Business senior passes away after 4-day coma

Whitney Diaz

MUSTANG DAILY

Cal Poly business senior Joseph Hassan died Sept. 25 after a four-day coma resulting from a mixture of prescription and illegal drugs, close friends and family members said.

Although the toxicology tests are still pending, it is believed by some who knew him that his death was a result of a deadly mixture of the prescription medications OxyContin, an analgesic; Xanax, which treats depression and anxiety disorders; and the illegal drug MDMA, also known as ecstasy.

"It happened sometime in the afternoon on Saturday. A little bit after 2 p.m. is when he stopped breathing," said Hassan's close friend and fellow Cal Poly business major Omid Shamsapour. "I've known that he has taken stuff before, but not to that extent."

Hassan, 24, was admitted to Sierra Vista Regional Medical Center after his brother Adam Hassan and mother Vasi Hassan found him unconscious in his living room in the afternoon of Sept. 22. When they realized he wasn't breathing, they called for an ambulance.

The Cal Poly student had no apparent brain activity after the hospital performed several tests that Saturday, Shamsapour said.

Several friends and family visited the patient over the next few days, but upon doctors' recommendations the family decided to remove Hassan from life support around 9 p.m. Sept. 25.

"All we ever prayed for was for him to come back," said Shamsapour, who recounted the story on behalf of Hassan's family.

"Joseph is by far the best friend I've ever had in my life, and by that I mean he was charming, funny, smart, athletic and hilarious."

Hassan planned to graduate this December with a business degree in finance and then to attend law school.

"Everybody that he met really touched his heart," Vasi Hassan said.

She added that because her son loved San Luis Obispo so much, she hopes that one day she can convince the city to name a street after him.

"He spoke so highly of San Luis Obispo and how he didn't really want to leave. It was just such a comfortable place to be and a beautiful environment. It just gave him ambition to move on and make his dream come true," she said.

He would have been the first in his family to graduate from college and had been out celebrating that Friday night, said Cal Poly associate professor of finance Larry Gorman. He worked closely with Hassan for nearly two years.

"I saw him that Friday afternoon," Gorman said. "He was on top of the world. He was excited about grad school and that this was his last quarter (at Cal Poly). He had everything going for him."

The day Gorman was told that Hassan was in the hospital, he had been writing a letter of recommendation for Hassan.

MUSTANG DAILY

Most students attend Cal Poly to earn a degree in hopes of having a better chance in today's competitive job market. Employers often see an applicant as more valuable if they have experience abroad.

The College of Liberal Arts has developed a new student exchange program to help set participants apart from the rest of the job-hunting crowd. Beginning this spring, five students will be selected to study abroad in La Serena, Chile.

"There is definitely a lot of personal growth that comes along with studying abroad," said Monica Schechter, the associate director of Study Abroad International Education and Programs.

"Students often come back with more maturity, open-mindedness, adaptability and these are all skills that employers are looking for... It sets them apart when they are applying for jobs," she said.

Participants are fully immersed in the Spanish language and Latin American culture by attending La Serena State University. The university is much smaller than Cal Poly with only about 8,000 students.

Students in the program attend regular classes with students from all over Chile to aid in the immersion process. Cal Poly students are able to take any classes offered by the university. Almost all classes offered are taught entirely in Spanish.

Cal Poly students would be taking classes from March 24 through July 18, or Aug. 1 through Dec. 19, depending on the semester they choose at La Serena State University. There is also the option to stay for a full academic year.

The program is only open to students of the College of Liberal Arts. Students are required to have completed a two-year minimum of university-level Spanish with an average grade of B or better to qualify for admission.

Course credit is transferable to Cal Poly and financial aid is available for those that qualify.

La Serena is one of the cheapest study abroad programs for Cal Poly students. Participants pay Cal Poly tuition fees to take classes at the university, but do need to pay for their own health insurance while abroad. Students can expect to spend about $1,000 on a flight and have multiple options available for housing.

Students can live for about $330 per month in a pension, similar to a boardinghouse, Chile faculty exchange coordinator Kevin Fagan said. In a pension, students have their own

Clinton leads Dems in Iowa poll

ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW HAMPTON, Iowa — Hillary Rodham Clinton has taken the lead among Democratic presidential candidates in an Iowa poll, an encouraging sign of progress toward overcoming a big hurdle in the race.

Although the New York senator is the clear front-runner in national surveys, Iowa has remained an elusive prize. She has been in a tight race with John Edwards and Barack Obama in the state that begins the primary campaign voting in three months.

But her campaign has focused on boosting her appeal in Iowa, including two visits with her husband, former President Clinton, by her side over the summer. The effort appears to have paid off, according to the poll of likely Iowa caucus-goers that was published in Sunday's Des Moines Register.

Clinton was supported by 29 percent of the 399 respondents to the poll conducted Oct. 1-3, compared with 21 percent in May.

Edwards and Obama are not far behind, ensuring that all three campaigns will continue their intense efforts in Iowa.

"I'm doing everything I can to earn the support of Iowans," Clinton said during a stop in New Hampton. A standing room only crowd at a community center was warmed up by listening to disco hit "Ain't

He said that Hassan's death was the exact opposite of suicide. Instead, it was "excess celebration," he said.

"He was very upbeat, very honest and was always trying to improve himself," Gorman said.

Although he added that Hassan was "wise beyond his years," Gorman could not account for the reason why the student allegedly ingested the mixture of chemical substances.

The San Luis Obispo Police Department said that the circumstances surrounding Hassan's death are still being investigated and more information will be released when the investigation is closed.

Hassan's wake was held at the Greek Orthodox Cathedral of the Ascension in Oakland and he was laid to rest in an Islamic burial at Five Pillars Cemetery in Livermore on Sept. 28, his mother said.

Because Hassan was so close to finishing school, it is important that he gets his degree in some form, Shamsapour said.

Several of Hassan's friends even looked into taking a few classes in his name in order to get him the proper amount of credits and courses he would have needed in order to graduate in December.

"There is no university process for that," said Dave Christy, dean of the Orfalea College of Business. "I'm very proud that students would want to do something for him, but that's not the way honorary degrees occur."

Instead, Christy said that Hassan may be nominated for a posthumous degree, an award for a deceased student who satisfactorily completed at least two-thirds of all coursework toward a degree.

The best way students can honor Hassan's memory is to do well in their coursework, Christy said.

"I hope the students work hard in their own classes and we'll work hard to award him a posthumous degree," he said.

room, and all meals are provided.

Host families and apartments are also available for students.

"There are several faculty there who have sons or daughters in college. They are very interested in having our students there, which would mean you could stay with a family who has a college-aged boy or girl,"

Fagan said.

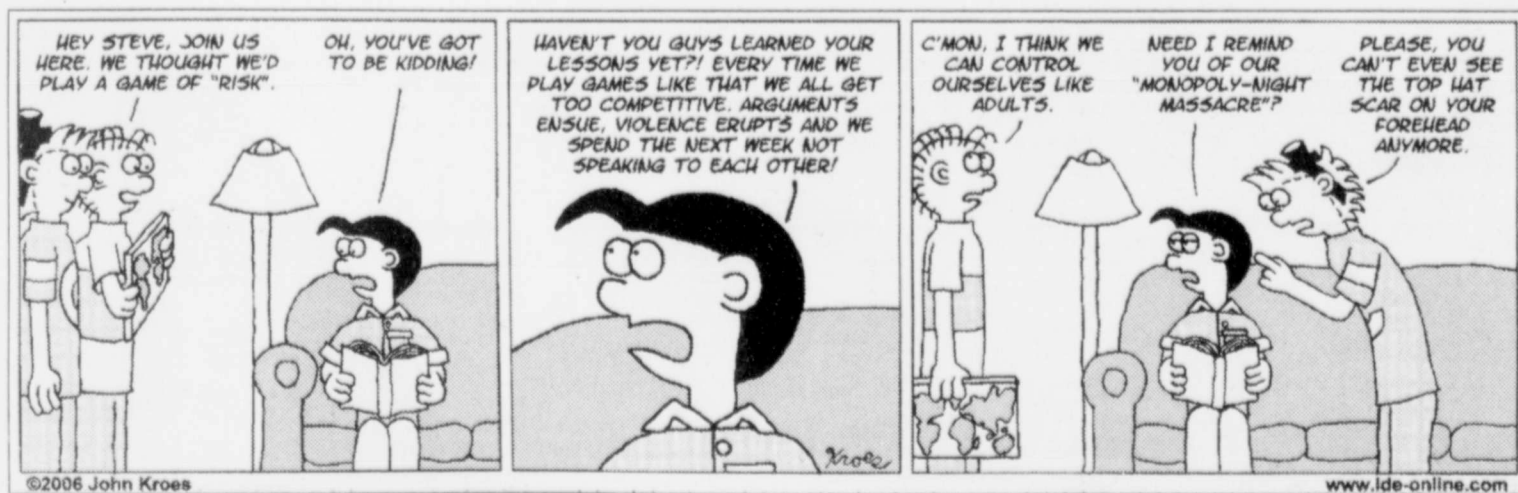

La Serena State University has colleges of social sciences, natural sciences and liberal studies.

Degrees offered include Spanish, history, journalism, music, psychology, translation and teaching English as a second language (TESL). Many classrooms at the university are smart rooms.

Fagan describes the area of La Serena as "safe, healthy, modern and friendly."

La Serena is a colonial city near the coast with a climate similar to San Luis Obispo. It was founded in 1544 and has a population of approximately 160,000. The area is known for its vineyards, astronomical observatories and the seaport region of Coquimbo, Fagan said.

Those who are interested in the program should contact Kevin Fagan in the modern languages and literatures department. The deadline to apply is Nov. 1, 2007.

Kenya's Ivuti wins scorching Chicago Marathon; runner dies

Caryn Rousseau
ASSOCIATED PRESS

In a race run in scorching heat that left one man dead, Kenya's Patrick Ivuti won the Chicago Marathon by a fraction of a second Sunday. At least 49 runners were taken to hospitals and another 250 were treated at the site.

The 88-degree heat and sweltering humidity were so draining that organizers shut down the second half of the course four hours after the start.

Ivuti leaned at the finish line to edge Jaouad Gharib of Morocco by 0.05 seconds. Ethiopia's Berhane Adere rallied to successfully defend her women's title.

Chad Schieber of Midland, Mich., 35, collapsed while running on the South Side and was pronounced dead shortly before 1 p.m. at a Veteran's Affairs hospital, the Cook County medical examiner's office. An autopsy was scheduled for Monday.

"Obviously very sad news, and our thoughts and prayers are with the individual's family," said Shawn Platt, senior vice president of title sponsor LaSalle Bank.

George Chiampas, the race's medical director, said witnesses reported seeing Schieber collapse and become unresponsive. "It sounds like he lost his pulse very fast and died on the race course," Chiampas said.

There was another running death Sunday in Arlington, Va. An unidentified runner from Virginia died during the Army Ten-Miler, collapsing near the finish at the Pentagon. The race started in 70-degree heat and high humidity.

These were record temperatures for the Chicago Marathon, topping the mark of 84 degrees in 1979. Runners were diverted to the starting area, where they were provided with medical attention and cooling misters. Shortages of water and energy drinks were reported along the 26.2-mile route.

Race director Carey Pinkowski said organizers were concerned that emergency medical personnel wouldn't be able to keep up with heat-related injuries.

A runner is taken to an ambulance near an aid center during the Chicago Marathon on Sunday.

"We were seeing a high rate of people that were struggling," Pinkowski said. "If you were out there at 1 o'clock, it was a hot sun. It was like a summer day. It was just a brutally hot day."

At first, organizers hoped those who passed the halfway mark could complete the run. But eventually even those recreational runners were told to turn back.

Still, some runners persevered, although organizers said they didn't know how many completed the course. Helicopters hovered over the race course while police officers shouted through a bullhorn and warned runners to slow down and walk.

About 10,000 of the 45,000 registered runners chose to not race in the heat despite more mist stations, cooling buses and water-soaked sponges, while another 10,934 started but didn't finish, officials said.

Lori Kaufman, a runner from St. Louis, said she was told to start walking at mile 14. She said the fire department turned on hydrants to hose people down along the course.

Paul Gardiner, a runner from England, said the weather made for a "brutal" run.

"We were at about 18 miles and we heard they canceled it and that kind of sent a little bit of concern through the crowd," he said. "It's just it's impossible to run."

Ivuti, competing in only his second major marathon, was timed in 2 hours, 11 minutes, 11 seconds in the closest finish in the race's history. He was the fifth straight Kenyan to win the race.

"I had never seen a marathon finish up close that was like that," head referee Pat Savage said. "This was really close, but at the same time you could see that one man was ahead of the other."

Adere finished in 2:33:49 after passing a surprised Adriana Pirtea, who had a comfortable 30-second lead after 24.8 miles.

Ivuti and Gharib surged ahead of defending champion Robert Cheruiyot and Daniel Njenga at the 22-mile mark to make it a two-man race. Gharib led for much of the final four miles before Ivuti made a push on the final mile.

"One thing I had in my mind was that everybody is going to face the same heat," Ivuti said. "I had no problem with that because everybody was going through the same thing as me."

The duo traded leads on the stretch run down Columbus Avenue before Ivuti's final push at the line. The race was so close that it took organizers several minutes to determine

While Clinton visited small towns in eastern Iowa, Edwards was in the midst of a four-day tour of the state that included stops in 17 counties. The new poll showed his support falling from 29 percent, good enough for first place in May, to 23 percent. That is a statistical tie with Obama's 22 percent.

The poll has a margin of error of 4.9 percentage points.

Edwards told reporters in Davenport that he sees it as a close three-way race, with his two chief rivals rising recently because "they spend millions of dollars on television advertising."

"But, I think it's much more important to Iowa caucus-goers to Clinton got one of those hard questions in New Hampton, and it led to a heated exchange.

Randall Rolph of Nashua challenged her for voting last month to designate Iran's Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps a terrorist organization. Some Democrats said they feared that such a designation could be interpreted as a congressional authorization of military force in Iran.

Rolph compared Clinton's vote on the Iran measure with her vote to authorize war in Iraq. "It appears you haven't learned from your past mistakes," he said.

Clinton responded that his interpretation was wrong and suggested that someone put him up to asking the question. The man said he did his own research and was offended that she would accuse him of getting it elsewhere. She apologized but insisted he must be looking at the wrong version of the bill.

Downtown galleries keep their doors open for Art After Dark

MUSTANG DAILY

As most of downtown closed its doors Friday night, a few galleries blazed with light and conversation as Art After Dark kicked off the month of October.

Organized by Arts Obispo, the San Luis Obispo County Arts Council, Art After Dark is held the first Friday of every month from 6 to 9 p.m. This month, 16 different downtown businesses participated in the event. In addition to galleries, other shops like Linnaea's café joined in.

The two busiest locations were the Hands Gallery and the Art Center, each packed with people looking at the featured work while eating hors d'oeuvres and drinking wine.

A crowd favorite was the Hands Gallery, where creative and colorful animal sculptures by Phoebe Palmer were displayed.

er were displayed.

Palmer said she got the idea to create these "Benign Beasts" (as the Hands Gallery titled the collection) from a public art piece she worked on with another artist. After creating a dragon's head for that project, she made the choice to continue.

"I decided I might as well make a series of them because they are so much fun," Palmer said.

Palmer described the collection as entertaining and said you don't have to take the pieces too seriously.

Since the collection includes dragons, squirrels and other furry creatures, the subject matter is light and unique. Each piece has an interesting colored glaze that makes it individual.

"It took me about six months to put the collection together, but I was working on other things at the time, so I'd put together an odd one here or there," Palmer said.

Although the crowd was mainly comprised of older community members, a few Cal Poly students wandered in throughout the night.

In the Hands Gallery, Dane Tiemeier, a mechanical engineering junior, said he had not heard anything about Art After Dark before he came downtown Friday night and saw signs displayed in front of various businesses.

"I saw the sign and decided to step in and see what was being shown here," Tiemeier said. "It is fairly interesting and I might have to look around at some of the other galleries now."

Many students that wandered into galleries throughout the evening had similar motives, having already been downtown and just stopping in once they saw the signs and the lights.

Each location featured a small sign with the Art After Dark logo, either standing outside the door or on the window to let people know they were participating.

At the Art Center, the 2007

Plein Air Painting Festival works were displayed. The many participating artists painted scenes from across the Central Coast, capturing everything from Morro Bay to a train passing through San Luis Obispo.

The paintings were on display at the end of the week-long festival that celebrated painting done in the open air throughout the area. They were being displayed a final time before they were scheduled to be sold Saturday at a live auction. The festival is an annual event that is always a favorite with locals because of the many beautiful paintings it generates.

The next Art After Dark will be held Friday, Nov. 2 from 6 to 9 p.m. The specifics of what each gallery will be showing have not been announced yet but should be available within the next few weeks.

To find out about upcoming Art After Dark artists and locations, visit www.sloartscouncil.org/aftd-ark.html.

Paint the day

MUSTANG DAILY

A soft breeze blew through Mission Plaza Saturday morning as plein air artists painted landscapes of the plaza and onlookers watched at the sixth annual Plein Air Festival.

Beginning at 9:30 a.m. the plein air artists were given two hours to complete an on-the-spot "quick-draw" of a scene in Mission Plaza where the community and visitors could watch. The paintings were then framed on the spot as the artists completed them.

"I'm a plein air painter and I've never been involved in any type of festival before so I thought I might as well, especially since my grandson attends Cal Poly," said artist Grace Boothe of San Diego.

Jazz music could be heard throughout the plaza at the conclusion of the quick-draw as artists and their assistants moved their artwork to line both sides of the brick walkway that goes through the plaza for the parade of paintings.

Most artists stood beside their paintings as individuals, couples and families walked through and viewed the completed pieces of artwork.

Some art enthusiasts stopped to photograph specific pieces of artwork and discuss the piece with the artist. The hum of various conversations taking place at the same time could be heard throughout the plaza.

"I'm a painter and I enjoy this event because I like watching all the other painters to see their perspective of San Luis Obispo as well as all the different styles that the artists use," said artist Carol Mortensen, 61, of San Luis Obispo.

At noon there was an auction in the Mission Plaza amphitheater, where the purchasers of the paintings were able to take their paintings home with them.

The Plein Air Festival exhibition and gala took place Saturday from 6 to 9 p.m. in the San Luis Obispo Art Center for $50. Artists were able to display their favorite paintings from the week at the exhibition. Food was catered by Novo Restaurant and Lounge.

The festival was a week-long event at which artists were able to explore San Luis Obispo and paint scenes around the area in the traditional plein air fashion. Artists painted outdoors at the scene where their paintings were set.

Paintings were displayed in the San Luis Obispo Art Gallery as they were completed but many were not available for purchase until the weekend.

"I was drawn to this festival because I love San Luis Obispo and was glad to be able to come here and paint," Boothe said.

Plein air artists competed in a quick draw in Mission Plaza Saturday. Above: participating artist Ed Terpening's "Mission at San Luis Obispo."

Last week, a hoaxster created a Web site called www.radioheadlp7.com that drew a lot of attention from the media. It featured a countdown to a new Radiohead album release countdown that concluded on Saturday morning only to reveal that the Web site had no affiliation with the band and was nothing more than a big practical joke.

Well, the Web site's creator wasn't far off. On Sunday evening, Thom Yorke and co. announced details regarding their next LP, "In Rainbows," on their Web site. According to a message posted by guitarist Jonny Greenwood, the album will be released next Tuesday, Oct. 10. Because the band doesn't currently have a record label, it will be available exclusively on their Web site.

Fans will be able to buy the album on disc or by download with those buying the download-only version given the option to name their own price. Like Prince's "Planet Earth" stunt earlier this year (he gave away copies of the album for free in London's Sunday newspaper), Radiohead's innovative distribution technique is sure to shake up the music industry. As one of the only remaining holdouts to iTunes (with Led Zeppelin recently promising their new greatest hits compilation to the popular online music retailer), Radiohead's download-only approach is totally unique and quietly subversive.

Speculation about a new Radiohead album has abounded for the past year and a half, with members of the band occasionally posting cryptic messages regarding the album's completion on the band's Web site. For more information or to pre-order the highly-anticipated new release, visit www.radiohead.com.

'Master of Illusion'

Illusionist André Kole to dazzle audiences sans the white rabbit

Jennifer Ingan

MUSTANG DAILY

A night filled with magic and spiritual experience will take place at Cal Poly, lead by world-renowned illusionist and investigator of the supernatural André Kole.

Sponsored by Cal Poly's Campus Crusade for Christ, Kole will be performing at the Cal Poly Performing Arts Center Monday, Oct. 8 at 7:30 p.m.

"This will not only be a night of superb entertainment but will also include a unique and inspiring stage presentation using magical illustration to share some truths about the spiritual dimension of our lives," said Kevin Lamb, staff member of Cal Poly's Campus Crusade for Christ.

"People from all over the world said this program was one of the most memorable evenings they had ever spent," Lamb said. "We believe that people will find André Kole a thought-provoking and credible presentation of illusion and reality that anyone, especially a student, won't want to miss."

Kole has mystified hundreds of millions in the last 20 years with his full-stage productions of illusion and has bridged many language barriers with his universal art of magic and illusion, Lamb said. He has performed throughout the United States and in 79 countries and has given over 3,500 performances at colleges and universities. Kole also showed off his talent on special televised appearances that aired in 40 countries.

There is only one trick, however, that Kole has yet to master. He has never pulled a rabbit from a hat. The reason — he is allergic to rabbits, Lamb said.

(Kole) doesn't claim that he has any supernatural powers, but reveals what's actually the truth.

—Kevin Lamb

Campus Crusade for Christ staff member

A number of years ago, Kole assisted David Copperfield with his most famous illusion — the disappearance of the Statue of Liberty. In Kole's performance, he makes a 10-foot replica of the Statue of Liberty weighing several hundred pounds disappear.

Other than disappearing acts, Kole will perform levitation illusions. He will also be performing with his son, Tim Kole.

Some may ask why a Christian-based organization is sponsoring an illusionist whose performances relate to magic, which was deemed "evil witchcraft" in the past.

Well, in addition to his performances, Kole has spent more than 20 years investigating psychic phenomena and controversial mysteries.

"(Kole) doesn't claim that he has any supernatural powers but reveals what's actually the truth," Lamb said. "As part of his production, Kole exposes some of the fraudulent and deceitful hoaxes that he investigated and reveals the truth behind transcendental levitation, dematerialization, the Bermuda Triangle mystery, crystal power, communication with the dead and much more."

Kole not only creates illusions but attempts to explain them, and incorporates spiritual questions pertaining to the meaning of life in his performances.

"In a time when distinctions between illusion and reality are often blurred and vague, we want to help people more accurately discern truth," Lamb said.

"It's a good, world-class show," said Bob Dorsch, director of operations for Kole. "It reveals the fundamental questions in life like 'why am I here' or the real purpose in life."

"Kole's performance will be an evening of illusion and inspiration that people will remember for the rest of their lives," Dorsch said.

contest although they came up three points too short.

Game No. 3 came and went with much ease for the Mustangs after they opened with a 10-3 run and they hit .394 for the game.

"We're feeling it at home," Atherstone said. She said the familiar court along with the band and growing fan base helps the team out tremendously.

Atherstone hit a game-high 19 kills while outside hitter Ali Waller and middle blockers Dominique Olowolafe and Jaclyn Houston each had nine. Libero Kristen Jackson and defensive specialist Alison Mort each had 11 digs and setter Chelsea Hayes had 46 assists.

Outside hitter Jennifer Francisco and middle blocker Alex Wolnisky each hit nine kills for the Titans.

Atherstone said she could not have done what she did without the amazing passing and setting she received from her teammates.

"It's like she's punishing the ball every time she hits it," Stevenson said of Atherstone.

When asked why Atherstone remains such a threat on the court, Stevenson said that each player on his team poses a problem to defenses and that, were a team to give special defensive attention to one player, they would feel the repercussions from others.

"We're stoked. We want to beat them," Atherstone said.

Stevenson said that a goal for his team is to keep their hitting errors at 12 or below. In Friday's match, they hit 19. He said to go anywhere in tournament play, they would have to get down to 11 total errors per match.

Of the upcoming match on Thursday, Stevenson said, "Santa Barbara is a big match, always, it's a rivalry."

Poly men's soccer ties at Riverside

Men's soccer stays undefeated in conference and is alone in second place in the Big West behind UC Santa Barbara.

SPORTS INFORMATION REPORT

Cal Poly men's soccer took on the UC Riverside Highlanders in their second Big West conference game on Saturday afternoon at the UCR Soccer Stadium. The match ended in double overtime 2-2.

K.J. Lenehan

UC Riverside's Cito Sorian put the Highlanders (6-1-1, 1-0-1) on the board in the 31st minute of play, giving them a 1-0 lead in the first half. Michael Galland assisted Sorian on the goal.

Ryan Anderson tied the game up 1-1 within ten minutes of play in the second half. K.J. Lenehan passed that ball to Anderson, who shot it past UC Riverside's goalkeeper Charles Alamo.

Kyle Montgomery gave the Mustangs their first lead of the game 2-1 after Sorian received a red card in the 64th minute. Montgomery sent the ball to the net from the top of the box without an assist.

The final goal of regular play was scored by UCR Steven Kaufman in the 67th minute of play to send the game into overtime. Both teams were unsuccessful in scoring during both 10-minute overtimes, resulting in a 2-2 tie.

In what was a very aggressive play, a total of five yellow cards were handed out to UC Riverside and one yellow card to Cal Poly's Daniel Gray. Cal Poly totaled 17 fouls throughout the entire game, while UC Riverside recorded 27 fouls.

Cal Poly out shot UC Riverside 24-12 throughout the game, but could not finish. This game drops their record to 6-1-1 overall and 1-0-1 in Big West play.

The Mustangs will return home to Alex G. Spanos Stadium for the "Best in the West" conference play. Action will get underway on Oct. 10 when they face UC Irvine at 7 p.m.

Cal Poly also had seven more corner kicks than Riverside (9-2).

Riverside committed 14 fouls and received three yellow cards to Cal Poly's 12 fouls and one yellow card. Mustang freshman Whitney Sisler was issued a card at 75:43.

Cal Poly is facing Cal State Fullerton today at 1 p.m. at Alex G. Spanos Stadium.

Crozier didn't plan on changing anything for the game. They'll just keep coming out, maybe get a little luck, he said.

set the tone and all the girls needed was a spark to get them going.

"We were so frustrated after every loss because we played well in every game but hadn't been able to finish," Leger said. "Everyone wants it, we just needed to remember what it feels like to win. This is a turning point for our season; Fullerton was one of the best teams in the league."

Cal Poly hopes that this momentum will carry on through the remainder of the season.

"We have been improving every game and we were due to catch a break," Crozier said. "Our goal is to try to win the conference and host it here. I feel we have the monkey off our back now and we can just go out and play."

The Mustangs will travel to UC Irvine Sunday to play another conference match against Anteaters at 7 p.m.

Women's soccer splits double OT weekend

Cal Poly rebounds from conference-opening loss with a 1-0 win over visiting Cal State Fullerton Sunday.

Alex Kacik

SPECIAL TO THE MUSTANG DAILY

The bench cleared as the Cal Poly women's soccer team scored in the 107th minute to conclude its 1-0 win against Cal State Fullerton in the team's second straight double-overtime contest Sunday afternoon at Alex G. Spanos Stadium.

Cal Poly midfielder Sharon Day hit a low-bouncing corner kick near the front post. Fullerton goal keeper Shayla Sabin sprang for the ball, but met a Cal Poly player instead. The ball was deflected to the middle of the box where defender Erica Leger drove it through a sea of Titan defenders into the upper left corner of the net. Not a second elapsed before she was swarmed by her ecstatic teammates.

The Mustangs improve to 2-8-1 overall and 1-2 in the Big West after they persevered through warm weather and the emotional toll of its double-overtime loss Friday night against Riverside.

"I think in the first half we were a little off," head coach Alex Crozier said. "We had a tough overtime game against Riverside Friday night so we were playing kind of tired. You have to dig a little deeper on days like today and make that little extra effort to get a touch on the ball."

The Mustangs started the first half with some careless turnovers and loose play, which led to many Titan counter attacks.

Fullerton controlled the tempo and maintained possession during most of the half.

The Titans couldn't capitalize early when Brianna Buffington dribbled past a few defenders and drove a low shot toward the corner, which was met by Poly keeper Alli Tramel with one of her three diving saves. Tramel turned in another impressive performance by posting her third shutout and seven saves.

"(Trammel has) been stepping up big for us all year," Crozier said. "We are not scoring goals and putting teams away so we put her in a position where she has to save our butts and she did today. But this time we pulled it off."

The Mustangs came out energized and forced the issue in the second half. The team's aggressive play and crisp passing swayed momentum to its side.

"We just had to pick up the intensity, get a little sharper and work for our teammates a little more," Crozier said.

Both teams had their chances to score. Although the Mustangs' offense was not fluid at times, its defense held strong throughout the game. The girls preserved the shutout by constant physical play on both the defensive and offensive side.

"Fullerton is a physical and hard-working team," Tramel said. "There was definitely a sense of urgency. We realized our season could be over if we lose, so we stepped it up."

Leger said that all the substituted players really

MUSTANG DAILY

In their first game of Big West Conference play, the Mustangs put up a 2-1 loss against the UC Riverside Highlanders Friday night.

Despite having possession for the majority of the game and outshooting UC Riverside (7-4, 1-0) 25-8, Cal Poly (1-8-1, 0-1) wasn't able to get a second goal in.

"I thought we played well; we created a lot of chances," head coach Alex Crozier said. "It was ours to win."

Highlander Tessa Lennala's goal in the first half went unanswered until senior Sharon Day put one in at the 62nd minute.

"I thought (Day's) goal would break the ice," Crozier said.

However, the tie held into the second overtime, where Riverside's Jenna Leonti scored in the last two minutes to end the game.

Mustang goalkeeper Alli Tramel, a senior, had three saves to Highlander Deanna Borgelt's nine.

The Mustangs were getting the shots, crosses, corners and everything they needed to set up the goals, but they just weren't finishing them, Crozier said.

The No. 24 Cal Poly volleyball team (10-7, 4-1) bounced back from a loss at Pacific to beat Cal State Fullerton for the 19th straight contest in a Friday night 30-23, 30-27, 30-17 sweep.

This was the Mustangs 21st victory out of 24 home matches since 2005 as well as the 24th win out of their last 28 Big West games.

The 1,575 spectators watched the Mustangs hit .327, their third highest average in 2007, in their sixth straight sweep of a Big West opponent at Mott Gym.

"When we play offense like that, it's hard to lose," head coach Jon Stevenson said.

In game No. 1, the previously 2-0 Titans did not appear to be the only undefeated team left in the Big West as they had several service and hitting errors.

"We watched a lot of film on them and we were ready for their offense," outside hitter Kylie Atherstone said. She said the team had amazing practices before the game following their loss to Pacific last week.
