Senate OKs condom issue

By Cass Caulfield
Staff Writer

The Student Senate approved a resolution Wednesday that would place condom vending machines on campus.

Resolution 89-07 passed with a 16-8 roll call vote after considerable debate and discussion. It will now be presented to Cal Poly President Warren J. Baker for his approval.

"President Baker is seeking wide campus input on this issue, and we are interpreting this vote as student input into the decision making process," said Hazel Scott, dean of Student Affairs and the president's representative at the senate.

Scott also added that input will be sought from other groups such as the Academic Senate, the Student Affairs Council and the Dean's Council.

"I am happy that this goal has been achieved, but I am a little unhappy about the opposition being so fierce," said Peter Goddyn, student senator from the School of Engineering and author of the resolution.

Goddyn urged the senators to vote for the resolution as stated and not to be influenced by any possible administrative trouble that could arise with the actual installation of the machines.

"We are not dealing with a moral issue, but with a health issue," said Goddyn.

The senators were encouraged at previous meetings and workshops to take this issue back to their school councils and clubs in order to receive a wide range of student input.

The Agriculture Council voted 14-12 in favor of the resolution at their meeting. So, of the five senators from the School of Agriculture, three voted for the resolution and two voted against it, in order to represent their constituents, said Ricardo Echeverria, senator from the School of Agriculture.

Four senators who are opposed to this resolution have put together a 12-page report documenting reasons from valid sources for not having condoms on campus, said Mark Pulver, student senator from the School of Professional Studies and Education. The senators are planning on presenting this report to President Baker.

"We haven't seen anything factual saying it (installation of condom vending machines) would promote or prevent sexual activity. We are introducing a factor that no one can predict the outcome (of)," said Charley Mathews, student senator from the School of Engineering.

The question of whether this issue had been researched sufficiently was also raised at the meeting.

Anthony Celebrini, chair of the University Union Executive Committee, suggested that a task force be formed to further research this issue.

The Student Health Advisory Council and the Cal Poly AIDS Prevention Task Force have been dealing with the condom issue and have expressed their support to the senate for installing con-

Baker agrees with ASI, says AIDS is tragic

Cal Poly President Warren J. Baker added the weight of his personal approval to the placement of condom vending machines on campus, further tipping the scales in favor of the proposal.

"AIDS is such a tragic disease and I think that the university should do all that we can to protect the students," Baker said yesterday when asked if he was in favor of condom vending machines on campus.

Senate debates residence halls

Topic: Installation of vending machine in restrooms

By Cass Caulfield
Staff Writer

The condom debate has not died with Wednesday's passage of the condom vending machine resolution. Another resolution recommending that condom vending machines be installed in the residence halls was also discussed at this week's Student Senate meeting.

"This resolution (for the dorms) is not supposed to work against the other one (for campus), it's just to reinforce it," said Emily Ludeman, Interhall Council representative and author of Resolution 89-08, which asks for vending machine placement in the dorms.

One reason for two separate resolutions, explained Ludeman, was that if Resolution 89-07 (asking for campus wide placement) failed there would still be a vehicle working toward getting condom vending machines installed in the residence halls.

Ironically, Ludeman voted against 89-07 because Interhall Council was not in favor of campus wide installation of the machines.

'Co-habitation is supposedly wrong in the dorms. If we do put condom vending machines in the dorms, it's sending students two different messages.'

— Mark Pulver

"The concern from some of the residents was that condom vending machines would be out of place on campus, whereas the residence halls are a living community," said Ludeman.

Much of Wednesday's discussion over this resolution centered around the impact condom vending would have on the residents.

"Co-habitation is supposedly wrong in the dorms. If we do put condom vending machines in the dorms it's sending students two different messages," said Mark Pulver, student senator from the School of Professional Studies and Education.

Brett Berridge, an alternate senator from the School of Agriculture stated that he was a resident adviser last year, and the co-habitation policy at that time was interpreted as "something that lasted more than one night."

Another question raised at the meeting by Mike Gomes, student senator from the School of Agriculture, was how parents would react to seeing condom vending machines in the dorms when they arrive to settle their children.

"I hope mom and dad would be mature enough to handle the sight of condoms," said Dave Freistroffer, student senator from the School of Science and Math.

The issue of dorm residents' reactions to the presence of the vending machines was also discussed at the meeting.

Condom machines in the dorms target 18- and 19-year-olds, who are just starting to form their morals away from mom and dad, said Matthew Wiseby, student senator from the School of Architecture and Environmental Design.

Robber escapes on foot following credit union heist

By Steve Harmon
Staff Writer

An armed robber made off with an undetermined amount of money from a San Luis Obispo credit union yesterday and remains at large.

A 6-foot white male, described by San Luis Obispo police as being in his early to mid-20s, entered the front door of the San Luis Obispo branch of the Vandenberg Federal Credit Union at approximately 11 a.m. He brandished a handgun and announced that a robbery was taking place, police said.

He ordered employees into the vault room, where an undetermined amount of currency was taken from the safe, city police said.

The suspect then ordered employees and customers to the rear of the business and escaped on foot.

VFCU employees would not comment on the robbery. The credit union was closed for the remainder of the day.

He was reportedly wearing a blue and red ski-type parka jacket and had a cloth concealing the lower portion of his face. He was also wearing sunglasses.

Kristi Maddalena, an employee of the neighboring Fast Eddie's Restaurant, said she didn't know a robbery had occurred next door. It was only after police had shown up that she became aware of it.

The matter is being jointly investigated by San Luis Obispo Police Department and the FBI.

A $1,000 reward is being offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the suspect. Anyone with information on the robbery is asked to telephone the San Luis Obispo Police Department at 549-7312 or CRIMESTOPPERS at 543-STOP.

Senate opens debate on Tower nomination

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate began its formal debate on John Tower's troubled nomination as defense secretary today as two additional Democrats joined the ranks of the opposition and a key Republican insisted that confirmation is still "winnable."

At the White House, spokesman Marlin Fitzwater conceded that despite two days of personal lobbying, President Bush had "not yet" been able to persuade any Democrats to line up in favor of confirmation.

Sen. Sam Nunn led off the long-awaited floor debate on the nomination, and the Georgia Democrat who chairs the Armed Services Committee said he was acting with a "sense of sorrow" in leading the opposition to his former colleague in the Senate.

Nunn said that when the committee began its hearings into Tower's nomination he expected that he would in "good faith support the nominee. My mind was changed by the facts presented to the committee."

Nunn predicted some "vigorous debate" over the next several days — a forecast almost certainly to be accurate with Republicans trying to spend time marshaling public support on behalf of the nomination.

No Senate vote is expected until next week.

Tower has been battling questions of drinking habits, allegations of womanizing and questions over possible conflicts of interest stemming from his work as a defense industry consultant.

The debate began as aides to Student Senate shows maturity and concern

The Student Senate is to be commended for its recent decision to put condom dispensing machines in campus restrooms.

The Senate showed concern and responsibility for the students of Cal Poly with its 16-8 decision, especially in light of the high pregnancy rates, the life-threatening AIDS virus and the plethora of other sexually transmitted diseases facing us today.

This decision shows a maturity and wisdom that a former Student Senate did not possess.

Some senators voted contrary to their personal feelings, because they felt a strong commitment to their constituency; the schools they were elected to represent. We at the Daily are proud of these senators for keeping their personal feelings separate from their constituencies' desires and voting according to the requests of their respective schools. These senators probably have a very good chance of being re-elected after showing such loyalty and concern.

Even Cal Poly President Warren J. Baker has shown favor for the resolution.

This responsiveness to students' concerns is heartening. Yet we hope the Student Senate will also consider putting condom dispensing machines in the dormitory restrooms, where they are probably needed the most. Installing them in campus restrooms is a great first step, but to complete the journey condoms must be as accessible as possible to on-campus residents.

Way to go, Senate.

Letters to the Editor

An ugly brawl at a baseball game

Editor — This letter is to the Cal Poly Men's baseball team: Gentlemen, you blew it. Two young "super" athletes sat on the bleachers Saturday, Feb. 8 and watched astounded as their favorite college team had a sickening fist-fight at second base.

When you are 10 years old, fellows, you look up to guys like you. And what did you teach them Saturday? Ugliness.

As parents and grandparents we were horrified. Ridiculous, we said, and a darn good word too. The dictionary reads "deserving or causing ridicule or derision; absurd, preposterous, or laughable" ... well no one laughs!

We paid our hard-earned money to get in to see BASEBALL, but instead we witnessed a great number of young men brawling. Making fools of themselves.

I want my money back. Four adults and two children. That's $15!

Also, unless you are all proud of your actions, perhaps each of you could do a public service for this community. Like going to the children's area of our local hospitals and spending some time with a sick child. Or throwing a baseball day and hotdog party for Achievement House or some other worthy group.

I want my money back and I want an apology for a rotten, disappointing day!

Time is of the essence

By Donna Taylor

I never realized how precious time was until I came to college. Or at least not until I became a "Special Undergrad," according to CAPTURE.

What does that mean? I think it means I'm no longer a junior but I'm not quite a graduating senior. It certainly doesn't mean I'm special, because I only recently emptied my bank account to pay CAPTURE while some of my peers already have their classes.

But OK, enough bitching about that. Time is of the essence here, and it has become the rarest commodity of my life. My home is used only to store my furniture, my clothes and my food, and for me to stumble in at midnight to sleep. This revelation came to me as I sat on a Cal Poly toilet and realized I have used this particular toilet about three times more than my home commode. It was startling reality.

My friends complain because I never have time to do anything with them anymore. My parents complain because they are sick of paying money to talk to my answering machine. My boyfriend complains because I have no time for ... well, you get the picture.

I even tried to ease my time management deficit with an easy class schedule. Personal Development, Pairing and Marriage, Psychology of Women

— a whopping nine units. True it's not a particularly earth-shattering load, but all I've found is that people judge others solely on the basis of units and how hard your classes are. "You only have nine units? Boy, that Personal Development sounds like a challenge." Buzz off.

A lot of it has to do with all these extra-curricular activities I've thrust upon myself — Mustang Daily, a journalism convention, a social life. The last one is non-existent, but I thought I'd try to create one by writing it down.

And the worse thing is, I stress. I stress about everything.

The other editors didn't put a "Kick Me When I Stress" sign on me for nothing.

Stress does help me produce, it gets my adrenaline pumping, but my body is on overload. I'm going to be one of those people saying "My name is Donna, and I'm a workaholic."

And people say "college is easy, wait until you get into the real world." Oh God, I'm stressing again.

So where am I going with this? How should I know, I have five million other things on my mind and I'm late for class.

Donna Taylor is spotlight editor, when she has time.

not realize that AIDS is a very important issue and deserves attention. AIDS is a social issue which concerns everybody, homosexuals and heterosexuals alike, and which students and others who read the paper have a right to know. (Including conservative technical university students).

I am sorry Fight considers AIDS, and apparently other interesting and human stories in the Daily to be "emotional gags." These articles are a nice break from our otherwise technical and goal-oriented studies and lives. I look forward to reading personal and human interest stories in the Daily; perhaps Mr. Fight should relax and take a broader look into people and their lives, instead of just focusing on the technical details.

Everyone having sex risks AIDS

Editor — I'm thoroughly disgusted after reading the letter from William Fight and his blind ignorance of the AIDS issue. After five years of higher education I would have hoped that Will would have learned more about critical, life threatening diseases like AIDS. For example, two homosexual males engaging in anal sex with condoms are at less of a risk to HIV exposure than a healthy, active, engineering student (such as you, Will) engaging in "normal" unprotected heterosexual sex with a "nice girl" on this idyllic, conservative, engineering school campus.

There are hundreds, if not thousands, who are trapped by denial and ignorance who will tragically bring upon themselves a long, slow, lingering death because they're "sick and tired" of having to wade through all of the AIDS articles to get to the more edifying technical articles in the school's paper. Even now there are individuals carrying the HIV virus on this campus. These unfortunate individuals had the intelligence and concern to have themselves tested so at least they'd know. Just think, Will, how many people are out there, unknowingly carrying the virus because they're too ignorant or afraid of the realities of this fatal disease.

If people would actively seek education about this preventable disease, the Daily, and other concerned, responsible newspapers would not need to publish as many front-page articles on the subject. Since people don't make that effort, here's another reminder: Anyone engaging in sexual activity is at risk. That risk can be substantially lessened by properly using condoms. There are no high-risk groups, only high-risk behaviors. And finally, a condom is more effective for preventing HIV transmission than a HP 41CV with a math pack.

U.S. capitalism is not perfect

Editor — Vanni and Walton's responses to Toure's comments in a recent letter typifies the wounded pride of chauvinistic individuals who know something of their own country and much less of others.

Can it be that they have swallowed their own government's propaganda without question? Is that why they shake the flag vigorously at any who dare think that there might be room for improvement in our system of government? Their solution seems to be to dispatch anyone who questions the merits of our system "back to where he came from."

How narrow! How provincial!

In a country which loves to brag of the freedoms enjoyed by all, these "patriots" themselves stifle freedom of speech.

I have not read Mr. Toure's philosophy on capitalism. Mr. Walton's praise of capitalism, however, deserves response. For all the touted accomplishments of capitalism (including the reconstruction of Europe), I would like to point to a few facts that these individuals must be aware of.

For all our affluence and resources, thousands of people are homeless. For all our national bragging thousands are illiterate. Why have we, a successful industrial and agrarian society based on free enterprise, failed to provide basic health care for our citizens? Thousands experience financial ruin when catastrophic illnesses strike. Vanni and Walton would shudder at the thought of socialized medicine (it does smack of communism does it not?). But note that every other industrialized and capitalist country takes care of its old, infirm and indigent (Canada, England, and all Western Continental Europe for example).

Child care and maternity leave lag sadly behind that of other developed countries (Italy seems

American capitalism has helped to spawn a class of the unprivileged; those who have been forced to or below the poverty level be the doctrine of "the survival of the fittest."

Our capitalist society has seen a shocking and growing indulgence in drugs and crime. Our capitalist philosophy allows us to justify (in the name of national security or national interest) interfering in the popular movement in Nicaragua and at the same time condone, if not support, a repressive regime in South Africa.

No I do not advocate anarchy and I hope that I will not be banished to "where I came from" for exercising independent thinking. Draw swastikas somewhere else

Editor — Last week individuals trying to promote gun control posted unauthorized fliers with pictures of Hitler and swastikas on them around campus. In my opinion a very distasteful way of advertising. But, hey, ignorant people even attend Cal Poly.

Now, someone has vandalized the Jewish cultural club's fliers with swastikas. What's next? The bathroom walls in the UU? A swastika is used as a symbol of anti-semitism or of Nazism, and I find them very offensive. If one has an incredible urge to draw these repulsive symbols why not draw them on the walls in the privacy of your own home. Also, sign your name on your artwork if you are so proud of it.

An ROTC-style wake up call

Editor — As a North Mountain dorm resident, I would like to call attention to a service offered by the university that not many people know about. Here at Cal Poly, the Military Science Department (aka ROTC) offers their own version of early morning wake up calls to those students residing near Poly Canyon (ie. Shasta and Diablo halls). Cal Poly is a large campus, these people can do their calisthenics at any other location at 6 a.m., and then march silently by the dorms on their way to Poly Canyon to do battle with the cows.

However, for fear that we may not wake up in time for an afternoon class, they have chosen on more than one occasion to be rude and barbaric in the parking lot on Poly Canyon Road, and at the foot of the hill outside Shasta Hall, by grunting and chanting at the top of their lungs to their superior officers.

How would they feel if they were sleeping in a barracks and at 2 a.m. I came by with my ghetto blaster and turned a Metallica at maximum volume? They'd probably come out with a hammer and destroy my stereo. Many of these people are dorm residents as well, and I am surprised that they wouldn't show a little more consideration. Obviously, the military science department doesn't teach common courtesy. Military intelligence? Right.

Sigma Nu man wins Mr. Fraternity title with beauty, brains

By Kathryn Brunello
Staff Writer

A Sigma Nu member, after giving a talent act as half boy, half girl, was given the title of 1989 Mr. Fraternity Wednesday night at the Graduate in a competition sponsored by Alpha Omicron Pi sorority to benefit the Arthritis Research Grant.

In a talent act with eight brothers of Sigma Nu, Jim Riding was both Sandy and Danny from Grease while lip syncing "Summer Lovin'."

Fourth runner-up was Ricardo Echeverria from Alpha Gamma Rho; third runner-up was Glenn Kaminski from Beta Theta Pi; second runner-up was Brad Zell from Sigma Alpha Epsilon; and the first runner-up was gymnast John Kenshi Van Heiningen from Alpha Epsilon Pi.

Other contestants were Jeff Labrado of Delta Tau, Reid Stevens of Phi Delta Theta, John Lipman of Tau Kappa Epsilon, David Carlson of Theta Chi, Jim Spratt of Sigma Chi, Jack DeWitt of Phi Kappa Psi, Bill Collins of Delta Sigma Phi and Jim Latter of Lambda Chi Alpha.

The finalists presented a variety of talent — from SAE's Zell, who led his band Rhythm Akimbo in a few tunes, to Van Heiningen, on the parallel bars and pommel horse. Acts also included parodies of Shirley Temple, Mr. Rogers and Tina Turner.

The judges were the presidents of seven sororities as well as ASI

Vice President John Moons and the IFC president Alan Vander Horst. Both of the male judges were members of Alpha Gamma Rho fraternity but could not judge their brother in any of the events.

The 13 contestants entered three events. First was the formal wear competition. Second was talent, about which event coordinator Molly Lenz of Alpha Omicron Pi said "they could do anything but strip." Last, the contestants modeled their fraternity letters and a pair of shorts while answering questions drawn from a hat by emcee Walt Lambert, coordinator of Greek Affairs.

When the five finalists were announced they returned to the stage in their formal wear and were asked another question by Lambert.

"It was his second response about the relations between the community and the greek system that really convinced me it was Riding," said Nicole Del Prado, president of Alpha Chi Omega. "It was also the originality in his talent act. It wasn't thrown together, he obviously put a lot of time into it."

"I thought the different acts were good but ours really got the audience into it and I think that's what everyone liked," said Riding.

Riding will be graduating in June as a BioChemistry major. He hadn't thought much about the nomination until he won. "Winning is great," he said. "The whole competition was a lot of fun, just being up there with the guys."

"Jim was an all-around solid contestant," said Moons. "He is definitely what we want to represent our Greek community."

Sens. Alan Cranston of California and Terry Sanford of North Carolina said both men would vote against the nomination — bringing the number of Democrats in opposition to 38.

Appearing on ABC's "Good Morning America" several hours earlier, Sen. John Warner, R-Va., said, "I think it's winnable in the sense that we get the American public involved in this.

"And as soon as this debate starts I'm confident that they'll communicate with the members of the Senate. It's important that we not have a soap opera or a civil war in the Senate but a fair and factual debate," said Warner, the ranking Republican on the Armed Services Committee.

Cranston, the Senate Democratic whip, said through an aide that he would vote against the nomination.

An Associated Press tally at midday showed 43 Democrats and Republican Larry Pressler of South Dakota either solidly opposed or leaning in opposition, and 40 Republicans either solidly or leaning in favor.

Democrats hold a 55-45 majority in the Senate.

Fitzwater said Bush still believes all allegations against Tower are unfounded.

He praised the nominee's combative appearance on Wednesday at a question-and-answer session at the National Press Club.

"We thought Senator Tower's performance yesterday was excellent. It showed that he's a fighter and a scrappy guy and just the man to take over the Defense Department," the spokesman said.

Fitzwater said the White House is in full accord with Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole's plans to delay a final vote on Tower.

"We think everybody should have a chance to register their vote. And you never know, you might change (some) at the last minute," Fitzwater said. But, when asked if the White House could name one Democrat who had been won over, he said: "Not yet."

"I think the people involved in this issue have done a fantastic job in researching it," said Tom Lebens, ASI president.

It is uncertain when the final decision will be made by President Baker.

"When we get all the information and have a chance to weigh it all, evaluate, and investigate more fully how it will be implemented, and the impact, then a decision will be made," said Scott.

tion question, Wiseby created an analogy between having sex and drinking alcohol. "If we were to distribute corkscrews and say they can't drink wine, we are sending the wrong message."

However, not all the senators agreed that Wiseby's comparison was a valid one.

"You are not necessarily going to die from one drink, but you could die from one sexual experience," said Todd Leavey, student senator from the School of Business.

Resolution 89-08 will be voted on in the senate next week and will also have to be approved by both President Warren J. Baker and the housing department.

Baker's approval of the placement of vending machines came on the heels of the Student Senate's 16-8 approval of Resolution 89-07 recommending the placement. The resolution is being forwarded to Baker for his signature.

"We shouldn't be naive about what people do within relationships. The institution should do all we can to make sure our students don't get themselves in a problem that can determine whether they will live or die," Baker said.

Baker said that he was aware of what people's objections but he doesn't take the view that the university is condoning immoral behavior. "We are facing a tragic situation."

"The question is not when the placement will take place but how, and what is appropriate. We should try to avoid offending people but we must be realistic about what AIDS is and how dangerous it is."

INS must stop illegal searches, says judge

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) — Immigration agents will not single out Hispanic-looking people to see if they are illegal aliens, under a settlement reached in federal court.

"You're driving to the store or to get a haircut and you're stopped by marked cars," said Philip Riley, an attorney for the plaintiffs. "For migrant workers, it's embarrassing."

Many of the migrant workers stopped were residents of California and Texas who were in the state for seasonal work, Riley said.

The settlement Tuesday ended part of a lawsuit brought by Hispanics who accused agents of routinely stopping them on the basis of their appearance.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service also agreed to make payments of $1,000 to about $3,000 to six people who were stopped by agents. The largest amount will go to Robert Mireles of Eau Claire, who was stopped three times.

In settling the suit, the government admitted no wrongdoing, said Edwin W. Earl, chief patrol agent for the INS in Michigan.

The settlement applies only to the federal court district covering the western half of Michigan's Lower Peninsula and all of the Upper Peninsula.

The class-action suit filed in 1981 alleged that immigration workers unfairly targeted the 50,000 to 100,000 Hispanics in southwestern Michigan with traffic stops, interrogations, handcuffs and nighttime household searches.

U.S. District Judge Richard Enslen said the INS appeared to be violating a constitutional ban on unlawful search and seizure.

Earl said today that the government promised not to stop cars of suspected aliens based on appearance alone, "but that was never done anyway. We always have other reasons for stopping vehicles that we stop." He declined to be specific.

The government agreed to a settlement to prevent the suit from dragging out and to save the cost of defending it, he said.

The settlement requires the INS to keep detailed written records of any traffic stops. Earl said INS agents would begin doing that across Michigan, but he didn't know if it would be done in other states.

The agreement bars border agents from stopping vehicles containing people of Hispanic origin or appearance at places other than border checkpoints, or more than 25 miles from the border, without a search warrant or without reason to suspect that a person in the vehicle is an illegal alien.

Another part of the suit, in which several plaintiffs allege they were roused from their beds and illegally searched at migrant camps, may go to trial in July.

Boat people return to Vietnam

HONG KONG (AP) — Seventy-five Vietnamese returned by charter jet Thursday to the communist homeland they fled, beginning the first repatriation program for boat people no longer willing to languish in crowded detention centers.

The boat people were among about 11,000 Vietnamese who have sailed into this British colony since it adopted a tough new policy last year that for most of them rules out resettlement.

The 2-and-a-half-hour flight marked the first large-scale repatriation of boat people, who have sailed by the tens of thousands to seek asylum in non-communist southeast Asia.

Many of the returning boarded the U.N.-chartered Boeing 737 jet smiling, waving and shaking hands with local officials. Several wore new clothes; a few carried cassette tape players.

When their plane touched down in Hanoi on Thursday evening, they were met by Vietnamese, British and U.N. officials, Hong Kong radio reported. Relief officials aboard the airplane said there was no tension during the flight, it said.

"I'm happy to be back," Lan Bun See told reporters as he stepped off the plane.

The group was whisked to the passenger terminal by coach where they were rushed through immigration, reports from Hanoi said.

"This is an important start," said Security Branch official Michael Hanson, who watched the group leave Hong Kong. "We hope more people will take this route back to Vietnam" and relieve the crowded camps that are home to about 26,000 boat people in Hong Kong.

The repatriation was arranged under an agreement reached by Vietnam and the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees. Hanoi promised not to prosecute its returning citizens and to allow the international organization to monitor their treatment back home.

The U.N. commission agreed to provide assistance to the repatriated Vietnamese. Returning adults received $50 and their children $25, according to U.N. officials, and other unspecified assistance will be offered.

Two U.N. officials flew back with the group and were expected to accompany the Vietnamese to their hometowns.

Hong Kong, about 500 miles north of Vietnam, long classified all arriving Vietnamese as refugees who could stay in the colony until resettled elsewhere. Fewer than two dozen of the more than 120,000 Vietnamese who have come to Hong Kong returned home between 1979 and 1988. But to stem a growing influx of boat people, the colony adopted a new policy in June under which Vietnamese are considered refugees only if they can prove they fled their homeland because of persecution.

The vast majority of the 11,000 boat people who have arrived under the new policy do not meet that standard under a Hong Kong government screening program and are classified as illegal immigrants who fled their impoverished homeland for economic reasons. Hong Kong wants to send them home forcibly, but Hanoi insists it will only accept boat people who want to return.

Sister suicide pact in Korea emphasizes the plight of poverty-stricken children

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea's first lady today sent money to a grief-stricken family whose four girls took rat poison so their parents would have enough money to send their brother to school.

The girls, aged 6 to 13, were found unconscious Monday. The youngest girl died immediately. Police said the others were in critical condition today.

Korean newspapers gave the story prominent display, and editorials on the children's plight criticized public policies that some said do too little for the young or the poor. Editorials also blamed a male-dominated social structure that often leads to discrimination against girls and women.

"The sad story touched the man in the street," wrote the Korea Times.

Police said the eldest of the four girls, Soon-mi, told authorities the children made a suicide pact to ease their parent's financial burden and leave enough money for the education of their 3-year-old brother.

Money for schooling has traditionally been provided first to boys.

The father, Yang Tae-bun, 44, is a factory worker who supports the family on the equivalent of $362 a month, police said.

The story led to an outpouring of sympathy led by first lady Kim Ok-sook, wife of President Roh Tae-woo. She sent the family condolences and an undisclosed amount of money, officials said.

Opposition politician Kim Dae-jung visited the girls' parents at the hospital. "I am grief-stricken. I feel a great burden as a politician and I will focus on ways to promote the livelihood of alienated people," he said.

Kim Jong-pil, head of the New Democratic Republican Party attributed the suicide attempt to the faults of politicians "who have failed to hammer out appropriate steps for a balanced income distribution."

Seoul newspapers quoted the girls' teachers as saying they studied hard and were quiet, model students.

A neighborhood shopkeeper said Soon-mi told him she could not afford $5.80 worth of notebooks and pencils for school and asked to pay later.

The Korea Times quoted a composition written by Soon-mi that said:

"On Christmas Eve, they rang the bell — the helping neighbor campaign. I searched my pocket and found a 500 won coin (worth 74 cents). I was supposed to buy school things with this money. But I put it into the charity pot, hoping that the money would be used for helping the needy."
