, say the cost of the program could reach more than $1 billion.

Voters support the measure 51 percent to 38 percent, but when told the reporting could cost as much as hundreds of millions of dollars, voters are against the measure 52 percent to 38 percent, according to the California Poll.

Police nab man suspected of having gun at Bush rally

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An unidentified spectator was arrested at a George Bush campaign rally Sunday after witnesses said he dropped a gun and fled, police said.

"We have a gun in custody, we have an individual in custody," said Lt. Thomas Lorenzen. "Some witnesses saw him with the gun. He dropped the gun and fled. We arrested him a half block away."

Sheila Tate, a spokeswoman for the Republican presidential candidate, said the gun was a starter pistol, which fires blanks and is used at sporting events. She said the suspect was standing within 50 yards of the vice president at the rally.

Sgt. Tim Thompson said the arrested man was in his 40s, had not been charged with anything, and was being questioned by investigators.

Business Week reporter Tim Smart, who saw the man being led away in handcuffs, interviewed a witness, Henry Rodriguez, who said that as Bush spoke to the outdoor crowd of several thousand people, a man in the crowd reached into his waistband.

Rodriguez was quoted as saying, "I was standing next to the individual. He had a card in front of him. He reached inside his waistband, the gun dropped to the ground and I stepped on the gun."

Bentsen claims truth is catching up to Bush

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Democrat Lloyd Bentsen, gloating that Republicans are "dropping like a rock in the polls," rallied volunteers Saturday in delegate-rich California and told radio listeners the election shouldn't be decided by "mud-slingers and the truth-twisters."

"The Republicans are panicking because the truth is catching up with them," said the Democratic vice presidential nominee, blasting what he contends are false advertisements by George Bush's campaign.

The Republican philosophy was, "If it sounds good, we're going to say it, and never mind the facts," he said.

Bentsen wrapped up a one-day swing through California with a speech later Saturday in San Francisco to a union audience emphasizing the Democrats' class-conscious theme that they were "on your side." Speaking earlier in the day at a rally of about 250 Democratic precinct workers and other supporters in East Los Angeles, said it was now up to them to get out the word and win California and the election for him and Michael Dukakis.

Bentsen was joined at the rally by Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., and Rep. Esteban Torres, D-

Calif., and was introduced by actress Rita Moreno.

"I'll tell you, the Republicans are dropping like a rock in the polls," Bentsen said, repeating his assertion that Michael Dukakis would — like Harry Truman — confound the experts and win.

A CBS poll released Friday showed Bush leading Democrat Michael Dukakis by seven points among probable voters, down from the 12-point lead in a survey taken earlier in the week.

"I see some of those Republicans popping their champagne corks," he said. "On Nov. 9, they're going to have one of the worst hangovers they've ever had."

Later in the day, in a San Francisco union hall near Fisherman's Wharf, some 700 Democratic campaign workers staged a boisterous rally for Bentsen.

"We're on the side of working men and women of America," Bentsen declared, citing the Democratic plans for new health care, education and housing programs.

Attacking Republican television ads, he said, "We're not going to put up with it, and the American people aren't going to put up with it," he said.

Some doctors vow to ignore AIDS proposition if passed

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Some 500 health care professionals, including 50 doctors at one hospital, have vowed not to report the names of people infected with the AIDS virus if an initiative requiring that passes, a spokesman for the group said Saturday.

At the same time, employees at the largest anonymous testing center in San Francisco said they would refuse to reveal names of those who test positive for the Human Immunodeficiency Virus if Proposition 102 on Tuesday.

The announcement came as

Rabbi Yoel Kahn

support for Proposition 102, the initiative that would ban anonymous testing for the AIDS virus, began to wane as opposition from medical, religious, scientific and political groups intensified.

"The bottom line is when police come to our door and ask for the names, we'll have to say we will not be accomplices to something designed for discrimination," said Rabbi Yoel Kahn of Congregation Sha'ar Zahav, which operates an outreach to the gay and lesbian community in San Francisco.

"The irresponsible use of this information can result in people losing jobs, their health insurance and their homes," added Kahn, who fears that as a clergyman he may be required to report those carrying the virus. "Put in that position, we just

'I do not think responsible people should ask people to break the law.'

cannot cooperate because of the people who we care about."

Forget-Me-Nots, the group circulating pledge cards asking health care professionals not to abide by requirements of Proposition 102, also advises doctors they face fines of $250 for each patient they fail to report, said Kahn, a group spokesman.

Doctors and others who violate the measure also could face misdemeanor criminal charges.

Despite that, Dr. Floyd Huen, medical director of Highland Hospital in Oakland, said 50 physicians at the facility had signed a pledge not to report the names of patients infected with the Human Immunodeficiency Virus if Proposition 102 passes.

"I signed it. I will not turn over anyone in my practice," Huen said. "This is bad public health policy because it will keep people away from being tested and treatment because of fear that they will be reported."

Huen said many staff members are considering shredding patient records if the initiative passes.

Dr. Laurens White, president of the California Medical Association, told the San Francisco Examiner he will "burn my medical records" if the measure passes.

Proposition 102 would require health officials and others to report the names of people "reasonably believed" to be infected with HIV to local and ultimately state officials. Insurance companies could also test for the virus.

The measure also would require those infected with the virus to report the names of their spouse or sexual partners.

In a statewide California Poll released Friday, about 51 percent favored the measure with approximately 38 percent opposed and 11 percent undecided.

Supporters of the measure reacted angrily to the pledge program.

"I do not think responsible people should ask people to break the law," said Paul Mero, an aide to Rep. William Dannemeyer of Fullerton, who sponsored the initiative along with anti-tax crusader Paul Gann, who was infected with HIV six years ago through a blood transfusion.

Gov. George Deukmejian provoked an outcry from medical experts last week when he announced he would vote for the proposition.

Three members of an advisory state AIDS committee resigned their positions in protest.

The governor's endorsement prompted U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop to denounce the measure, saying it would set back AIDS research a minimum of five years.

Fear of the measure's passage has sent applicants at anonymous AIDS virus testing centers soaring in the last few weeks.

The San Francisco Public Health Department reported Friday it has seen a 25 percent increase in tests during the last several weeks.

Some in the religious community have taken an increasingly active role against the measure in the final week of the campaign.

Episcopal Bishop C. Shannon Mallory of Monterey, spokesman for the ecumenical Central Coast Christian Leadership Conference, denounced the measure on Friday as "vicious, misguided" legislation.

Statewide, there have been 15,844 cases of AIDS since 1981 with 9,263 deaths.

Local health educator opposes Prop. 102

By Laura Fleischer
Staff Writer

A health educator for the Cal Poly Health Center said she thinks people should vote no on Proposition 102, a ballot initiative regarding the reporting of exposure to the AIDS virus.

Carolyn Hurwitz explained that the proposition would require those who test positive for the AIDS virus be reported to public health officials.

Cal Poly's current policy regarding on-campus AIDS screening, she said, is that the test result is not reported; however, it is documented and becomes part of the student's medical record.

About 20 Cal Poly students who have been tested through the Health Center have had positive results for the AIDS virus, she said.

"We (those opposing Proposition 102) don't want it to be public information," she said. "People just won't get tested then."

Health officials may inform sexual partners of a person with a venereal disease about their potential exposure to the disease without disclosing the person's name. However, Hurwitz said that AIDS is different than other communicable diseases, and should be treated accordingly because it is not transmitted through casual contact.

She added that the number of people with AIDS doubles every 13 months, and there have been 55,000 new cases in the last two years.

The key to controlling the disease, she said, is education beginning as early as elementary-school level.

At that level, she said, children should be taught about self-esteem in order to build their inner strength to resist temptations that might lead to drug and alcohol abuse or AIDS.

doesn't know what he's talking about."

The money Krieger's book earns, as well as the money he gets for writing a historical column for the Telegram-Tribune, will go to the County Historical Museum.

"Windsor Press is the largest publisher of state and regional history," he said "and they create big, colorful books at a fairly reasonable price for what you get. At $24.95 the book will be a bargain for most people."

The largest obstacle in writing the book, Krieger said, was trying to correct the errors from past histories that have perpetuated throughout the years due to sloppy research and new histories based on errors of past histories.

"When I outlined originally, I was tempted to make it entirely modern with only a few pages of history before the 1900s and spend 80 percent since 1900, especially on 1939 when a lot happened in the county. But there was so much confusion I ended up spending two pages on World War I, two pages on World War II and two pages on the Depression."

The first history of San Luis Obispo was written by Myron Angel in 1883 and Krieger spent much of his time "trying to straighten out Angel's writing," which lacked verification and caused confusion. The last history, written in 1939 by Annie Morrison, relied on Angel's research and furthered misconceptions about San Luis Obispo's history.

"Looking Backward Into The Middle Kingdom begins with the time when the Chumash (Indians) were settlers and the first exploration of the area in 1587," said Krieger.

Windsor Press sought Krieger out with an offer to write the book because of his column and abilities, but there were problems.

"I consider myself a person who writes easily," said Krieger, "but in a book-length manuscript you write more than the average reader needs and it's hard to keep the average reader in mind. I don't know how much I got bogged down looking for photos. In my column it usually takes one hour to write and 10 hours to find and verify a picture. There were no footnotes allowed either, and I feel badly about that as a scholar. But the first well-defined bibliography of the county is included."

Krieger said the book was a good disciplining experience and now, "I'm an expert on the Central Coast. I had great preparation and created a 400,000-word narrative that ended up a 14,000-word book."

For his next book, Krieger wants to begin work on a modern history of San Luis Obispo from the 1900s forward.

"Prior to the film's worldwide release, we got a lot of petitions asking us not to show the movie," said Jim Dee, co-owner of the Palm Theater. "After the release, however, we got requests to show it. We even got some mail from local clergy that says the film was unjustly accused."

Dee said he received requests from people who had already seen the movie and wanted to see it again. Some of them found it spiritually uplifting, he said.

"One person even said it made the life of Christ more acceptable," he said.

Dee said he feels the movie showings are generally a good experience for everyone.

"The protestors are peaceful and very nice. It's positive communication," he said. "No one can deny anything that promotes discussion of religious issues."

"There's the issue of the right of people to express themselves or see things that are published or printed. There's also a First Amendment right ... to protest what you feel is morally wrong," said Tim Tyler of Templeton. "I hope to draw a contrast that there is biblical truth and there's distortion — just want people to know that there is major distortion."

"The movie is based on the novel," said Dee. "Why go after the film and not the novel it's based on?"

"I think movies are a very strong medium, and when you see that big screen — that 'large as life' — those things tend to stick in your mind," said Ron Johnson of Arroyo Grande. "... it sticks in your mind — sometimes for years — and if it's an error of the truth then ... that's not good."

The movie "is taking someone — a man that has been acclaimed by many, many people to be the greatest moral teacher in the world — and making him a sinner," said Johnson. "He's (Jesus) confused, and he's not a leader (in the movie). The Bible clearly depicts him as someone that's really got it together."

"The Bible is one man's view of what happened and he may have left a whole bunch out that we don't know about. This is just someone's interpretation," said Jennifer Behrens of Morro Bay as she waited in line for the 8 p.m. showing.

Sam Neal, also waiting in line, said he came to the movie, because friends of his were going and he heard people were picketing.

"I think it must be worth seeing if people are picketing it," said Neal.

"It's a shame that these people

(the protestors) haven't seen it," said Jennifer Knapp, theater ticket-taker. "They have their right to protest. In fact, it brings a lot of business — that's awful to say but it does."

"I think it (the protest) was cooked up by the publicity director for this movie — I mean look how many people it's brought out," said Paul Andreano.

"Look at this line," said Cora Laurie, a senior at Morro Bay High School. "I haven't been in a line like this since Star Wars."

"I don't care what they've said out here in the lines," said protestor Judy Allen of Atascadero. "... We're not drawing any publicity. We're only doing what we feel is right."

"We're turning away some people, and we're just going out and doing what God has called us to do ... to help spread the word of God," said 12-year-old Jason Stab. "Throughout my life, I would hope to serve God as he wants me to serve him."

Stab has not seen the movie and will not go see it, he said.

"It shows a falsehood of my savior," said Gilbert Champion of Los Osos. "I've read several scripts that have been issued. I would not have any desire to see the film."

Pam Stein, a San Luis Obispo resident who has seen the film, said the movie was well done both visually and artistically and the ending showed the work of someone with a creative imagination.

"I wonder why people object so much because I think it identified with being the son of God," said Stein. "He had same temptations that all other humans have. He had the courage to overcome that."

"It's very hard for me to analyze it because I haven't read the Bible," said Neal, who had just came out of the theater.

"I enjoyed the film and what it had to say. I think they (the protestors) should see it before they protest it," he said.

One moviegoer walked out of the theater and said "it was very disturbing. I don't think I can talk right now."

Behrens walked out of the movie with tears in her eyes.

"It makes you feel so much," said Behrens describing the ending. "It made me feel something ... gave me so much meaning."

"These picketers cannot be taken seriously until they've seen the movie," she said.

"They're picketing on a false pretense," said Andreano. "Obviously, they've read it the way they want to believe it."

"What these people here are saying is that they're afraid that somewhere in their subconscious, they've devoted their lives to Christianity ... and then if they go in there and see this, they go 'wait, it's wrong. I've wasted all this time ... devoting my life to the most holy man on earth and it turns out he's not holy at all,'" said Jason Hayes of Morro Bay.

Ways and Means says Prop. 98 could cost $135 million for CSU

By J.W. McPhail
Staff Writer

Proposition 98, if passed, would guarantee long-term, stable funding for all state schools — kindergarten through junior college — except California State Universities.

Under Prop. 98, the CSU budget may be cut if the initiative is passed.

Steve McCarthy, spokesman for the CSU chancellor's office in Long Beach, said there are serious indications that the initiative may affect the CSU budget. But, he said, the Board of Regents has not officially opposed 98.

The Academic Senate of the CSU strongly opposes the proposition and has urged faculty to organize against it. The California Assembly Ways and Means Committee estimated that Prop. 98 could cost the CSU $135 million.

This is because the initiative tries to improve K-14 education by setting a minimum funding level. It states that the money needed to reach this level will be taken from other parts of the budget (like the CSU system) unless there is an excess in state taxes, in which case that money would be used.

Tim Kersten, Cal Poly economics professor and a member of the Academic Senate, told the Mustang Daily that the proposition would affect Cal Poly.

behavior patterns are very different."

The program can accommodate 20 students. Candidates who can acclimate quickly and resist culture shock are favored.

"I'm looking forward to picking a group of students who will be congenial and as diverse as possible," Englund said. "They will have to be flexible overseas to help each other through the ups and downs and have a genuine interest in Japan. I want a group that represents the diversity of America."

Englund said Iwaki was chosen because "it is a friendly place with bright, lively students."

"The cost of living is lower and the Japanese seem genuinely interested in learning about America," he said.

There will be an informational meeting about the program Wednesday at 6 p.m. in Fisher Science room 286. Englund and Takyu will show slides of the area and answer any questions. Applications are available through the psychology and human development department.

"It's going to take money away from every other program in the state," he said. "We're already in a tight squeeze."

ASI President Tom Lebens said that Cal Poly's Student Senate hadn't taken a stand on the issue because not enough was known about it. Lebens said he personally had studied the proposition and probably would vote no on it.

The California State Student Association, which represents the CSU system, has come out in favor of 98. Cal Poly pulled out of the CSSA last year.

"Our board looked at it and saw it as beneficial to K-14 (kindergarten through 14th grade) education," said Warren Fletcher, CSSA staff member.

He said it's not a situation where the CSU will starve and "K-14 will get a zillion dollars."

Fletcher said the CSU is where most of the graduates from the public school system end up. Public schools are the foundation of the state college system, he said, and by shoring them up the CSU would be helped.

"When you're building a house you don't start with the attic," he said.

Fletcher said that the failures of the K-14 schools cost the university time and money.

"Addressing the inadequacy of the public education system costs the CSU a lot of money," he said.

Prop. 98 would establish a level of funding based on the 1986-87 budget, Fletcher said, taking into account enrollment and cost of living increases. It would have three main provisions: to stop the decrease of the public education (K-14) budget; surplus state funds would go toward the budget; and require the accountability of state public schools in areas such as teacher competence, drop-out reduction and overall quality of learning.

Myron Hood, acting president of The San Luis Coastal Unified School District and a Cal Poly mathematics professor, said that in the past three or four years there has been no increase in the K-14 state public education budget. The budget has actually decreased, he said, because the state legislature has "robbed" it to pay for other programs.

Hood said he sees Prop. 98 as an alarm to wake up the governor and the legislature to the fact that they can't continue to take money from education.

PROPOSITION 106 IS A FRAUD

VOTE NO on PROPOSITION 106

1. Ralph Nader urges Californians to vote No on Proposition 106. (See California Voters Pamphlet, 1988).
2. Proposition 106 is being financed by the insurance industry, which is spending $43 million for lawyer bashing commercials. (See L.A. Times, 7-29-88).
3. What has the insurance industry ever done for you besides raise your premiums when you had no claims?
4. The top insurance industry spokesman (George Tye) has admitted publicly that Prop 106 won't reduce insurance rates. San Diego Union, 6-2-88).
5. Proposition 106 is the Insurance Industry saying, "Let's take away their lawyers."
6. Insurance companies give up no rights at all under Prop 106. They can still pay their own lawyers $200 per hour to fight you.
7. Proposition 106 will prohibit you from negotiating your own deal with your own attorney.
8. Proposition 106 is intended to force wage earners to pay their lawyers cash in advance.
9. Proposition 106 is intended to take away all of your leverage against insurance companies by making it financially impossible for you to hire a lawyer. That will leave the fox guarding the hen house.
10. The insurance motto is, "millions for defense, but not one cent for settlement." Now they want to take away your lawyer too.

DO YOU THINK INSURANCE COMPANIES ARE TRYING TO HELP YOU?

LA hosts face $500 fine if parties get 2 complaints

SAN FERNANDO, Calif. (AP) — Footing the bill for a party could be more expensive than a host might think under a plan to charge up to $500 for police services if officers make more than one visit to quiet a noisy group.

The measure proposed by the Police Department will be considered by the City Council on Monday.

"When officers have to come back again and again, we in effect become a private security force," said Lt. Dan Peavy, the department's administrative commander.

The logic, then, is that private security companies charge their customers.

A city report on the matter stated: "It is felt that persons responsible for such repetitious disruptions of the public peace should bear the costs ... over and above the services normally provided by the Police Department."

The proposed ordinance is similar to one already on the books in another Los Angeles suburb.

Two $400 service charges have been billed to hosts of rowdy parties in La Mirada in three months, according to City Manager Gary Sloan.

Although police in 2.4-square-mile San Fernando acknowledge that there's usually only about two party calls each weekend, police want "a little more clout" so they don't have to make return trips, Peavy said.

Groups scramble to get out vote

(AP) — Arkansas Republicans are concerned about voters who would rather hunt deer than go to the polls. In California, officials worry that the lengthy ballot will keep people away, and Oklahomans think the negative tone of the presidential race has simply turned voters off.

With only half of eligible voters expected to turn out for Tuesday's balloting, when a president, vice president, 33 senators and 435 House members will be chosen, Republicans and Democrats alike are keenly aware that getting people to vote will be their No. 1 challenge.

Political parties, unions and other groups are running phone banks to reach swing voters as well as party faithful. As usual, workers will hand out leaflets, arrange for baby-sitters and escort people to the polls. But there are also some more unusual strategies.

In Arkansas, where the deer-hunting season opened Saturday, Republicans mounted a direct-mail campaign encouraging hunters to get an absentee ballot if they won't be back from hunting in time for the election.

Coalition '88, a group of homosexuals and others who want two California AIDS initiatives defeated, will have hundreds of volunteers on Election Day erecting "human billboards" at 70 major intersections in Los Angeles urging voters to get out and turn down the two propositions.

Both parties are conducting massive drives for the state's 13.5 million registered voters but worry about the dampening effect of a ballot with nine state initiatives and possibly hundreds of local measures. Says state GOP chairman Bob Naylor: "I'm very concerned that people will be confronted with long lines at the polls, get early results from the East Coast and absentee ballots and say, 'What the heck. I won't vote.'"

Nationwide, public-interest groups predict that only 50 percent or fewer of the eligible voters will turn out, one of the lowest percentages this century and down from the 1984 figure of 53 percent.

Reasons vary, but many pundits point to laws requiring registration several days or weeks before the election. In many other countries, registration is done automatically through the mail.

Many voters also may simply be uninterested in the presidential race and feel there is no inspiring candidate or issue.

In states such as Alabama, where there is no race for governor, U.S. Senate or a major statehouse post, officials expect many voters to stay home. Oklahoma officials are equally pessimistic, blaming the tenor of the presidential race.

"There is more negative campaigning than there was four years ago, and I think it might affect the turnout," says Lance Ward, secretary of the state election board.

But parties and special-interest groups are still trying.

The AFL-CIO will have 500,000 volunteers out on Election Day, a majority of them in states with the most union members, which also happen to be states with big electoral votes.

SLO Police Chief praises Cal Poly for fewer Rush Week problems

By Christine C. Temple
Staff Writer

San Luis Obispo's police chief complimented Cal Poly's efforts to minimize problems during Rush Week this school year.

ASI and Greek Relations representative Tom Bongi told ASI committee members last week during a ASI Community Liaison meeting that complaints were down from past years.

Police Chief Jim Gardner said that rush, the Greek recruitment period, went smoothly, with a minimal number of phone calls from residents during the latter part of the week.

"In general, rush went pretty well," he said.

Gardner said that one of the problems from previous years was excessive partying at the houses. Neighbors complained about the noise levels during house activities, he said.

"I have to compliment fraternities; they made most of the activities away from the houses," said Gardner.

The committee also discussed the importance of the Intra-Fraternity Council. The council visited the chapters during rush to see how things were going, but not as police, just to be involved, Gardner said.

Mayor Ron Dunin and ASI president Tom Lebens attribute the reduction of complaints to the communication among committee members.

Dunin said that the relationship between the city and county is the highest it has ever been.

Bongi said the number of incidents is proportional to the number of pledges. Bongi told the committee that 200 of the 400 men were accepted into fraternities this year.

"The numbers have doubled from four years ago," he said.

Coordinator of Greek Affairs Walt Lambert said there is a swelling of all fraternities because the Greek system is growing nationwide.

Lambert said that he feels good about the Greek system at Cal Poly, but that more needs to be done.

Although the communication has been exceptionally good, he said, future pledges will need to be educated as to what is acceptable.

"Next fall, 1,200 to 1,400 new students will be involved, so there is a constant re-education process," he said. "A gain this year may be a loss with new students."

Zig Zag Premium Cigarette Tobacco

FOR PEOPLE WHO DON'T RUN WITH THE PACK.

You've always done things a little differently. For you there's Zig Zag premium cigarette tobacco. It's blended for American tastes, smooth and mild. Zig Zag's long cut makes it easy to roll. And you get twice as much tobacco for the same price as machine made brands. Sure, rolling your own cigarette is a little out of the ordinary, but what's so great about being ordinary?

for several days. He said he hopes to return to work by the end of the week.

The vice president was in a meeting on campus at about noon Friday and was not feeling well, so Peter Y. Lee, dean of the School of Engineering, and Charles Crabb, associate dean of the School of Agriculture, took him to the hospital, Baker said.

Wilson's family declined to comment on his condition at this time.
