Students rally on campus to protest inhumanity

By Deanna Wulff
Staff Writer

The Cal Poly Amphitheater was filled with fiery speeches, mercurial emotions and angry protests Friday evening.

Nearly 500 people rallied on the lawn during an event called "Take Back the Night."

The purpose of the event was not just to protest rape, but was also to protest racism, violence and inequity in the world.

Willi Coleman, director of the Center for Women and Ethnic issues, began with a welcome and an opening statement. "Our campus is in the midst of change. Things are clearly going to be different here," said Coleman. "We have entered the 20th Century, at last."

She then introduced Margaret Berrio, associate professor of psychology and human development.

Berrio agreed that Cal Poly is changing for the better.

"When I first came to Cal Poly, the process to deal with date rape was a disaster," Berrio said. "Both parties were brought together, and the woman who had been assaulted had to face the person who assaulted her."

"He could challenge her and insult her," Berrio said. "But now, the campus is much more responsive to the survivor, and the students have made a big difference."

When Berrio concluded, the featured speaker, Angela Davis, a political activist and UC Santa Cruz professor, took the stage to a standing ovation.

She began her speech by drawing parallels between Columbus' invasion of America and the social injustices that exist today.

"Today, in 1992, we suffer under a tradition of genocide that began in 1492," Davis said. "Fourteen ninety-two was the beginning of a cycle of hate violence, racist violence and misogynist violence."

Davis spoke about society's problems and the need for reform.

"We are in the Reagan-Bush era, and things look pretty bad, pretty bad for a lot of people."

Political activist says solidarity is essential

By Deanna Wulff

In 1975 a woman named Joann Little was imprisoned in North Carolina. While in prison a guard went into her cell armed with an ice pick and attempted to rape her. In the course of defending herself, she killed the guard.

Angela Davis took on the cause of Little's struggle and engaged in an international campaign to free her. Little was acquitted.

Davis is a Communist, a political activist, a professor at UC Santa Cruz, the author of numerous books and a one-time member of the FBI's Ten Most Wanted List.

She came to Cal Poly last Friday to participate and speak in the "Take Back the Night" march.

"Angela Davis is a fighter and she has fought her whole life for all women and all people to be free from all forms of oppression," said Mary Storey, president of the Take Back the Night Club, a Cal Poly organization. "To me, that's why she is here tonight."

Rising to a standing ovation, Davis, a tall woman with long dreadlocks and a colorful tie-dyed outfit, took the podium.

Willi Coleman, director of the Center for Women and Ethnic issues, and Storey, both of whom coordinated the event, invited Davis to speak about women, solidarity and racism.

"Tonight I will be connecting the violence of 1492 with 1992," she said. "I will discuss the

Fraternity's purpose in van rental disputed

By Jennifer White

Special Olympics of San Luis Obispo recently had its name misused when Sigma Chi fraternity rented two vehicles during its annual Derby Days fundraiser.

The fraternity rented a van and a car to transport people to and from a Sigma Chi-sponsored party held at Pismo Veterans Hall on April 2. It returned the van two hours late with vomit and black high-heeled shoes in the back.

According to an Enterprise

Rent-A-Car employee, the fraternity rented the vehicles to help with a Special Olympics event, not a Derby Days party.

Derby Days is a weeklong competition sponsored by Sigma Chi at which teams compete in games and lip sync events. The proceeds from Derby Days benefit Special Olympics.

The party followed the Derby Days fund-raiser and was given for those who had participated in the week's events. It was not an official part of the fund-raiser.

Mary Ellen Gibson, director of the San Luis Obispo Special Olympics said, "Anything that is done using the name of Special Olympics, that the organization didn't have anything to do with, can harm our reputation."

She said she did not authorize the use of her organization's name on the rental list, nor was she aware that vehicles were being rented.

"To the best of my knowledge, Sigma Chi didn't even ask to use our (Special Olympics) name," she said.

Marc Lea, a Cal Poly lacrosse team member, also had a problem with Sigma Chi's use of the vehicles.

He said he had reserved an Enterprise van for April 3 at 8 a.m. to take the lacrosse team to CSU Humboldt for a game.

Lea, an environmental biology senior, said he had to wait for the van to be returned to the Enterprise Rent-A-Car company.

"Two hours later, after (Enterprise Rent-A-Car) ... (was) hung up on and generally ignored (by Sigma Chi), the rental company had to retrieve the van themselves," Lea said.

He said once he had received

Thousands rally for Yeltsin near Kremlin

MOSCOW (AP) — Tens of thousands of people waving Russian tricolor flags and chanting "Yeltsin! Russia! Freedom!" massed near the Kremlin on Sunday to denounce parliament's efforts to curb the powers of President Boris Yeltsin.

Holding hands to form human chains, the demonstrators earlier marched from Yeltsin's former headquarters at Moscow's so-called White House to the giant Manezh Square, next to the Kremlin.

Some participants wore small handwritten signs pinned to their clothes, such as "I'm for reform" and "Yes to Yeltsin, yes to the reform." Some carried willow branches to mark Willow Sunday, the Russian Orthodox version of Palm Sunday commemorating Jesus' triumphal entry into Jerusalem.

Two lines of police and metal barriers separated the demonstrators from a rally of a few thousand Communists near the Lenin Museum on adjacent Red Square.

Acting president takes control of government

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Muslim guerrillas extended their control over Afghanistan on Sunday, seizing the ousted president's hometown and a string of provinces. But rebel leaders failed to settle differences over how to take charge of the embattled Afghan government.

The leaders met in Peshawar, Pakistan — the rebels' headquarters during the 14-year-old civil war — seeking to form an interim council made up of rival factions to take charge in Kabul.

But an agreement apparently was blocked by fundamentalist rebels who want a greater say in the composition of the council and

Reports of covert aid to Iraq being checked

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate investigators are checking reports of covert assistance to Iraq by the Reagan and Bush administrations, Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell said Sunday.

Appearing on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press," Mitchell, D-Maine, said he had not been informed of any such assistance, if it occurred, and he did not know whether other members of Congress were told.

"I do not know whether a violation of law occurred or not," he said. "We are going to look into this tomorrow. I have asked for a report on the information that's available with respect to the transfers as well as the applicable law."

The Los Angeles Times reported Saturday that both President Bush and his predecessor secretly allowed Saudi Arabia to provide American-made weapons to Iraq and other nations for almost 10 years in an effort to sidestep legal restrictions imposed by Congress.

Rise in rape, assault ups violent crime rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — An estimated 59 percent surge in rapes and attempted rapes and a substantial increase in assaults spurred a dramatic rise in violent crime last year, according to a Justice Department survey of crime victims released Sunday.

Preliminary figures showed there were 2.6 million completed violent crimes last year, up 7.9 percent from an estimated 2.4 million the previous year. Including attempted violent crimes, the total was 6.4 million last year, up 7 percent from 6 million in 1990.

But department officials cautioned that State tries to overturn Harris' execution stay

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Prosecutors scrambled Sunday to persuade an appeals court to reverse a stay that halted the execution of murderer Robert Alton Harris two days before he was to go to the gas chamber.

State lawyers are seeking to overturn a ruling that executions in California's gas chamber constitute cruel and unusual punishment, said Dave Puglia, spokesman for the state Attorney General's Office.

He did not know when the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals would rule.

Both sides are prepared to take their case to the U.S. Supreme Court.

U.S. District Judge Marilyn Hall Patel on Saturday issued the restraining order, agreeing with Harris' lawyers that there was sufficient evidence for a federal court to consider whether death by lethal gas is unconstitutional.

Patel ruled on a class-action lawsuit filed on behalf of all 328 inmates on San Quentin's death row.

Group tries to register homeless, poor to vote

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Not many people campaign for the votes of the poor and homeless, but a group of volunteers is trying to change that.

So far, workers have registered 300 homeless or poor people in Alameda County, joining a national effort to register the impoverished.

"Homeless and poor people need to know they have a stake in elections, that it's worth their while to vote," said Sheba Haven of Emergency Services Network, which is coordinating the drive here.

People should be accepted despite sexual choices

By Jady Cheng
Special to the Daily

Today in a world that is becoming more and more confusing, people need to turn to each other for support and understanding. If we can't depend on the people around us for this, life will just get harder — for everyone. One issue that seems to be cutting many people off from this much needed support is homosexuality.

Homosexuality is the manifestation of sexual desire toward a member of one's own sex. There are many people who believe that homosexuality is the best way of life. There are also many people who believe that homosexuality is evil and wrong. There are even more people who are completely confused about the issue and how they should feel.

The main factor that ties all three of these groups together is that they are all people with the right and privilege to their opinions. All these people deserve lives free from discrimination and

Police arrest students for Domino's robbery

Three allegedly attacked pizza delivery person

By Katherine Gill
Staff Writer

Steal a pizza, go to jail. That's the law, according to the San Luis Obispo Police Department.

Charges were filed April 16 against a Cal Poly student and two Cuesta students who police say robbed a Domino's Pizza delivery person on Feb. 29.

Steve Seybold, crime prevention coordinator for the San Luis Obispo Police Department, said felony complaints were filed with the District Attorney's Office against Michael Cordoba, a 21-year-old Cal Poly business junior, and Cuesta students Geoffrey Freedman and Sandy Miller, both 20. Seybold said the students were charged with one count of strong-arm robbery each.

According to the police report, a female placed an order at the Domino's Pizza in Foothill Plaza, giving an address in the 100 block of Del Sur Way.

Domino's employee Melissa White, 23, was attacked by two men at about 1:30 a.m., when she attempted to deliver pizzas to the house. The suspects grabbed the pizzas from White and fled. No money was taken and the victim was not injured.

Police Detective Greg Clayton said White saw a truck leaving the scene with its lights off and was able to get a partial license plate number.

Clayton said White saw the truck again several weeks later and was able to give them the full plate number.

"We tracked down the first guy and talked to him," Clayton said. "He led us to the second guy, who led us to the girl."

Clayton said all three were brought in and questioned, and statements they made led to the charges being filed.

Clayton said charges could be downgraded from felonies to misdemeanors, depending on what the District Attorney's Office decides to do.

"There is a lot of latitude (with the charges) since (the suspects) only priors have been alcohol violations as minors," he said. "They could get a reduced count of theft."

Clayton said robbery of pizza delivery persons happens about four or five times a year in San Luis Obispo. It usually happens late at night with multiple suspects, he said.

Clayton added that the suspects usually have been drinking, and that so far, victims have not been seriously injured.

Seybold said college students are mistaken to consider stealing pizzas just a prank.

"They should know we are going to prosecute to the fullest extent of the law," he said. "They've got to learn this is a felony. Do it and you are going to go to jail."

Private consultants aid students, community with housing options

By Allison Gatlin
Staff Writer

Three consultants from the Washington, D.C.-based firm MPC and Associates are meeting with campus and community leaders and with focus groups from both areas to determine student housing preferences and the options available.

The meetings are part of a joint housing study conducted by the city and Cal Poly.

"Our baseline is to start with what students want," said Tom Hier, one of the consultants. "Then we look at options that are feasible financially."

Students' housing preferences are being explored primarily through the focus groups, which are formed on a voluntary basis, based on student interest.

"We strongly, strongly, strongly encourage students to come to the focus groups, to get involved," Hier said. "It's only and hour of their time, and it's really important."

In the study, the consultants will be discussing general types of housing available to students — apartments, single-family residences, suite-style living and dormitories — to find which types are most preferred.

"(We) try to understand what it is that drives students to choose housing," Hier said.

For example, the focus groups will examine areas such as students moving in," Hier said.

"What we are doing is trying to understand the student impact on neighborhoods," he said.

MPC and Associates has examined these "town and gown" issues before. The consulting firm deals primarily in university facilities issues. It has been involved both in studying housing issues and working with institutions to develop the actual housing plans, down to supervising the actual construction, Hier said.

Past projects in California have included work at UC Riverside, in improving university and community relations in housing issues.

The firm also developed low-cost faculty housing at UC Irvine, where high housing costs in the area made it difficult for the university to attract faculty members, Hier said.

Students interested in participating in the focus groups should contact Lorraine Ridgeway in the Office of Student Affairs at 756-1521. Meetings are scheduled for Tuesday and Wednesday, April 21 and 22.

In addition to student preferences, the study will also examine housing from the community's viewpoint. Focus groups with community members will look at "neighbors' responses to

Increasing 'personal power' is focus of new Cal Poly workshop

Program stresses development of high self-esteem

By Alex P. Ramos
Staff Writer

People with high personal power are happy.

They are unafraid of new situations, make friends easily, are eager to experiment with new experiences, are cooperative, imaginative and responsible for their own behavior; they are independent, and above all happy, according to Peer Health Educator Scott Brown.

Brown, a nutritional science senior, and Al Lipper, a graduate student majoring in education, held a workshop on increasing personal power Wednesday night as a "Pride of the Union" week event.

About 35 people attended the workshop given by the two peer health educators from the peer health life-style and wellness team.

"It's a brand new workshop, and we've put a lot of work and effort into it," said Brown.

Lipper said, "Participant feedback is key."

Brown said the workshop is constantly updated from surveys taken after each session.

"This is a constant and developing workshop," said Lipper.

Some of the topics the two discussed were characteristics of low self-esteem.

These include: relying on others for direction, lack of spontaneity, self-isolation, possessive behavior of objects and people, withdrawal or aggression, frustration and initiative.

People with personal power "generally meet new situations with energy and are comfortable with themselves," said Brown.

"Personally powerful people not only have dreams, but act on them," Lipper added.

Lipper told a story of a disabled person who was able to do pull-ups all the way up El Capitan in Yosemite.

If a disabled person can do something like that, "who knows what I'm capable of?" Lipper asked.

A tool for understanding how personal power works was the "poker chip theory." The theory states that growth equals awareness plus risk, and events equal response plus outcome.

The more poker chips you have, the easier it is to deal with difficult situations, said Lipper.

The life-style and wellness team workshop on personal power can be requested by anyone.

"It's a leadership workshop that deals with self-esteem and how to help yourself and others," said Brown.

The next time the two peer health educators will present the workshop will be in early May in the University Union.

Those interested in finding out more about the Cal Poly personal power workshops should call 756-1211.

The fear of the 90's: a need for protection from police

By Glenn Policare

Something is wrong with the Los Angeles Police Department's procedure in apprehending a suspect. Sgt. Stacey C. Koon, officers Laurence M. Powell, Timothy E. Wind and Theodore J. Briseno are on trial for the March 3, 1991 beating of Rodney G. King.

The officers on trial say that they acted according to procedure. Commander Michael Bostic, chairman of the Los Angeles Police Department's use of force review board, testified that there were four opportunities to cuff King. Instead, the officers clubbed King 56 times.

Who makes these procedures? How many other victims of police brutality are on the streets who weren't videotaped? Do the silent victims have to remain nameless? Or will our wonderful law enforcement representatives continue to view them as two-bit, crack dealing Uncle Toms who probably deserved the treatment they got?

Setting the title of police officer aside, what could drive a person to beat another person senseless? Could it be that these heavily armed keepers of the peace have nothing better to do than suck down eclairs and Yuban? I understand that the lawbreakers of today possess quite an arsenal. It would be unfair to put the protectors of the community up against 9mm Uzi's if all they had were pea shooters.

But why do the police take advantage of their power — not just the beatings and scare tactics that go on in South Central Los Angeles, but the needless harassment that goes on in our own backyard?

Steve, a Cal Poly liberal studies junior, spent the weekend in Santa Barbara to enjoy a few shows and down a couple of beers. The walkway leading up to the apartment where he was staying for the weekend served as a bed for him Saturday night. He wasn't hurting anyone, just trying to sleep off the previous night's intake. He was awakened by an uncomfortable tug on his right arm, then his left. He thought that someone was trying to mess with him, but in turned out to be three footpatrol police and two squad cars. He was cuffed, but not stuffed.

"Had a little to much to drink, cowboy?" asked the officer, after he had seen that Steve's place of residence was a small town in the San Joaquin Valley.

The officer found his school I.D. and was even less impressed. "Cal Poly, huh? Typical," he smugly said.

Who was he hurting by sleeping outside? What did he do to deserve this kind of treatment? It's nice to know that they were concerned about his health.

For all they knew, they could have been handcuffing a dead person.

Etaire, a landscape architecture senior, was needlessly harassed by local law enforcement officials for entering and exiting the same house at frequent intervals. They suspected him of dealing drugs and gave him the third degree. He said that his biggest fear that the police were going to plant something on him, just to make a case.

My employer down south told me a story about a Fourth of July party at the Bel Air Bay Club. The police wouldn't let him into the club because he didn't "look" like a member. He asked the boys in blue to fetch his girlfriend, whose parents were prominent members of the club. The police said that they didn't appreciate being told what to do by a worthless longhair. The so called "longhair" went nose to nose with one of the officers and received a gut full of billy club. The battery charged was dismissed because the victim didn't see the officer strike him.

Aside from personal testimonies, these types of incidents are reported all over.

On June 17, 1990, Kevin Bundar, a homeless man from Laguna Beach, was held and kicked by officers for refusing to get down on the ground. The incident was video taped and the case is still pending.

In New York City, five officers stood trial for clubbing and kicking demonstrators in Manhattan's Tompkins Square Park. The August 8, 1988 incident drew floods of scrutiny concerning New York's finest. None of the charged officers were convicted.

If the four L.A.P.D. officers are not convicted of beating King, it will signify to the community and to the nation that it's alright to pulverize a human being — if you wear a badge.

If the police are out there to protect us from societal thugs, who will protect us from the police?

This is another commentary by the literary crime fighting team Glenn and Darren Policare (Darren did the art). Glenn is a journalism senior who gets barreled. His brother Darren likes to go straight.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editorial staff was biased for Burnett

As an agribusiness senior, I have read several editions of Mustang Daily for over a period of four years. At times, I have felt that Mustang Daily has published several editions that promoted unbiased, factual information by which the student population could formulate an opinion.

Unfortunately, there have been more editions where the editorial staff has utilized Mustang Daily as a vehicle of their own personal opinions. From my observations on April 13, the editorial staff has once again utilized Mustang Daily to demonstrate their support for Kristin Burnett, an ASI presidential candidate, in places other than the editorial page. The following are a few of my observations of this edition.

* On page three, on the top right corner of the page appears a headline "Mustang Daily shines at state competition" in bold letters. First off, I would like to congratulate Mustang Daily for doing so well. Second, I would like to ask if this is merely an article to give Mustang Daily deserved recognition, or is it a tool to add credibility to the remaining portion of the paper?

The reason I present this question is the following: 1. Directly following this article on page four, Mustang Daily editorial staff recommends Flynn; 2. The jump (additional text on another page) from the article, CIPA, appears directly left of the Burnett jump on page nine.

able coincidence or a well structured paper to subtly endorse Kristin Burnett.

* On pages six and seven, the platforms for ASI candidates begin. The Burnett jump consists of three columns vs. two columns for her two opponents. This equates to approximately 128 lines of publicity for Burnett vs. 88 lines of publicity for her opponents. Moreover, Bill Schultz's jump appears on the last page on Mustang Daily with an advertisement for Kristin Burnett directly under it.

Once again, I find this either a remarkable coincidence or a well structured paper to subtly endorse Kristin Burnett.

* Finally, the article for Kristin Burnett contains bold letters which allows the reader to easily identify her positions on campus issues. Her opponents, although they do address similar and different issues, do not have this structure within their articles.

Thus the student population must weed through the articles in order to determine the positions of Kristin's opponents.

I realize that this is merely a cosmetic complaint, but it continues to suggest that Mustang Daily has gone beyond the editorial pages to support Kristin.

In summary of this, I feel it is the responsibility of Mustang Daily to present information in an unbiased manner by which the Cal Poly students may formulate their opinions. However, I once again question the journalistic integrity of the editorial staff. If Mustang Daily is deserving of all the award mentioned on page three, then the editions you publish must be predetermined and deliberately structured.

If this is so, then the three points I have illustrated above must not be coincidence, but deliberate attempts by Mustang Daily's editorial staff to go beyond the scope of the editorial to subtly illustrate support for Kristin. As a remedy, I feel it would be appropriate to apologize to the two other presidential candidates and the student community for not allocating equal publicity by which students can use as a source of information for their opinions.

Rec center will ease problems

Rick Johnson lights up when the subject of the new Rec Sports Center is brought up. He speaks louder. His hand motions become more intensified. The whole works.

The Rec Sports coordinator raps with pure excitement about the forthcoming center, scheduled to open in January 1993.

Have you seen the 50-meter pool they dug up, Johnson asks? How about the steel encasing of the gym?

It's surely no wonder why Johnson, and anybody else involved in Rec Sports, gets so enthralled with the construction.

Rec Sports — thriving in popularity — is stricken with a deficiency of facilities. It's old news, I know. Every entity on campus is asking for facilities.

In Rec Sports' case, the need is obviously apparent. Nearly 80 percent of Poly's students, Johnson says, are flingin' frisbees, softballs and everything else imaginable in intramurals or club sports.

The whole recreational thing has really run rampant at Poly. Johnson says this university has the highest participant rate in the CSU system and the third most in the state.

Johnson, and other school administrators, are amazed at the recreational epidemic at Poly. After all, Rec Sports is currently given handouts when it comes to facilities.

Johnson and Bill Ashby, Rec Sports assistant coordinator, will refute that, and say we're lucky to have what we've got.

But as it stands, all recreation events occur on the weekends. Why? Because that's the only time the already limited facilities are available to the mass of rec users, Ashby says.

Getting a chance to play a little jungle ball with some friends in Mott Gym during the week is probably harder than getting a front row seat to the World Series. It simply ain't gonna happen.

Even janitors have to punch the ticket at 4 a.m. to get Mott Gym cleaned up, Johnson says. The rest of the time, it's booked. Physical Education classes have first priority at facilities, the athletics department second and then comes Rec Sports.

With the new rec center, and with an estimated $15 million, Rec Sports will be elevated to second man, behind PE.

That's when Johnson's voice gets slightly louder and his hands once again become more active.

Students, Johnson says, won't no what hit them. Weight rooms ... no wait ... BIG 5,000-square foot weight rooms open nearly the whole day, he says.

No. 3 Mustangs leap into first

By Deanna Wulff
Staff Writer

The No. 3-ranked Cal Poly Mustangs launched themselves into first place Saturday by leaving the Dominguez Hills Toros in the dust twice.

While the Mustangs triumphed over the Toros, 3-2, in the first game and 3-1 in the second, UC Riverside, previously in first, got swept by Pomona making Cal Poly the conference leader.

Cal Poly, 28-10 overall, now leads the CCAA with a 13-5 record.

"The highlight of the first game was the pitching," said Cal Poly Head Coach Steve McFarland.

"Paul Souza pitched 11 2/3 innings and didn't walk a batter the whole game."

With the win, Souza improved his record to 5-2.

"It was my personal best," Souza said. "And it was a great game to win."

In the first game, Dominguez Hills was leading in the top of the ninth inning, 2-1.

But Cal Poly evened out the score to 2-2 when outfielder Rob Neal tripled and scored on a single by Matt Drake.

Finally, in the 12th inning, outfielder Phil James tripled and scored on an error by Dominguez's shortstop.

The error occurred when the shortstop caught a line drive and threw to first to try to double James.

In the second game, the Cal Poly Mustangs' pitching continued to baffle the Toros in their 3-1 victory.

"Eric Hill pitched a complete game, seven innings, giving up only four hits and one run," McFarland said. "We scored on our first run when Dave Dzerski singled and scored on a triple by Ben Boulware."

In the fourth inning, Cal Poly scored its final run after another three-base error by Dominguez and a sacrifice fly by first baseman Mike Oakland.

Los Angeles' singles fall, lose 6-3 to Poly

Mustangs eye national bid after big victory

By Brad Hamilton
Staff Writer

Faced with a must-win situation against No. 9-ranked Cal State Los Angeles, the No. 7-ranked Mustangs accepted the extra pressure Thursday and used the adrenaline to win the match, 6-3.

Cal Poly Head Coach Chris Eppright said both teams were scrapping for the fourth seed in the West and, simultaneously, the eighth and last seed in the NCAA Division II National Championships.

"This was a big win for us," Eppright said. "They (Los Angeles) are such a talented team, and they were confident too."

"They just beat the No. 1-ranked team (Cal Poly Pomona) in the country. This was their season too. If they beat us, they would go (to the nationals)."

The Mustangs gripped a 4-2 lead after the singles matches. The top two seeds suffered the losses.

Cal Poly's top-seeded Erin Green, a senior ranked No. 21 in the nation, lost to Veronica Pasley, 6-3, 6-1.

No. 2-seeded Alison Lean, another senior and No. 24 in the nation, lost to Melinda Phillips, 7-6, 5-7, 6-4.

Lean owned the first set, 5-2 before allowing Phillips to win five straight games for the victory.

"I had played her last time and lost in three sets," Lean said. "I knew she was a serve-and-volleyer. I had to keep the ball deep and try to stay in the match."

Phillips' momentum from the first set carried into the first three games of the second set. She allowed Lean only four points during the three games.

However, Lean found her groundstroke and baffled Phillips with a barrage of cross-court and down-the-line passes. Lean won the next seven out of nine games and took the set 7-5.

"I felt I had to win my match if we were going to win today," Lean said. "I just had to turn things around because I was being real hard on myself and negative the first three games. I just tried to be positive, and it helped."

In game 10 of the third set, Lean faced match point twice. On the first match point, she smashed a backhand past Phillips untouched. On the second match point, though, Lean failed to return a volley that bounced a foot out of her reach.

The first of the Mustangs' four victories came from fourth-seeded Sheri Holmes, 6-2, 6-1.

"Sheri got us off to a quick start," Eppright said. "She won in 40 minutes. That helped us; it gave everyone a little boost."

Another Mustang victory came from No. 6-seeded Alissa Bailey, 6-4, 7-6. No. 5-seeded Beth Reed won her match, 6-2, 3-6, 6-1.

The fourth and final singles victory was achieved by No. 3-seeded Julie Ciancio. The 28-ranked Ciancio, with a 17-4 record, used power and consistency to beat Ephel Olivarez 3-6, 6-3, 6-1.

"It was a tough match," Ciancio said. "The first set I was not playing well at all. The second set I got back into it, and the third set I couldn't really miss. I was hitting a lot of winners," she said.

"She (Olivarez) is so consistent. You either have to hit winners or stay out there for four hours. Last time we played we had a tough match too. It went three sets."

No surprise, Poly ousts Pomona

By Romina Vitols
Staff Writer

The Cal Poly men's tennis team rolled over its sibling rival, Cal Poly Pomona, in a repeat performance of their last meeting.

The 7-2 victory came as no surprise to Cal Poly Head Coach Chris Eppright, who has coached his team to a No. 2 ranking in the nation.

"We beat them 8-1 last time," Eppright said. "They've got a good line-up, but they sort of thin out at the bottom."

And thin out they did. The

Poly, 'Runners field another split

By Carol Boosembark
Staff Writer

In a conference clash Saturday, the No. 14-ranked Cal Poly softball team again split a doubleheader with the No. 1-ranked Bakersfield Roadrunners.

Just nine days ago, the two California Collegiate Athletic Association foes met at Cal Poly with a similar result — each team winning and losing one.

During the first game, the Mustangs were soundly defeated by the Roadrunners, 11-0.

After the crushing loss, the Mustangs came back with some strong pitching to overpower Bakersfield, 2-0.

Poly's starting pitcher Julie Rome registered the shutout after pitching all seven innings.

Rome struck out four players and gave up only four hits.

"Julie Rome pitched a great game," said Poly pitcher Ruth Henry. Saturday's win brings Rome's record to

Coaches get quick look at new talent

By Ken Kaplan
Staff Writer

The bright sun shines down on the Mustang Stadium football field as the crack of shoulder pads colliding into each other echoes off the empty bleachers.

The scene is reminiscent of the long dog-days of September and the beginning of another season for the Mustang football team.

But it's not September. It's mid-April, and football fever is in the air as the Mustangs, fitted in full uniforms, conduct spring practice sessions.

"Spring football is a time to refine skills and technique," said Lyle Setencich, Cal Poly head football coach. It's a time to evaluate talent, he said.

Spring football practice at Cal Poly consists of 10 days of practice in pads and another three days in shorts, Setencich said. This is less than the rules imposed by the NCAA of a maximum of 15 days of spring practice, 10 of those days in pads.

Brett Barnes, a 21-year-old broadcast journalism senior and Mustang wide receiver, said he is excited about spring football practice. Barnes will try to earn a starting spot on the offensive unit this spring.

"Spring is a good time to impress the coaches," Barnes said.

Ryan Gregg, a recreation administration junior, said spring practice is tough.

The 20-year-old Mustang tailback said he hopes spring practice will further improve his playing skills, which would ultimately contribute to the overall team goal of reaching the playoffs.

Setencich said the team has several holes to fill that were caused by the departure of graduating seniors like standout defensive lineman Eric Alexander.

"There will be a new quarterback," Setencich said. Charles Hammond, who has been the backup quarterback for two years, is the heir-apparent for the starting job, but it is too soon to tell for sure, he said.

Setencich said he feels the when the No. 2-seeded doubles team, Green and Lean, won 6-0, 6-4.

The No. 3-seeded doubles team, Holmes and Bailey, won 6-2, 6-2. The top-seeded team, Ciancio and Reed, lost 6-4, 6-3.

"This was a tough (overall) win," Ciancio said. "They beat Pomona 5-4, so we were a little nervous because we just lost to Pomona 9-0."

The win improved the Mustangs overall record to 11-6 and their conference record to 5-1. In addition, the win puts the Mustangs in control of their own destiny.

"I would be surprised," Ep-pright said about the Mustangs possibility of being excluded from the tournament. "There would be an investigation if we don't (receive an invitation.)"

The Mustangs have matches remaining against at No. 12-ranked Cal State Bakersfield Tuesday.

For the final match they host top-ranked Pomona Wednesday at 11 a.m.

A victory over Bakersfield nearly assures the Mustangs entry into the nationals.

Cal Poly team sliced through its opponents, chalking-up all but one of its wins in straight sets.

The team's two losses came from No. 1-seed Max Allman and No. 3-seed Marc Ollivier, who was out due to a foot injury.

Allman, who's ranked No. 5 nationally, fell to Pomona's Steve Kobold after a three-set struggle.

"Pomona's No. 1 player has been hitting really well lately," Ollivier said, "and he played really well today."

In other doubles action, the No. 2 seeds Ricardo Reyes and Mark Nielsen defeated their opponents, 6-4, 7-5.

Nielsen and Reyes are ranked No. 10 nationally, an accomplishment which Ep-pright said is "phenomenal for a No. 2 team."

The Allman/Ollivier match-up is No. 1 in the nation.

"Allman's loss in singles was a bit of an upset," Ep-pright said, "but other than that it was kind of a blow-out."

Cal Poly's men tennis team netted another victory over Pomona.

Poly runs into tough competition at meets

By David Voros
Staff Writer

The Cal Poly women's track and field team traveled in opposite directions on Saturday.

Several runners headed south to a meet at Mt. San Antonio College, while the rest of the team went to the Stanford Collegiate Meet in Palo Alto.

The Mt. SAC meet, which traditionally attracts some of the premier runners in the world, was larger than usual due to the upcoming summer Olympics.

Cal Poly still ran some fast times in the 1,500, 3,000 and 10,000 meters.

In the 1,500 meters, Poly's Kristina Hand placed third with a personal best time of 4:21.5.

Not even a large field of 44 runners in 3,000 meters could slow down Hand. There, she ran a personal best of 9:18.4, for 17th place. This was the fastest time in Division II this year and the fourth fastest time in Cal Poly history.

In the 10,000 meters, junior Traci Leichter placed 11th with a time of 35:33.9. The performance automatically qualified her for nationals and was also the fastest time in Division II this season.

"It was a breakthrough race for me," Leichter said. "I performed where I knew I should be. It was a (race) setup for me."

At Stanford, wind and hot weather slowed down running times and affected field events.

Poly's Jennifer Lacovara led start to finish in the 3,000 meters to win with a time of 9:50.48, her personal best by four seconds.

Poly Assistant Coach Andy Frokjer said Lacovara ran well

Five more Mustangs grab national qualifying marks

By Edwin Bill
Staff Writer

The Cal Poly men's track team is beginning to reach peak performance at just the right time of year.

With only three weeks to go before the California Collegiate Athletic Association Championships, the Mustangs captured five national provisional qualifying marks at the Pomona Pitzer Invitational Friday.

"We're right on target for the conference championships," said Cal Poly Head Coach Tom Henderson.

He called the Mustangs' performance at the Pomona meet, "... an obvious confidence builder. It was probably the best sprint and hurdles meet we've had all year."

Junior Chris Edwards led the Mustang charge.

He won the 110-meter high hurdles in 14.63 seconds, earning him a potential qualifying spot for the national championships in May.

"We're right on target for the conference championships."

Tom Henderson,
Poly track coach

Edwards' time is also the sixth fastest in Cal Poly history for the event. Freshman Jack Bellamy took third in the 200-meter sprint in 21.55.

That mark is also a national qualifier, which goes along with the 100-meter provisional time Bellamy earned two weeks ago at the Fresno Relays.

Bellamy teamed up with Jerry Edwards, Ryan Katri and Shan Forehand to win the mile relay in 3:15.87.

That performance was also a potential national qualifier.

Henderson said that was the fastest mile relay the quartet has run this year by more than three seconds.

Other Mustang runners who excelled included freshman Rob Landtiser, who won his section of the intermediate hurdles with another provisional national qualifying time of 54.13.

Henderson said that is the second best time in the CCAA this year.

Senior hurdler Ernie Billing won his section of the same event in 56.30, his best performance of the year.

In the field events, junior Chris Carter won the shot put with a throw of 53 feet, 6 inches.

Aron Maddiex leaped 6-10 in the high jump, his lifetime best and 10th on the Cal Poly all-time list.

Henderson sent the pole vaulters Saturday to another Southern California meet, the Mt. SAC Relays.

Defending national champion Tony Castiglioni won overall with 16-10 1/2 effort, a season best for him.

Freshman David Hunley scored a lifetime best with a vault of 15-5.

Cheerleader squad begins recruitment

By Romina Vitols
Staff Writer

Cal Poly's cheerleader squad is looking for a few good women — and men.

Tryouts for 1992-93 cheerleaders and yell leaders take place next weekend. Coach Tom Jackson, Jr. encourages men, as well as women, to try out.

Cailin Kennedy, last year's captain of the football squad agrees.

"We'd like to recruit more men to help out in partner stunts," Kennedy said.

More importantly, Jackson said, they're looking for enthusiastic, outgoing students who want to support athletics through cheerleading.

"Last quarter 5,000-plus students voted in the opportunity to go to Division I," Jackson said, "and consequently our cheerleader squads will be getting more visibility."

The number of cheerleaders and yell leaders selected varies from year to year, depending upon the talent and size of the turnout, he added.

There are two cheer squads each year, one for football and one for men's basketball. Kennedy said she hopes this year's squads will also be able to cheer at women's basketball games.

An informational meeting will be held Friday, April 24, in Crandall Gym from 4 to 6 p.m. There will be a clinic Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon in Mott Gym, where newcomers will be taught routines. Official tryouts will be held Sunday at 9 a.m. in Mott Gym.

"It's a lot of fun, and I encourage anyone who is even slightly interested to call and ask any questions they might have," Kennedy said.

For more information, contact Kennedy at 549-0255, or Jackson at 756-5600.

These are difficult times," Davis said. "But, I wouldn't be standing here tonight if I didn't think I could change the world."

She then encouraged everyone to come together to solve the world's problems.

"We need to develop solidarity, which goes across cultures," said Davis. "We should educate ourselves and take the initiative."

She ended with a unifying statement that began the march around campus.

"We must stand together, fight together and take back the night together," Davis said.

At that point, the protesters lit nearly 50 candles and began their march across campus. They stopped at sites where incidents of violence against women had occurred.

At each site, the type of assault was described and a wooden cross symbolizing a woman was nailed into the ground.

As the protesters walked between sites, they shouted various chants, from "Women unite, take back the night," to "However we dress, wherever we go, yes means yes, no means no."

At several of the stops people expressed their own experiences and emotions from the past.

In front of Tenaya Hall, Alice O'Kieffe, an English senior, who was raped in her dorm room her freshman year, spoke.

"This is my last quarter on campus and to me this brings it all back in a cycle," O'Kieffe said. "My second quarter here was when I was attacked, and this night is kind of my final statement."

Still others reflected upon more recent injustices and crimes of hate.

In front of the Science building and near the Sandwich Plant, Coleman spoke of a student that was verbally harassed last week.

"She was called a nigger by a student during a class," said Coleman.

Right now, the conflict is in the process of being handled, Coleman said.

The evening ended with a return to the amphitheater and a final statement by Mary Storey, the president of the Take Back the Night club and a history senior.

"If you are not part of the solution, you are part of the problem," Storey said. "You can make a difference."

500-year anniversary of Columbus' invasion of America."

In her speech Davis reminded the audience of America's sordid past.

"There are so many things in our history that we work very hard to forget," Davis said.

Those of us who have been assaulted and molested, we recoil at those memories of terror, and we refuse to remember the moments of unimaginable cruelty inflicted," she said.

"But tonight we are reminded, and we are compelled to remember and empathize," she continued. "And we are discovering the possibilities of solidarity."

Davis said solidarity implies bonds of togetherness. It is empathy for struggle based on equality, she said.

She further emphasized the need for unity in her concluding statement.

"We must stand together, fight together and take back the night together," she said.

Following her speech and the march, she attended a reception held in the Sandwich Plant by Delta Sigma Theta sorority.

She said she felt the march went very well.

"I think it was wonderful and powerful," Davis said. "We must remember the untold number of women that have been assaulted."

Davis also spoke of her other activities, beyond giving speeches and protesting.

She teaches undergraduate and graduate classes in the history of consciousness at UC Santa Cruz.

"It is a very broad, multi-disciplinary program involving history, philosophy and psychology," she said.

In addition to teaching, Davis is also involved in movements to prevent repression.

"I do quite a lot of lecturing to raise money for groups like the National Alliance Against Racist and Political Repression," she said. "And I am also a member of Bay Area Unified Against Genocide."

Her future plans are to continue teaching at UC Santa Cruz and to stay politically active.

his reserved rental van, he discovered a surprise in the back of the vehicle.

"My traveling companions and I found a pair of high heels and some vomit in the back-seat," he said.

"Sigma Chi callously managed to manipulate the noble goals of philanthropy and the Special Olympics organization for their own juvenile, drunken self-interest," he said.

Vince Zuanich, a member of Sigma Chi, said Enterprise rented the vehicles to Sigma Chi for half price with the understanding that the fraternity would use them specifically for Special Olympics and that Sigma Chi would place an advertisement for Enterprise Rent-A-Car in their Derby Days brochure.

Zuanich, who took part in the renting of the vehicles, said that he told Enterprise Rent-A-Car what the vans were to be used for.

"Another fraternity member and I told the company that we were renting a van for Derby Days to benefit the Special Olympics," Zuanich said.

Kevin Guthrie, president of Sigma Chi, said the fraternity had paid a special cleanup fee for possible damages — such as the one that occurred.

Guthrie also noted that the fraternity took many precautions concerning the party in Pismo Beach.

"We checked I.D. at the (Pismo Veterans Hall), we hired security and we had the Pismo police do a walk-through," he said.

He also noted that the rental of the vans was supposed to be a good thing, to transport people and prevent them from drinking and driving.

"We're deeply sorry we made this mistake," he said. "But we're pleased that we helped the people involved in Derby Days get home safely."

bitterly oppose a guerrilla leader who controls the area surrounding Kabul, the capital.

The dispute raised fears of a bloody showdown between rival rebel groups in the city of 1.5 million people.

Ahmed Shah Masood, whose guerrilla forces ring Kabul, said he plans to form his own government in the city.

Masood, who masterminded the swift offensive that led to President Najibullah's fall Thursday, held talks with Foreign Minister Abdul Wakil outside Kabul on Friday and Saturday.

Masood is known for his fierce resistance during the nine-year Soviet occupation that ended in 1989. His Jamiat-e-Islami faction is considered one of the best organized rebel groups.

A non-Communist official, Abdul Rahim Hatif, took over as acting president Sunday. Najibullah has been in hiding since Thursday.

Hatif, who was one of four vice presidents, was never a member of Najibullah's Communist-style ruling party and was not associated with its brutal past. Diplomatic sources said they hoped his appointment would pave the way for broader talks between the government and the mujahedeen, or Islamic holy warriors.

The civil war — once a major proxy battle between Washington and Moscow — has left 2 million dead and forced more than 5 million to flee their homes.

There was little resistance Sunday as the mujahedeen and rebellious troops claimed control of at least five provinces.

the percentage increases could be misleading because they translated into only marginal rises in crime rates.

The Justice Department noted that its estimate of the total number of crimes and attempted crimes last year — 35 million — was well below the 41.4 million of 1981. The estimates by the Bureau of Justice Statistics have shown a gradual decline in crime since its annual National Crime Survey was begun in 1973.

Still, the 6.4 million total completed and attempted violent crimes was the third highest since 1973.

The bureau's annual National Crime Survey estimated there were 31.3 attempted or completed violent crimes per 1,000 people last year. That's up from 29.6 per 1,000 in 1990, but it's well below the record rate of 35.3 per 1,000 in 1981. These offenses include rape, robbery and assault, but not murder.

As for rapes and attempted rapes, there were 207,610 in 1991, up 59 percent from 130,260 the previous year. The rate of such assaults was 1 per 1,000, compared with 0.6 per 1,000 the previous year. Rapes and attempted rapes had occurred at or near the rate of 1 per 1,000 people during 12 of the last 18 years.

The increase in the estimated number of rapes and attempted rapes was considered statistically significant. However, department spokesman Stu Smith said the increase in the rate was well within the sample's margin of error.

The 59 percent increase in rape crimes "looks dramatic" because "you are dealing with a small number to start with," said Justice Department statistician Patsy Klaus.

"We don't know if it's a trend," she said. "If we are to continue to get these numbers over the years, it would be of concern."

Criminologists consider the survey of victims a more reliable barometer of crime than the FBI's Uniformed Crime Report because it includes incidents not reported to police.

The FBI statistics, expected to be released in preliminary form next week, are based on reports of crime to local police. The Justice Department estimates that 37 percent of all crimes and 49 percent of violent offenses are not reported to police.

Congress continues work on striker replacement bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — It played in Peoria for Caterpillar, and now it's being played out again in Congress: an election-year struggle over the right of businesses to hire permanent replacements for striking workers.

"The threat of strike replacements was a major factor in causing the union to throw in the towel" in the recent five-month United Auto Workers strike at Caterpillar plants in Peoria and elsewhere in Illinois, argues Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, a leader in the Senate effort to ban permanent replacements.

There seems little doubt. Within days after the company advertised for replacements, 12,600 UAW workers went back to their jobs.

It's a law that has been on the books since 1938. But it was used sparingly until 1981, when President Reagan fired striking government air traffic controllers and replaced them permanently.

Since then, unions complain that increasing numbers of corporations have turned to the tactic in strikes — Greyhound and Eastern Airlines among them.

The bill would allow companies to hire temporary replacements, but business says such a move is usually impractical.

According to a study last year by Congress' General Accounting Office, companies threatened to hire permanent replacements in about one-third of all strikes. But they actually hired new workers in 17 percent of the walkouts, and permanently replaced just 4 percent of their striking employees.

"It is a bedrock issue to us," says Barbara Warden, a congressional lobbyist for UAW.

It's also an issue that's caught up in election-year politics.

The House approved the ban last year and Senate Democrats are within striking distance of the 60 votes needed to pass it over a filibuster. But President Bush has threatened a veto, and neither the House nor the Senate is expected to be able to override.

And with Democratic presidential front-runner Bill Clinton as well as labor's allies in Congress supporting the bill, the prospect is for legislative stalemate — and political maneuvering.

Democrats and labor leaders say forcing Bush to veto the measure would hurt him in November by adding to a list of pro-worker bills he has opposed, including extended unemployment benefits, civil rights and family leave. Democrats hope the rejection of each bill will pull so-called Reagan Democrats — many of whom are union members — back into the Democratic fold,

"This would very definitely be brought up in the election by the unions, not only against the president but against Republicans who voted that way," promises lobbyist Jack Sheehan of the United Steelworkers of America.

For their part, Republicans would like to prevent Bush from having to cast a veto.

But they say the fight will re-label Democrats as the liberal party of special interests, a tag that hurt them in Walter Mondale's 1984 presidential campaign.

"This is an extreme bill," says Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, adding that the measure shows that Democrats' "idea of an economic recovery plan is more plant closings, more strikes."

Supporters contend that unless companies are prevented from permanently replacing strikers, strikes become a meaningless tool.

But opponents counter that if strikers can't be replaced, companies could be forced out of business by unions with exorbitant demands.

"The right to strike doesn't exist in a vacuum, without risk or consequence," said Peter Lunnier, employee relations director with the National Association of Manufacturers.

"It was never intended that collective bargaining should be one-sided, he said."

STATE

homeless people in Alameda County and another 170,000 people receiving aid.

Similar drives have been organized in several states at the urging of the National Coalition of the Homeless and the Community for Creative Nonviolence.

In Alameda County, 17 community organizations are involved.

"People have been numbed repeatedly over the years, and they overwhelmingly feel they can't make a difference," said Zenobia Embry-Nimmer, ESN executive director. "We need to show them they can."

The nonprofit organizations involved in the drive don't advocate any political points of view, but concentrate on the importance of voting.

"We tell people that it's not about who's on the ballot, it's what's on the ballot," Haven said. "You can say your vote doesn't count, but it does when it's combined with everyone else's."

In a recent voting drive, 34-year-old Lawrence Marshall was a convert. "You bet I'll register to vote," the homeless man told the Oakland Tribune in a story published Sunday.

"I've been homeless since I got laid off as a painter eight months ago, and I can see how things need to change," he said. "There are a lot of things going on that we need to speak out on — cuts in housing, medical care, and so on."

But 60-year-old Dearwood McCoin, a retired merchant marine, said he had given up trying to make a difference.

"I live in one of these cheap hotels here, and I will after the election," he said with a sigh.

judgment based in their beliefs.

All people also deserve the right to be as happy as they can be. Homosexuals just have different sexual preferences than heterosexuals. People have the right to their own feelings. It is very scary to be frightened by something that is different. Being confused and frightened by something you are not used to doesn't make you a bad person. The main thing is that people deserve the right to be different.

It would be a very scary world if just because you were different or had different opinions, you were alienated by the people around you. Unfortunately, this world can be very scary, and this does happen a lot. It is up to everyone to stop this from happening.

If a friend tells you that he is a homosexual, he doesn't need to hear that his life-style is wrong and harmful. Also, if a friend tells you that he is homophobic, he doesn't need you to tell him what a jerk he is. Friends don't need lectures or angry comments. Friends need understanding and caring.

Chances are you can never get everyone around you to believe all the things that you believe. If you exclude everyone around you who doesn't have the same opinions as you do, you are going to be a very lonely person.

Why take the energy to argue about who's right and who's wrong? If everyone would just put difference aside and try to understand and accept each other, this energy could be used for something more productive. We all need people around who can love and understand us despite all the difference we might have.
