AS! positions are up for grabs: filing has begun

Fliming for the ASI 1980 elections was held Thursday and is scheduled to close on April 17. The ASI elections will elect a new president, vice president and senators from six schools on campus. The election is scheduled to close on May 15. The Thursday, the initial day of candidate filing, two senators planned to run for the office of ASI president.

They are Willie Huff Jr., a political science and English major, and Larry Thiba, an agriculture education major. Huff is currently an aide to ASI president Rose Kranz. According to Huff, Kranz is endorsing his candidacy. Thiba is currently the chairman of the ASI bylaws committee.

Nicholas Foretisere is the only candidate for ASI vice president. Foretisere is a political science major.

In the student senate positions, only three schools have candidates listed. The school of Agriculture and Natural Resources has five senate seats available. Candidates are Bill Evenshank, crop science; John Schouten, dairy science; David Stidder, ag business management; John Downey, animal science; and Todd Rumen, ag business management.

The school of Architecture and Environmental Design has two available senate seats. Candidates listed are Nicholas Forestiere, a political science major, and Larry Tibbs, an agriculture council.

ASI looks at its own sports commitment

President Baker has rejected the student senate's resolution to sell beer at the Poly Royal steak barbecue.

In a March 26 memorandum sent to the ASI Senate, Baker stated he is opposed to the general public sale of alcohol on campus. He commented that there might be occasions when serving alcohol would be appropriate.

"My own point of view is that it would be very difficult for me to accept a proposal for a bar or pub on campus for the daily sale of beer and wine," said Baker at a Jan. 9 question and answer session.

Baker said his decision against beer sales may damage the atmosphere at Cal Poly that some students come for.

Neal Meyers, internal affairs assistant to ASI President Rose Kranz, said he wasn't shocked by Baker's memo.

"Baker is new and is not going to rush into changing policies," Meyers said.

"When Baker approves alcohol on campus it will not be over the counter," said, "I doubt any student at Cal Poly now will ever see over the counter sales of alcohol on campus.

Meyers said he feels Baker will permit alcohol at special events. ASI is working on a proposal for champagne to be served at the senior banquet.

Poly Royal falls into the special events category, he said, but it is a controversial issue. Letters requesting that alcohol be banned from Poly Royal have been received from the administrative staff, faculty, students and the community.

Meyers estimated it will be five years before alcohol will be served during Poly Royal.

Even though the alcohol resolution didn't pass, Meyers said, he feels it has made Baker aware of the students' wishes.

Bus to Atascadero may start in fall

Traffic between Atascadero and San Luis Obispo will be a little lighter this fall if Ernie Porter starts his own business.

Porter, who teaches students with learning handicaps at San Luis Obispo Senior High School, wants to run a commuter bus between the two cities.

Porter is sending out questionnaires this month to people who live in Atascadero and work or study in San Luis Obispo. Copies are available in the University Union. If enough people sign up, service will start in September.

Porter has been making the weekday trip between the two cities, alone and in car-pools, for the past seven years. He said he's tired of the high cost of gasoline and the traffic.

"Between 6:30 and 8 in the morning, it seems like there's a million cars out there," he said.

Dorm life — another education

Dorms, like fraternities, have many fun-filled organized activities such as dances, secret society, and rodeo parties. Some of these activities, such as wild beach parties, are exclusively student sponsored.

One unforgettable late party at Avila Beach last December was attended by both the girls and guys' intramural football teams, many of whom with the aid of a keg of cold beer.

Goshsend

Editors:

Mitchell Lee is a "Goshsend." At last we have someone who will speak his own mind. I've seen him speak other people's minds and it's not a pretty sight. My Lee is no right in this thinking; in fact he is as right now as he was when he suggested sending our "dirty bikers" and Hell's Angels over to settle the Iranian problem since it is a well known fact that a Harley and even an Enduro can beat a camel flat out any day.

The second paragraph of his letter can only be described as off-the-wall. I don't know many teachers who will tolerate their students until they succumb to a thought process higher than "dick." The thrashing they get from their "fascinated psychological wives" is probably the only pleasure they get out of life.

One of the main problems teachers face is the narrowed thinking of the new Christians in this country. This thinking allows for very little serious thought on opposing viewpoints. It always comes back to "Jesus is the answer. I believe this and you should too." At least the Jews are comfortable enough with their beliefs that they don't try the Christian socialism bit, so that everyone will be just like them.

If you haven't guessed, I don't believe that anyone has a better line on truth than the next guy. As I see it, the only truly virtuous people are the atheists, agnostics, or those thinking people somewhere out in limbo who don't know what to believe. For the virtuous of these groups do right for the right reason, not because someone tells them to.

Also, many people, myself included, would appreciate it if you would stop slamming our fraternities and sororities, because those words are innuendo. Resurred with a laugh in closing, I'd like to quote a few great lines ever to grace our lips: "I'm Popeye, the sailor man, foot."
Max Riedlsperger, chairman of the academic senate, said Poly is the only school in the Los Angeles area that teaches a foundation course in the field of Public Administration and Government that uses the term department head. The president appointments of department heads serve on an indefinite term.

"Department heads serve at the pleasure of the president," Riedlsperger said. "Department chairs would serve at the pleasure of the president.""

Economics professor Timothy Kersten, who sponsored the resolution, said the academic senate would work to serve the faculty. "Students are the heart of this institution," he said. "The students have a right to be heard."

"We need strong leadership," West said. "People who are worried about their jobs won't work for long-term projects." "It would boil down to a popularity contest," he said.

Agricultural engineering professor James Bertran echoed these feelings at the meeting. "Given faculty power the review would create chaos," he said.

Author: Elites vital to US democracy

BY JOHN KELLER

The U.S. holds elections and therefore can't be called an elite structure, according to Ziegler. He defined an elite as a political decision maker who is in a technically trained niche. The irony is that without elites, "we wouldn't have democracy as we know it." He based his statement on the history that masses are uninformed and unorganized. Ziegler, a political science professor at the University of Oregon.

Economic author of The Irony of Democracy, told more than 120 students in the Graphic Arts Building that masses respond to elections and not the reverse.

The U.S. holds elections and therefore can't be called an elite structure, according to Ziegler. He defined an elite as a political decision maker who is in a technically trained niche. The irony is that without elites, "we wouldn't have democracy as we know it." He based his statement on the history that masses are uninformed and unorganized. Ziegler, a political science professor at the University of Oregon.

"Public opinion doesn't influence public policy," Ziegler reasserted. "Elections are not opportunities for masses to vote for elites, but for elites to show concerns downward toward the public."

Instead, elections present an illusion for the voter. Voters believe they have control over their destinies and for that reason, elections are important. Most voters see the masses to the system. He said he believes that although a lower percentage of Democrats are satisfied with the system, the electorate is wiser than preference. "The turnout of college students is rising," he said in reference to elections. People who attended college accounted for 25 percent of the 1964 national election vote, said Ziegler. "In 1972, the percentage increased by 12."

Another change brought about by college students, Ziegler said, is the decline of the two party system. Young independent voters are replacing the older voters affiliated with Democratic and Republican parties, the analyst said. About 20 percent of all voters are independent and that falls short of Democrats (44 percent), but as more and more Republicans (24 percent), he said, "The two party system is in real trouble," said the Oregon professor. "Because people will become independent in upcoming elections." As it is now, he said, partisan politics add to the problem of uniformed voters. "Parties make it easy for voters not to think," he said. "Generally, if the Republicans share the same values as you, all you do is pull a lever."
This Burmese Python has been held by over 600 grade schoolers that Lilley lectured to in the county. His speeches help kids better understand snakes.

By Tom Fulks
DAILY OUTDOORS WRITER

The lady next door said she almost had a heart attack because a grasshopper jumped at her and she thought it was one of my snakes," Cal Poly graduate Terry Lilley said as he dropped a cracker into a terrarium with a little green African chameleon.

The reptile’s eyes swiveled around like two independent ball-sockets and focused on the doomed insect. Zap! A thread-like, 14-inch tongue picked off the cricket with pinpoint accuracy and the chameleon swallowed it in a single gulp.

Several weeks ago Lilley was granted a home use permit by the Morro Bay Planning Commission to sell rare and endangered snakes to zoos and universities, including Cal Poly, for research and breeding. The vote was 3-2 in favor.

"Mr. Williams is in fear of not being taken care of," Lilley said, because the two women who live in on him daily are terrifed of Lilley’s snakes. They refused to come take care of Mr. Williams until Lilley gets a certificate of no snakes running wild in Lilley’s backyard and until health conditions at his house are up to code.

Lilley said he has removed two wild snakes from William’s back yard. One at the request of the Morro Bay police and the other at the request of a yard neighbor. Neither were Lilley’s snakes. Not one of Lilley’s animals has ever gotten away and he said his presence lessens the possibility of snakes ever seeing a snake.

None of Lilley’s reptiles are venomous. All are tropical and would die if left even one night out-of-doors in Morro Bay. All the animals are kept in an underground basement with double-lock doors and two small windows. Lilley has even offered to board up the windows if it will help people conquer their fears.

The County Health Department pulled a surprise inspection of Lilley’s reptile facilities and gave it a higher grade than most house-hold’s said Lilley. The health inspector told Lilley he was informed that rats, chickens and rabbits running loose in his back yard were used for snake food.

Lilley said the inspector was also told five-foot-high doors of snake fences in the yard were attracting flies and various insects.

Lilley has one of the only permits from the California Department of Fish and Game to breed the red, black and white striped mountain king snake. They are rare and may become extinct because their mountain habitats are being destroyed by the improvement of man. These snakes rarely breed in captivity. Lilley’s have mated and are expecting young shortly. The juveniles will be reintroduced to the wild. It will be the only mountain king snake release program in the country.

Lilley also breeds the rare and endangered Florida indigo snake. These shiny black snakes also rarely breed in captivity. These snakes already have 18 eggs ready to hatch. Lilley is going to keep this batch and breed them at Cal Poly.

From Malaysia, the black-tailed rat-snake has never been known to live in captivity for more than a month. They have never bred in captivity. Even the Malaysian Fish and Game Department has never seen a juvenile, Lilley said.

He has some of the snakes: they have lived for six months in a cage, bred and produced eggs that are ready to hatch. Other animals Lilley is breeding are striped kind snakes. Australian carpet pythons and Burmese pythons.

Within the last five years a series of federal laws have sharply restricted the importation of exotic reptiles because of poor breeding conditions in the U.S. A federal law, known as the Lacey Act, makes it a crime to import, transport or sell any reptiles.

Lilley is working on a plan to get federal backing to breed his snakes. He has offers from the government to study his snakes for "their potential to help the world".

Terry Lilley gets a hug from his Albino Corn Snake. There are no worries in captivity than in the wild. Bright color makes them easier to spot.

New Wave a wash-out at Grad

By HELEN COLEMAN

Wednesday night was billed as "New Wave night" at the Graduate. The theme was old hat to those who were at the Graduate in the early New Wave days. The music, which was predominantly dance music, and the costumes, which were thin ties and dark sunglasses, were familiar to many, especially to those who had dressed for the evening.

The crowd showed up to listen to the music or take advantage of the inexpensive inebriants and to dance to the rhythms being generated at the Graduate Wednesday night. Thin ties and dark sunglasses were abundant among the New Wavers, many of whom dressed for the evening.

There were many people in thin ties and sunglasses. For those who truly enjoy wearing dark glasses in a dimly lit bar, the evening seemed to provide adequate entertainment. At times during the evening discontented patrons screamed requests for disco and rock 'n' roll when the music got too slow or unfamiliar.

In the past, The Graduate has come up with concerts and other ways to generate business on what normally is a slow night. Some have been even a success. The New Wave gimmick might have been a financial success for the owners of The Graduate — a dollar cover charge and the alcohol revenues — but those who want more than an opportunity to catch a cheap buzz might find better entertainment on Wednesday nights.

As a result of his workaholism, women and other things, Gideon suffers a heart attack. The hospital sequence drifts in and out of Gideon's fantasies and hallucinations with occasional visits from a beautiful angel of death (Leslie Langer) who, it would seem, wants to be sequences are of the kind that induce laughter and tears simultaneously. The one who carries off this whole thing is Schneider. He is the perfect picture of the driven artist totally self-absorbed and childlike in all that he does. He treats them without consideration, only thinking of himself, and yet they forgive him everything.

The problem with this film seems to be its slightly schizophrenic nature. When Gideon has his heart attack, the look at show businesses became an analysis of why Gideon subsequently tries suicide. The same second half turns the blackest jokes quite a switch by lightening and a first part of Gideon's post-attack visions, which he has. For example, the G: The Early Career Qualification Test (ECQ) is a test to determine whether a student should continue in the preliminary program or continue in the intensive program. The test is administered by the National Board for the Training of Music Teachers. The test is designed to evaluate a student's potential for success in the intensive program. The test consists of two parts: theory and performance. The theory section includes questions on music theory and history. The performance section includes sight-reading, ear-training, and improvisation exercises. The test is administered in a group setting and takes approximately 2 hours to complete. The test results are used to determine whether a student should continue in the preliminary program or continue in the intensive program. The test results are confidential and are not shared with any other institution.

The New Chromatic Scale

The New Chromatic Scale is a new musical scale that was developed by a team of musicologists. The scale is based on the natural overtone series, which is a series of frequencies that are harmonically related to a fundamental frequency. The scale has 120 notes, compared to the 12 notes of the standard chromatic scale. The scale is designed to be more expressive and to provide a wider range of musical possibilities.

Kate Wolf

Folk singer Kate Wolf and Peter Acosta will perform in concert on April 22nd for the annual Folk Festival. This will be the first appearance of the singer with her first full band, the Drawing Board, and she will be currently working on a new album. Kate Wolf was a number of songs. A number of songs that Wolf is known for include "California Palace," "Safe," and "All the Good Things in This Life." Wolf is a well-known and respected folk singer and has devoted herself to the music of people.

String quartet concert tonight

An evening of fine classical chamber music is set for the final recital in the Quintessence Fine Art Concert series as the New York Quartet will perform in the Cal Poly Theatre tonight.

The concert will begin at 8:15 p.m. and the program will include selections from Mozart's Adagio and Fugue in C minor, Weber's String Quartet and Beethoven's String Quartet in C-sharp minor.

The quartet is presently in residence for the School of Fine Arts at the University of California, Irvine. They formed at Juilliard School of Music in New York in 1976 where they received chamber music instruction from Robert Mann of Juilliard's String Quartet.

Since their debut in 1976 at the Aspen Music Festival, the four musicians have performed at Carnegie Recital Hall, Jordan Hall in Boston and for the Phoenix and San Francisco Chamber Music Societies.

The quartet has William Fitzpatrick as the first violinist. Fitzpatrick is the founding member of the group and has received the Fritz Kreisler Award while at Juilliard. Fitzpatrick has also performed as a soloist during the Inaugural Week festivities for President Carter.

Tickets are priced at $5.50 for the public and $4 for students.

Crusaders to appear

The Crusaders will be playing on campus in the Main Gym Sunday night, but probably not to a packed house. Approximately 1300 tickets had been sold to see the jazz band as of Thursday morning. Concert Committee Chairman Chris Romak said he had hoped the concert would sell better, but said there are no plans to cancel the show.

The concert committee searched hard for a jazz show they thought would sell, says Romak, before deciding to book The Crusaders into the Main Gym. The Crusaders will appear Sunday night at 8 p.m. with special guest Miss Randy Crawford. Their recent album Street Life was augmented by distinct vocals from Crawford on the title track.

Tickets are $6.50 in advance for students and $7.50 for the over-18 public. Prices at the door are one dollar more.

"The Haight was a very pleasant thing," says Alex Holcombe, whose jewelry store has done business on the corner of Haight and Ashbury since 1962. "But it degenerated into a very heavy drug culture. I never went out of business, but we did lose 19 stores on this street.

Dr. David Smith, founder and medical director of the Haight Ashbury Free Clinic, has seen it all.

"You saw the beginnings of the counterculture and psychedelic scene as early as 1964," he says. "In 65 and 66 it accelerated, and in 67 it peaked, the primary things being the rock groups and the expanded use of LSD."

The clinic opened in 1967, operating 24 hours a day, says Smith, and treating as many as 200 patients a day, mostly for LSD trips and short term outpatient care.

Today, the clinic has evolved and expanded to include five sections, including detoxification for heroin addicts and a women's center, as well as a volunteer training branch and research department.

By 1970, the Haight Ashbury was in the throes of a major heroin epidemic. The innocence that had heralded the new age had given way to crime and violence. The rock stars had long since packed up and moved to more pleasant surroundings in the suburbs.

"It turned into a jungle," remembers Kantner, who blames that on the police. "They allowed it to happen almost gleefully. Just let the flower children have the tough world."

The Haight, in fact, according to Smith, "has bombed out ghetto."

"There was so much crime and violence only the most hard business could lay in there."

But hang in they did and the neighborhood made a comeback.

"I would say the 60's and 72 was when there were some major community organizations succeed. The neighborhood started getting together," says Smith. "It normally started taking control and believing that they could handle it through rehabilitation. The urban renewal plans that were advocated by the Galls."

As soon as things started improving, there was a big influx of different populations, including the gay community, says Smith. "They came a bit more, there was a lot of the heroin that was removed, then a lot of the heroin that was removed.

Train derailment investigated

HAYWARD (AP) — Investigators questioned seven surviving train crewmen and picked up crewmen and picked up debris Friday as they searched through the blackened rubble of a fiery wreck that derailed a train carrying 300,000 pounds of explosives.

The 125-ton, 3,000-horsepower locomotives and the cars toppled 25 feet to the street, releasing streams of flames and fire. The train was carrying 30,000 pounds of explosives.

Two crewmen, who survived the explosion, were taken to San Francisco General Hospital and received treatment for burns. They were later released.

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. accused the Carter Administration Thursday of deliberately trying to bankrupt California's oil industry, saying that its price controls have not held costs.

At the United Nations in New York, a spokesman for the U.N. Secretary-General referred to the situation in Lebanon as a "serious concern." He said the U.N. has not been able to reach an agreement on a peace settlement.

Sadat urges peace settlement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat urged Israel and Jordan to move swiftly to achieve a comprehensive peace settlement in the Middle East, adding that he and President Carter have agreed on "certain specific steps" to achieve that goal.

Sadat also strongly denounced Israeli settlements in occupied Arab territory as an obstacle to peace and said he has been dragging its feet in carrying out the peace process.

In remarks prepared for delivery at a Washington Peace Conference here, Sadat also freely acknowledged that Egypt is sending arms to anti-Soviet rebels in Afghanistan.

"It is no secret that we are helping our brothers in Afghanistan," he said. "We will continue to aid them until they free their land."

Sadat said he believes the United States' move to send military aid to Afghanistan was a "miscalculation" and called it "the worst anti-Afghan policy in years."

Sadat also referred to the continued holding of American hostages in Iran, saying that their captors cannot claim to be good Muslims.

"All nations of mankind are Islam," Sadat said. "We will continue to aid them until they free their land."

Sadat said there is an urgent need for Israel to put into effect a series of confidence-building measures to speed up the peace process.

He said a final settlement should be based on the right of self-determination and that "there is no question about it" that the United States is sending arms to anti-Soviet rebels in Afghanistan.

He said a final settlement should be based on the right of self-determination and that "there is no question about it" that the United States is sending arms to anti-Soviet rebels in Afghanistan.

Sadat said there is an urgent need for Israel to put into effect a series of confidence-building measures to speed up the peace process.

Coach Steve Miller’s track team, which is making its final swing towards the CCAA and NCAA Division II National Championships, will send eight athletes to the prestigious Bruce Jenner Classic at San Jose State Saturday.

Tim McDonald, Cal Poly’s premier pole-vaulter, heads the list of athletes traveling to the Jenner Classic. McDonald notched a first-place finish in the event last year, scaling 17-6 to shatter the old school record by an inch.

Jim Schankel, who took a third at San Jose last year, will run the 5,000 meters for only the second time this season. Schankel will be flanked in the 5,000 by Eric Huff, Manny Bautista, and Terry Gibson.

Jeff Small and Terry Bauer will compete in the steeplechase and Dave Albritton will throw the discus.

The women’s team, meanwhile, will host a tri-meet against Washington State and Cal State Northridge.

Kent Clemenco, a member of the team, said the team has had four competitions and three more are on the agenda.

Most races take place during the Spring quarter, he said. “It’s about a month of straight racing every weekend.”

Clemenco said each race takes place on a “circuit,” and is about 15 miles long.

Usually the circuit is about a mile and a half, and is marked by datelike signs.

The team recently competed at Cuesta College where the track was set up through the campus.

In a team versus team competition, the main objective is to stay with the pack, which is typically a very crowded place to be.

Clemenco said, “A race usually has about 45 riders. ‘Put your elbow out and there is somebody right next to you,’” he said.

Clemenco said the members of The Wheelman’s Club compete because they enjoy it. They buy their frames for their bikes and assemble the bicycles themselves. Most riders use 12-speed bikes.

Clemenco said as of now the team is not sponsored by the school, but they are trying to get support.

He said the club was actually started when team captain Andy Tao put an ad in the paper requesting interested cyclists. “It’s the one that got us all together.”

Clemenco said the team is still looking for two members, especially riders who could help bring in some points. In most of his women’s races, all you have to do to receive points is finish, he said.

Cal Poly has had its ups and downs in competition because the team is without the coach and official training program.

The other schools competing against Cal Poly are Stanford, San Diego State, Santa Barbara, and Claremont.

The other schools have teams, said Clemenco. They have their own coach and coaches.

Olympics action pondered

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter said Thursday he is prepared to take legal action if necessary to prevent American athletes from participating in the Moscow Olympics this summer.

In a speech prepared for the American Society of Newspaper Editors convention in Washington, the president made it clear he does not consider the United States bound by a decision of the Olympic Committee, which meets this weekend to consider Carter’s call for a boycott of the Summer Games.

Carter has defended that Americans boycott the Moscow Games to prevent the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

The president also defended his policy in the Iranian crisis and said Iran’s leaders lack the cohesion and resolve to end the long drought over the holding of American hostages.

Carter previously has told American athletes that the American government would not send a team to the Summer Games this year, but there have been suggestions that some athletes might seek a change in Olympic rules to permit them to participate as individuals or as a team and compete without taking part in Olympic ceremonies.
Horses race down the field and hooves pound the dirt, as their riders towards the pole ball. Polo is a fast, exhilarating game, and one that gains little recognition at Cal Poly.

Although a relatively unknown team, the Cal Poly Polo Team is active and successful. They have a win-loss record of 12-3, and were rated fifth in the nation for 1978-1979.

The team receives no financial help from Cal Poly, and is completely self-supporting. The players must buy their own uniforms, supply their own horses, and pay for travel expenses which may be quite substantial at times. The team's recent trip to Massachusetts was supposed to be their fourth game but was curtailed due to snow.

Hawaii, which sports a 15-2 record, rested its starters the third game of the series. The Mustangs capitalized on the inexperience of the Poly lineup and won 7-6. They lost the next game to Davis, last year's champion, 16-7, to York, the winners of the championship.

The teams next last and final home game will be played during Poly Royial.
