Student sued after posting DVD code

By Larissa Van Beurden

MUSTANG DAILY STAFF WRITER

A 16-year-old Norwegian boy and a Cal Poly student have been caught trying to sneak through a cyber loophole.

Jon Johansen of Norway was arrested Monday for publishing a code that overrides the DVD Content Scrambling System. His code allows DVD playback on computers running the Linux operating system. DVD scrambling systems are meant to protect entertainment industries' products from downloading.

Cal Poly computer science sophomore John Kew is being sued for posting a copy of Johansen's code on his own Web site.

Kew posted the code that bypasses copy-protected encryption of DVDs in November. A few days after Christmas, he learned that attorneys for the nonprofit DVD Copy Control Association (CCA) discovered his site. He then found out he was on the attorneys' list of people they planned to sue. Kew already has attended a preliminary hearing.

Johansen is being charged with copyright infringement, which carries fines and prison terms up to two years in Norway.

Johansen has denied claims that he broke the copyright protection. He said he made the program in order to view DVDs on his Linux. By doing this, he said the film industry no longer has a monopoly on making DVD players.

Kew said he knew the Motion Picture Association of America was trying to stop the code from being dis-

Cal Poly marks start of Women's History Month

By Danielle Samaniego

MUSTANG DAILY STAFF WRITER

Cal Poly's Women's Programs kicked off its 18th Annual Women's History Month Monday with a reception featuring poetry reading, music and refreshments in the University Union.

Modern languages and literatures professor Gloria Velasquez performed poetry from her published works "I Used to be a Superwoman" and latest release "Xicana on the Run." She also performed songs off her soon-to-be released "Superwoman" CD.

"Her total performance is just incredibly inspiring to me," said Rachel Raymond, student coordinator of Women's History Month. "Her ability to capture the Chicano woman's experiences is something that I think is profound."

Republicans' campaign torn from walls

Custodians remove fliers bashing supervisor candidate David Blakely

By Kimberly Tahsuda

MUSTANG DAILY STAFF WRITER

Some members of the College Republicans club posted 500 to 600 fliers bashing David Blakely around campus Monday morning. The posters were torn down after an angry professor complained to custodians.

The fliers contained a Mustang Daily editorial by political science junior Tamas Simon. The editorial ran on Feb. 3 and addressed a legal debate centered on Blakely, a San Luis Obispo County District 5 supervisor candidate.

"I think it is real unfortunate that some people feel that the political process needs to operate this way," Blakely said.

Simon is the president of the College Republicans.

"One of my goals is to have informed voters," Simon said. "The fliers contained relevant issues that need to be addressed. I want to inform students about who they would or would not be voting for."

Simon said the fliers were not promoted by the College Republicans.

"I posted the fliers with some friends," Simon said. "Some were members, and some were just helping me. This was on our own personal time."

Simon said he received opposition throughout the day and while posting the fliers Monday morning.

"A professor in a lab coat and goggles came screaming," Simon said.

John Merriam has been retired from the agricultural engineering department for 20 years. While at Cal Poly, he received the first Outstanding Teacher of the Year. Since his retirement, Merriam has been an irrigation specialist. He has overseen projects in such places as Egypt, Pakistan and India.

First outstanding teacher continues legacy

By Monica McHugh

MUSTANG DAILY STAFF WRITER

After 20 years of retirement, Cal Poly's agricultural engineering department's first Outstanding Teacher of the Year continues his tradition of fine work.

John L. Merriam is an irrigation specialist interested in designing plans that benefit the farmer as well as irrigation districts.

"Farmers come first," Merriam said. "You need to serve the client."

Since his retirement, he has designed and overseen construction of irrigation projects in such places as Egypt, Pakistan, Sri Lanka and India. These projects make it possible for the farmer to control water delivery from a flexible supply.

Such systems entail reservoirs and pipelines that go directly to the farm. This gives power to the farmer, allowing him to decide how much water he would like to use and when.

Currently, most irrigation systems are based on canals. In a canal system, the farmer has to contact the irrigation department and order a certain amount of water. This water can take up two days to arrive. Once it arrives, it all must be taken at fixed rates; even if it's not all needed.

Programs adviser. Together they worked on organizing this month's events to reflect different aspects of the working woman.

"The cultural theme is to showcase the diversity of women," Raymond said. "We just want to give the full picture."

Velasquez dedicated her performance to working-class women of color like her own mother and other women who came from similar humble backgrounds.

Kelley said she wants to give students an opportunity to learn more about women within the work force. This month's events should display that, she said.

"We wanted to give them a broad spectrum of areas to look at," she said. "It gives them an opportunity to keep an open mind to other things (for women) that are out there."

Among the events scheduled for this month are women in graphic design, a feminist film festival and keynote speaker Dr. Bertice Berry, an award-winning lecturer and comedian. Berry will speak in honor of the Women's Celebration and Black History Month.

"You can look forward to a nice mixture of comedy and her life experiences," Raymond said. "It will be like a motivational speech."

Berry is scheduled to speak at Chumash Auditorium this Wednesday from 7 to 9 p.m. For more information regarding any upcoming events, contact Women's Programs at 756-2600.

services technician Megan Boragine said. Simon failed to obtain the form.

"If they are consistent with school policies and regulations, the fliers have every right to be up," Blakely said.

College Republican fliers are often torn down, Simon said.

"It's funny how our sandwich boards are stolen and our fliers are always torn down," Simon said. "Is that what we get for telling the truth?"

Blakely would not respond in any way to the fliers.

"I plan to focus on the issues that are important in this campaign," Blakely said. "I think by just responding to that stuff gives it credibility."

"I have received support from the Deputy Sheriffs Association of San Luis Obispo County and the endorsement of the California Correctional Peace Officer Association," Blakely said. "If those allegations had very much merit, then I doubt that the law enforcement agencies would be supporting me the way they are."

Simon said that tearing down the fliers is a First-Amendment issue.

"Our fliers being torn down is an obvious infringement on our freedom of speech," Simon said.

"I think this is a sign of a desperate campaign," Blakely said.

"For many people, surface irrigation is an old-fashioned idea," Merriam said. "Its use is contrary to what many salesmen of trickle systems say."

He said there is a lack of understanding of the necessity of adequate maintenance and education. This has led to a lack of adequate operation on many of the international projects Merriam has constructed.

The largest of Merriam's designs, a 2,500-acre irrigation project in India, was finished in 1992. It has been poorly operated since its construction. With support from Cal Poly through the Fund for Furthering Flexible Irrigation and the Merriam Irrigation Education Foundation, Merriam and graduate Beau Freeman made several trips to India last year to get the project reestablished as originally planned.

"Our main objective was education and rehabilitation," Merriam said.

The government was not able to act fast enough to ensure that Merriam's concept of pipelines and a flexible supply would be used this year. He hopes that the project will be fully operating this next season.

Merriam's design in Pakistan is the only project that is fully functional. Merriam's plan for flexible farmer-controlled irrigation permitted increased yield production up to 50 percent.

While the Sri Lanka project was in use, yields increased by an average of 20 percent.

"Flexible supply does not use more water but permits better management," Merriam said. "It actually uses less water."

Today, Merriam is working on passing his ideas to younger generations.

"I've got the respect of a lot of people and now I'm trying to pass it on to younger people to carry on the program," Merriam said.

tributed, but posted it anyway.

In mid-December, the CCA was formed. Kew said its only job seems to be maintaining the MPAA's control over DVD use.

"The MPAA is afraid of losing control," he said. "And they are."

Kew was surprised Monday when he learned of Johansen's arrest.

"He was brought in for questioning a couple of weeks ago," Kew said. "They brought him in for eight hours and took away all of his computer stuff, including his cell phone."

Kew believes Johansen should not have been arrested.

"I don't even own a DVD player," Kew said. "But people should have the ability to have the codes."

The codes can only be used on players the DVD is coded for. A DVD coded for North America cannot play on a player anywhere else in the world.

Kew and other code-posters said it would be more difficult to copy a DVD than to just buy one. The codes instead are for people who want to view DVDs on all players.

Kew said Johansen was not the person who cracked the code. He said two German men first cracked the code, but he isn't sure if anyone knows who they are.

"If (Johansen) does know who the German men are, he's not telling anyone," he said.

Johansen's father was also charged with copyright infringement for operating the domain where his son first posted the code.

Kew has been in touch with other people who are being sued for posting the code on their sites.

"The lawyers made a big mistake when they sent the initial hearing letter to us," he said. "They carbon-copied the letter, so we got everybody else's addresses."

Kew said he and the other defendants are being sued for attorney's fees and they must remove the code from their sites.

The nonprofit Electronic Frontiers Foundation (EFF) has agreed to pay for a lawyer and pay all fines for Kew and other defendants. The EFF is a San Francisco-based organization that helps protect civil liberties in new electronic media.

"(CCA) has nine lawyers from New York," he said. "The Electronic Frontiers Foundation has been a lifesaver."

Kew is still having fund-raisers. He is trying to set up a booth at Farmers Market on Thursday, but if he can't, he will still be downtown passing out fliers.

Peer health team seeks members

By Teresa Wilson

MUSTANG DAILY STAFF WRITER

Cal Poly's Peer Health Education is looking for a few good men and women to join its teams for the 2000-2001 year.

Peer Health educators, as they are called, provide support, education, information and referral services free of charge to students, staff and faculty on three teams:

Nutrition Team; TLC (Thoughtful Lifestyle Choices), which is comprised of the former AOD (Alcohol and Other Drugs) Team and the former Wellness Team; and EROS (Educational Resources On Sexuality).

The Peer Health program has been at Cal Poly for 12 years and has anywhere from 12 to 15 members per team.

For EROS team coordinator Ellie Downing, improving her public speaking skills has been one of the best aspects of being on the team.

"It's a good way to get involved in the school. It's really fun when you get to help people your own age," Downing said.

Peer Health educators also have the opportunity to earn up to 12 units during their four-quarter commitment. For EROS and TLC, the units are earned through PSY 251, organizational leadership. The first (spring) quarter consists of a weekly class in the basics of the methods used in the Peer Health program.

The following three quarters, educators register for PSY 251 again and credit is given for participating in the group activities lab. This includes implementing, creating and delivering workshops, events and one-on-one counseling related to the team. PSY 251 is a credit/no credit class.

Except for the Nutrition Team, Peer Health educators can come from all majors.

The Nutrition Team is open only to nutrition majors. Like the other teams, Nutrition educators attend PSY 251 during the first quarter, but the following three quarters are required to enroll in FSN 440, a food science internship program.

This program includes one hour each week for the team business meeting, an hour weekly for lecture, an hour weekly for the Nutrition Network and bulletin board project at the Lighthouse, and two hours weekly for counseling hours.

The Nutrition Team also has prerequisites not required of the other teams. Students applying as a Nutrition Team educator must have already completed FSN 328/329, advanced nutrition I and II, and must have concurrent enrollment in FSN 415, methods of teaching nutrition, while participating in the Peer Health program.

Nutrition senior Kristy Long is on the Nutrition Team and said during an average week she spends eight to 12 hours on team-related activities while taking 18 units this quarter

Peer Health educators have been posting signs and banners around campus to promote Love Carefully Week.

(including three units for Peer Health).

"It's an opportunity to actually apply what was learned," Long said.

In addition to programs in classes and residence halls, the Nutrition Team also participates in activities in and around the community. The team is currently planning a workshop for Paulding Middle School in conjunction with the school's PE class. The workshop will consist of five stations that aim to promote nutrition awareness to the students.

Promoting awareness is the main goal of Peer Health. Educators are able to interact with the campus community and give advice on a variety of health-related issues.

"I have thought about doing private-practice counseling, and this gives me practice working one-on-one with people," Long said. "I am also interested in public health and doing different things in the community. Increasing awareness in the public is really what public health is all about."

The team also does workshops on issues like communication, relationships, time management, stress management and wellness.

Gargi Parikh, a nutrition senior, is in her third quarter on TLC.

"It sounded like a really fun, interesting thing to do," Parikh said. "I'm a nutrition major, and I'm interested in public health so this just seemed like the perfect thing to do."

EROS will be promoting Love Carefully Week in conjunction with National Condom Week, today through Monday.

"We are promoting having safe sex, if sex is what you choose to do, and making sure you remember about your partners and all the different stuff that can happen if you're having unprotected sex," Marissa Desatoff, kinesiology junior and EROS member, said.

Applications for all of the teams are available at the Peer Health Education office in the basement of the Health Center and can be turned in to Rojean Dominguez, director of health education. The deadline for applying is Feb. 11.

Heart-healthy dinner tips

Katy Kinninger

Valentine's Day is coming up, and the majority of couples want a nice romantic dinner. Here are some easy low-fat menu tips on how to have a heart healthy romantic dinner.

- To avoid extra fat or calories in your condiments, ask for Italian dressing or low-cal dressings and mayonnaise, sour cream or guacamole on the side, so you can choose your own amounts.

- Choose grilled, broiled or steamed meats and vegetables over fried food.

- When selecting a pasta dish, choose a marinara sauce instead of a cream-based sauce.

When at a restaurant, don't be afraid to ask about their menu or if they offer low-fat versions of entrees. Your server should be able to offer these options to you.

If you feel that you have chosen a balanced meal and you want to splurge on dessert, then go for it, but it might be best to share it! Many restaurants will offer dessert to go; just ask, and you can take it to a romantic place and watch the sunset.

Remember to enjoy your food at a leisurely pace and savor each bite. Take advantage of being waited on!

Katy Kinninger is a nutritional science senior who writes a weekly column for Your Body.

Make 'In God we trust' have significance

Have you ever actually read the coins that jingle in your pocket? Why do they say, "In God we trust?" Surely the United States of America is a nation founded upon the idea of separation of church and state. Many take this idea way too far, even to the extent of using it as a reason why the phrase "In God we trust" must be taken off of our coins. But does our nation really trust in God? Do you trust in God?

So, what does it mean to trust God? It means giving up everything and denying yourself. See, God doesn't want you to simply believe that He exists, for He says even the demons do that. No, he wants you to act on that belief. God wants you to trust Him throughout your life, through thick and thin, through the good times and the bad times. He wants you to depend on Him for your food, your shelter, your clothing and your very existence.

So why does God want your trust? God quite simply wants to be acknowledged as creator of the universe and all that is in it. He hates it when you think that you don't need Him. He hates arrogance and pride, independence and self-sufficiency. All these things separate you from God, but that's not His plan. His plan is that you would acknowledge Him as your creator and put your complete trust in Him.

You know that you do bad things, whether it is often or only once in a while, but God doesn't want you to do those things anymore. That's why He needs your trust, so that He can transform you from within. You can try all you want to be good. You may even have some success, but it will be nothing compared to the kind of success that you can achieve with God as your guide.

This kind of success isn't easy, though. You will have to give up a lot, one thing at a time, day by day; it's a continual process. Trust in God doesn't come overnight, but you won't be disappointed by its outcome. Anyone who puts his or her trust in God can tell you how amazing it is.

It is trust in God that has allowed countless alcoholics to stop drinking, junkies to go cold turkey and average men and women like you and me to overcome our worst problems and fears. I will never forget the time when I went to an AA meeting for a class assignment. The stories those former alcoholics told about putting their trust in God amazed me. They knew they couldn't stop drinking on their own, so who better to turn to than an omnipotent God?

So when will you stop rebelling against God and acknowledge his sovereignty? He desperately wants you to turn and put your trust in Him. Turn away from pride and self-sufficiency, and put your trust in the One who will never let you down. You may think that your life is fine now and that you have everything under control, but what will you do when everything goes wrong and your life falls apart? Will you fall apart with it?

Therefore, I urge you to read your coins and treasure their words. Put your trust in God, as I am doing.

Barnaby Hughes is a history junior.

People in glass houses shouldn't bare all

We Americans have certain rights to privacy. Some people, for various reasons, choose to waive that right. Unfortunately, in some cases, when they do so, everybody knows about it.

I recently came across a news article about a 21-year-old woman who has decided to live for a couple weeks in a glass house. Every wall is completely clear, making everything she does a show for those who might want to stop and watch awhile from the sidewalk.

My problem with this living arrangement lies in the fact that people do stop and watch everything she does, from eating breakfast to mundane housework, from changing for bed to going to the bathroom.

It's like some twisted zoo from "The Twilight Zone" or a "Star Trek" episode. It's like MTV's "Real World" with only one person and no camera crew. It's an invitation for countless bad jokes about not throwing stones — "So, this woman decides to live in an all-glass house ..." — but the punchline is that it's happening on a real street in a real city with a real person.

Apparently, she has all the necessary zoning permits and has fulfilled all the legal requirements to live in her tank. I suppose she can just claim each wall as a very large picture window and each observer as a "peeping Tom" she chooses not to report to the police. I don't know how she's doing it, but she is, at least temporarily.

I'm not sure whether I'm more disturbed by the fact that she would willingly put herself on display or the fact that people would willingly stand and watch her for hours at a time. It's like "The Truman Show" on a smaller scale and without the zany antics of Jim Carrey.

Who wants to stand around and watch someone putter around the house all day? It can't be that interesting to see her read the morning paper. I'm sure the crowds don't "ooh" and "ah" as she puts bread in the toaster. Do they never seen it before in their own houses? Instead of watching this woman wash her dishes, these people should be at home washing their own dishes.

I, for one, do not see the appeal of living vicariously through someone who does stuff I would normally consider to be part of my daily routine. I don't get a rush out of brushing my teeth; I don't see how anyone could get a rush watching somebody else brush their own teeth.

And then there's the nudity.

I would assume her shower curtain is not the opaque plastic kind. If her walls are see-through, everything else is probably clear as well. I know that there are some weirdos who just wait around to see her get undressed. She's OK with it. The crowd is OK with it.

Maybe I'm the only person bothered by the fact that no one really believes in the sanctity of privacy anymore. If someone wants to offer her entire life for public scrutiny, she should at least have the decency to close herself off from the passers-by that merely need to get to the store for supplies. Perhaps she could live in a normal house entirely equipped with television cameras and have everything she does broadcasted to a local channel 24 hours a day.

The problem is, I know a lot of people would tune in to that as well.

Great Food and Spectacular View at Vista Grande Restaurant

The next time you're looking for full-service dining with a variety of delicious foods, try visiting Cal Poly's own Vista Grande Restaurant, located on Grand Avenue across from the Performing Arts Center.

The restaurant, one of Cal Poly's best kept secrets, serves an assortment of sandwiches and salads for lunch—and seafood, pasta, and prime rib for dinner. At lunch and dinner it also offers weekly features and ethnic specialties, homemade soups, and tempting desserts.

Ed Sweeny, the manager of Vista Grande Restaurant recommends that new customers try a seafood dish.

"The fish is always fresh and of high quality," Sweeny said.

The restaurant is open for lunch and dinner Monday through Friday from 11:00 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. and Saturday from 5:00 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. Sweeny added that the restaurant also offers an all-you-care-to-eat buffet style Sunday brunch from 10:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. The brunch features gourmet salads, fresh fruit, meat dishes, and other breakfast and lunch items. The restaurant also runs seasonal and holiday specials. This month, the restaurant's lunchtime partons will receive a surprise treat on Valentine's Day.

Sweeny said the food at Vista Grande restaurant is reasonably priced—costs range from $3.95 to $14.95 for lunch and dinner items. Sunday brunch costs $7.95. Vista Grande Restaurant opened in 1973, along with V. G. Cafe, mainly to accommodate the greater number of students living on campus after the Sierra Madre and Yosemite residence halls were built.

Many people probably aren't aware that all Vista Grande Restaurant waiters and waitresses are students. Vista Grande Restaurant serves between 100 and 200 customers a day. Sweeny said reservations are recommended but not required. He added that before sold-out performances at the Performing Arts Center it is often hard to get a table at the restaurant without a reservation.

"The restaurant offers a beautiful, panoramic view," Sweeny concluded.

Indian casino to sponsor Padres

SAN DIEGO (AP) — An Indian tribe that runs a casino in San Diego County will be the title sponsor of the San Diego Padres' 2000 season.

It's believed to be the first time a major league franchise has sold such a sponsorship. The Sycuan tribe will pay more than $1.5 million, with some of the money going directly to the Padres and the rest going to radio and TV advertising, two sources familiar with the negotiations told The Associated Press on condition of anonymity.

San Diego's season will be marketed much like a bowl game or golf tournament is. A logo reading "Padres 2000, presented by Sycuan" will be used on club publications, at the ballpark and in advertising.

The logo, which will include the team's Swinging Friar mascot and palm trees — several palm trees are just beyond the outfield fence at Qualcomm Stadium — will not be worn on the players' uniforms.

Padres president Larry Lucchino

wouldn't confirm the exact amount, but said Monday it was "an attractive deal for us, and a gigantic exposure for them."

Lucchino said the deal is acceptable under baseball's rules because Sycuan's casino does not have sportsbook betting. Sycuan and two other tribes with gaming operations, Viejas and Barona, have had prior sponsorships with the Padres, although on a much smaller basis.

"We love this one," said Lucchino, who also helped pioneer exotic road trips in recent years, with his team making two treks to Monterrey, Mexico, and one to Honolulu. "We think of it as a cutting edge advertising arrangement. It's part of an aggressive effort on our part to find new revenue streams wherever we can because of our status in the baseball hierarchy."

The cartoonish Swinging Friar logo has been associated with the Padres off and on since 1958, when they were in the minor leagues. San Diego was built around Spanish missions settled by Franciscan friars to convert Indians to Christianity.

The Padres say they have sustained operating losses since software mogul John Moores bought the team in December 1994, with Lucchino as a minority partner. Although San Diego is among the nation's biggest cities, it is a small broadcast market, meaning there's less money to be made from radio and TV deals.

"I think it's very much a work in progress, but we are optimistic it will become a more customary kind of approach for our team and other teams in the future," Lucchino said.

Sycuan will have a chance to extend the sponsorship a second year, said Fred Mott, president and CEO of Fantastic Sports, which brokered the deal. The tribe also is interested in discussing bigger partnerships with the Padres, possibly including the naming rights of the Padres' downtown ballpark, scheduled to open in 2002.

"We've heard everything from it was a war zone and there was fighting everywhere to that there were four total involved, including the two victims," Samuel said.

A lawyer for the limo driver said his client should not be seen as "a star witness against Ray Lewis."

"He's told police what he saw. And he's told police what he didn't see," David Irwin said.

Irwin would not comment on what Fassett has told police. But he said Fassett has periodically driven for Lewis during the past year and is "friendly" with the 24-year-old player.

"He's very distraught about the trouble that has befallen Ray," Irwin said.

Irwin would not comment on previous reports that knives and blood were found in the limo.

Samuel said Fassett may have seen Lewis trying to break up the fight.

"We don't know what his vantage point was or what he actually saw," Samuel said.

He also said that because someone shot at the fleeing limo and bullet holes in the car were evident, someone other than the victims might have been involved in the fight.

Every year the school must raise more money for scholarships because of the rise in tuition and living costs.

"There are 148 full-ride scholarships right now," LaPlante said. "271 out of 442 athletes receive some sort of assistance."

The Mustang Athletic Fund evolved from the Boosters Association. When Cal Poly moved from Division I to Division II, it needed a program to focus on raising money for scholarships. The group is run internally by a board of directors.

The board has broken up into four groups to try to raise the $100,000 by June. Each group has a leader and about 10 members, most of whom are community volunteers. Each team is competing against each other to see who can raise the most money.

Bill Fairbanks, owner of Sands Liquor and Deli, has been raising money for the Athletic Fund for 13 years.

"I started helping the athletic department in high school; I went to Morro Bay," he said. "I haven't missed a home football game in 23 years."

Fairbanks said the $100,000 donation is a great fund-raising tool and will really help the athletic department raise money.

"When we go out and talk to people about donating money, it's really great that they can donate to such a noble cause, and anything they donate will automatically double," he said.

Wrestling takes fifth at state meet

MUSTANG DAILY STAFF REPORT

The Cal Poly wrestling team faces Fresno State tonight at 7 p.m. after placing fifth at the California Collegiate Tournament this weekend.

Fresno placed first at the tournament with 64.5 points in San Francisco last weekend. Cal Poly, missing four starters, took fifth with 50 total team points.

Starters Alberto Garza, Jesse Reta, James Gross and Eric Rodriguez were resting for three upcoming dual meets at home.

Sophomore Steve Strange took the 174-pound title at the championships. Strange defeated Fresno's Dan Jackson by default. Strange then defeated Bakersfield's David Afoa 8-4 in the quarterfinals and Cal State Fullerton's Jason Webster 7-5 in the semifinals. Strange proceeded to the finals and the won the title.

"We did really well considering we were without four starters at the tournament," Cal Poly head coach Lennis Cowell said in a press release. "Steve Strange had a great tournament for us."

Jaime Garza captured third with 125 points in the consolation finals by defeating San Francisco State's

Police search Lewis' home

ATLANTA (AP) — Police searched Ray Lewis' home in suburban Baltimore on Monday, but would not disclose what they were looking for or what they found in connection with the murder charges facing the NFL star.

Officers could be seen carrying large plastic containers from the home and loading a computer into a van.

Atlanta police spokesman John Quigley confirmed a search warrant was executed, but he would not elaborate on the search by Atlanta and Baltimore County police.

While police sought clues in Lewis' home, his lawyer said all the passengers in the limousine that fled the scene of the two fatal stabbings contend his client was not part of the post-Super Bowl brawl.

Don Samuel told The Associated Press on Monday that he and other defense lawyers and investigators have interviewed all six men, including Lewis.

"We're all hearing one voice — Ray was not involved in knifing anybody or attacking anybody," Samuel said. "We have not interviewed the driver, but everyone else says Ray wasn't the one."

The Sun in Baltimore reported Monday that 51-year-old limo driver Duane Fassett told police that Lewis threw at least one punch in the fight that resulted in the two deaths.

The affidavit police used to obtain the arrest warrant against Lewis cited an unidentified witness who said Lewis participated in the "punching, beating, and stabbing" of the two men.

The Baltimore Ravens player is in Atlanta Detention Center on murder charges stemming from the deaths of Jatin "Shorty" Baker, 21, and Richard Lollar, 24, both of Decatur.

Samuel said interviews have not shed light on who actually stabbed the two men. He would not release the names of the other limo passengers.

Atlanta police have said they want to interview two men thought to have been in the limo — former University of Maryland football player A.J. Johnson and Kwame King, a friend of Lewis.

Johnson, who says he was at home in Laurel, Md., during the Super Bowl weekend, said Sunday that Atlanta investigators had interviewed him.

Samuel said the defense team has interviewed more than 30 people, and accounts as to what happen vary wildly.

Donor will match $100,000 for athletics

By Larissa Van Beurden

MUSTANG DAILY STAFF WRITER

The Mustang Athletic Fund has a pricey goal — it needs to hold $100,000 by June 30.

An anonymous donor has agreed to match, up to $100,000, any new funds the Mustang Athletic Fund has raised. All money must be raised by the end of the fiscal year, which is June 30. The money will go to scholarships for student-athletes at Cal Poly.

Mike LaPlante has been the director for the Mustang Athletic Fund for about a year. He said the donor has agreed to give Cal Poly $100,000 each year for the next five years. His total donation will be $500,000.

"This is such a huge boost to our scholarship program," LaPlante said. "(The donor) is obviously such a huge supporter of our athletic program for stepping forward and being the first one to give such a tremendous gift."

LaPlante said the donor wanted to donate money but didn't want to just hand it to the school.

"He wanted to see it as a challenge," LaPlante said. "He will match all new funds brought into the athletic department for scholarships."

If a current donor gives $500 per year to the school and raises it to $600, that extra $100 is what will be counted as new funds and will go into the pool to be matched. The $500 won't be matched because it is not seen as new funds. If someone decides to donate $500, and the person has never donated money before, all of that $500 will be matched.

LaPlante said that he hopes these donations can help take the program to the next level.

"We want to be able to fully fund all scholarships so we will be able to compete in Division I and in the Big West (division)," he said.

Currently, all students at Cal Poly pay for part of athletic scholarship money through tuition. LaPlante said he wants the Mustang Athletic Fund to be able to pay for all scholarships without having to ask students for money.

He said students are a huge support for Mustang athletics, both in helping fund scholarships and attending sporting events.

"I can't emphasize enough what it means to the administration, community supporters, coaches and players to see so many stu-

Kareem wants to smoke in peace

NEW YORK (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar felt betrayed when Magic Johnson made a joke about him using marijuana for medicinal purposes.

"I would have expected more from a guy I played with," Abdul-Jabbar said Monday. "Some compassion, some understanding. Instead, he tried to get a laugh at my expense."

Johnson's remarks were made on his short-lived TV show "The Magic Hour." Abdul-Jabbar expressed his disappointment in "A Season On The Reservation," a book he wrote about his five months coaching an Apache high school basketball team in Arizona.

"I had shown support for Magic when he tested positive for HIV and I had expected more from a former teammate," Abdul-Jabbar wrote in the book.

Abdul-Jabbar, speaking at a book-signing session at the NBA Store, said he has a prescription from the state of California to legally use marijuana because of the migraine headaches that have troubled him for years.
