Jarl's note: Because of unfavorable response coming from the Howard Jarvis in Los Angeles, the Daily Mustang has spiked that call. In its place, we have reprinted this story.

BY ANDREW JOWERS

Dail/ Staff Writer

Howard Jarvis, the mainstay of Proposition 9, is continuing to trample others fear to tiptoe. He championed Proposition 13 in June 1978, which lowered property taxes. Now, he campaigns for his latest cause, Proposition 9, which would cut the average California state income tax by 54 cents. Some have called him an unscrupled and blind sewer of the state coffers. Jarvis is coming for freedom-social and political.

The interview took place at his office on 740 Hoover Boulevard, Los Angeles, headquarter of the Taxpayers Movement.

What guarantees can you say that I'll be able to finish education if Proposition 9 is passed? I can't afford private education. Who do you want to pay? I want to pay. Have you got someone in that you would like to pay your education? You know if don't pay it, somebody else's got to. You want to pay for your tuition. I don't.

What we have in the school system is everything but training. That's how we have them. In the schools are the masses of manufacturing new welfare recipients, the biggest drag, the biggest handicap, the biggest position of public money in Jarvis.

Why do you say that? Because the records list. Sixty-three percent of high school students are totally illiterate. In order to get to go to college, they had to reduce the books to the ninth grade level because you can't read them.

I believe in education, but if you pay all your tuition, I, as a taxpayer, still pay more than you do. I bought the building and the ground that put the college there for you. I'm paying $2,000 so you can get in there for $1,200, and I'm not going to pay anymore.

Daily: I've heard that part of Proposition 9's appeal is that it helps the little guy without much money. How does tuition help a poor family who can't afford to send its children to college?

Jarvis: I was from a poor family. I worked my way through four years of college. I worked an afternoon shift at the Utah Copper Co., 365 days a year for four years. I rode an inter-urban train for 18 miles to college and I paid all my own way. I got straight A's and straight B's.

Now, I don't expect guys your age to have that many guts, because you don't have a hell of a lot in the schools these days, but I expect you to do something to pay your way because I think I've paid all I want to pay for kids going to college. I don't think you should get a free ride.

Daily: Estimates are that if Proposition 9 won, minority students will be knocked out of the CSUC system.

Jarvis: I wish there would be and especially a lot from foreign countries. We could cut 100,000 foreign students-legal and illegal aliens going to school here—mooching on us and get them the bull out of here.

All you say doesn't make any impression on me because you're inferring that if you go to Cal Poly you'll get an education. I don't believe it, because they don't give you one. They give you a bunch of garbage.

Daily: What about, for example, minority students, who plan to go on, who can't afford tuition, and who are already working to help their families?

Jarvis: Good for them. They have to work too. I think that as long as the school system is not producing education, that when I pay $50,000 a year in taxes, I don't get any education for it. I don't get a scam. The school system is not an education institution anymore. It's a political Mafia for money. The only difference between you and the school system today and the Mafia is that the schools steal more money than the Mafia.

I don't like it—I wish we had some people here. I, as a man, I don't like to pay for education, but I don't like to blow my money on zero zilch.

Daily: How much does it help your campaign having the support of people like Hal Hallett (Rep. Lancaster) and (Lt. Gov.) Mike Curb?

Jarvis: It helps because they're quite respectable people. We have some bright people, both Democrats and Republicans, and that's why Proposition 9 is going to pass in California about 3-1.

Daily: Why does their public figure support help you, but having Gov. Brown against you not worry you?

Jarvis: It helps because they're quite respectable people. We have some bright people, both Democrats and Republicans, and that's why Proposition 9 is going to pass in California about 3-1.

After reading "Howard Jarvis swings his Prop 9 ax..." for the first time Wednesday afternoon, the mayor was shocked to see what he heard about the story until Wednesday.

"I don't endorse the content of the original story until Wednesday. What I am saying and especially the method he used," said Cooper. "As far as him the in..."

Howard Jarvis is in his own worst enemy. With enough line, he'll surely moose himself—and that's just what happened in the Poly Royal edition of Mustang Daily.

Interviewed by staff writer Andrew Jowers in the tax critic's Los Angeles office, Jarvis took off his mask. What's underneath has caused floods of response from media throughout the state. The self-proclaimed tax-cutter usually concealed from the public by abrupt sayings, ambiguous talk and smooth press agents, exposed a cynical chip on his shoulder.

400,000 elderly citizens giving up if (Proposition 13) passed, they'd lose all state benefits—that was a lie. They said it was a lie to the people, they said it was a lie. Jerry Brown, after Proposition 13 passed, said it was the best thing that ever happened in California. After saying the previous six months it was the worst thing. So either lying one place or the other. And, of course, they lied about the state surplus. They said it was $5.5 billion, and I said it was $6.5 billion, and it turned out to be $6.5 billion.

Daily: People are also saying Proposition 9 is for the rich, that it’s regressive.

Jarvis: They’re liars, it’s progressive. If you have a $1,000 income tax, you’ll get a 10 percent reduction in your taxes that amount to $27.50 a month.

Daily: But if you only earn $10,000 to $12,000, you only get about a $70 reduction per year (State Franchise Tax Board Figures).

Jarvis: No, I didn’t say that. That’s not correct. I just told you what it was. If you have less than $15,000, you pay very little income tax, most of them none all at none. They don’t pay nothing. They have a free ride on the rest of us.

If you have a $10,000 salary, you get in a higher bracket, you will have a 63 percent reduction, and that’ll be $35 a month. Legislative analyst William Hamm estimates a reduction of 53.3 percent. They said it was $5.5 billion, and you only get a 49 percent reduction. So the bulk of the money going to the low income, and when Brown says different, he’s a liar.

Daily: How do cuts like these measure up against cuts in, for example, free health care?

You’re inferring that if you go to Cal Poly you’ll get an education...they don’t give you one. They give you a bunch of garbage.

Jarvis: Don’t measure up at all, because you’ll have more money after (Proposition 9) than you ever had before. The only problem with the schools is if the politicians don’t give the money, it’s not their concern. They would like to keep all the money at the top and they would like to take all of it. They don’t want to give the teachers anything. They want to steal all the school money for the administrators and the teachers. I want to cut down their they’re, because that’s all it is.

Daily: How do you think Proposition 9 primarily results in cuts in government spending?

Jarvis: Proposition 9 provides savings in property tax, and the other thing is, the property tax is a progressive tax. It’s a kind to nobody any time. They won’t take and they’re going to go back to the unemployment office. They’re going to go back to shining shoes, where they belong. And that goes for a lot of professors, too.

Daily: What about the Tax Simplicity Act?

Jarvis: It’s a fraud. It’s saying we’re going to put all the tax on business and none on people. When you raise taxes on business, it raises all prices and that’s regressive.

Daily: Business don’t pay any taxes of any kind to nobody any time. They won’t tell you that at that stupid college of yours because they don’t want you to know that.

If you go to the May Company and buy a pair of shoes, do you think they say the taxes on the shoes? No way. What do you think Exxon does with the gas tax you pay. Every week they send it to the government. Do you drive a car?

Jarvis: Horshesht. The only people who shut their pants were the politicians, and I was playing on their fears. But the people, I want’t playing on their fears at all. That’s a real some goddamn stupid politician’s dream after he’s been smoking marijuana.

Daily: I mean the fears of losing your house because of (high property taxes).

Jarvis: I didn’t have to play on their fears—they were going to lose their houses. The only fears I played on were available to me? Why should I buy an American car?

Jarvis: Because it’s the best thing available to you. You’re a jacksass to buy a Datson. Anybody that has any brains, don’t but a foreign car. You’d lose your ass and you’d deserve it—you ought to know better. You need some education; maybe I’d contribute to you.

Daily: I’d appreciate it. After Proposition 13 passed, the spirit caught on around the state. Do you think this will happen with income tax?

Jarvis: Yes, because the people are gradually getting intelligence—especially the ones that don’t go to school. A lot of the states have half the property tax we have (Texas) has no income tax and they have better education and less crime. And every time goes up, we build a goddamn big Rolls Royce out there, a Mercedes-Benz, and call it education.

And now it’s (gas tax) going up fast, because a lot of environmentalists in this country prevent us from having oil and gas.

Supreme Court expands rights

WASHINGTON 'AP' — The Supreme Court, putting another dent in the doctrine of sovereign immunity today broadly expanded an individual's right to sue the federal government.

By a 5-4 vote, the court fashioned a new rule weakening the federal government's defense against lawsuits seeking damages based directly on a constitutional violation.

To fend off such a suit, the government must now only point to alternative methods of getting relief but also must show that Congress has provided an alternative remedy which it explicitly declared to be a substitute for recovery directly under the Constitution, the court said.

Specifically, the justices said federal prisoners or other plaintiffs are entitled to monetary compensation for damage to property.
Whale Rock opens for fishing

BY JIM WITTY
San Luis Obispo Daily Staff Writer

As a result of a hard fought legal battle between the city of San Luis Obispo and the San Luis Obispo Sportsmen's Association, Whale Rock Reservoir will be opened to fishing.

In 1978, the California Supreme Court declared that it is the responsibility of the Whale Rock Reservoir to allow fishing and to establish a self-sustaining fish population, according to city planner Terry Fairbanks.

While the construction of the dam began, the city fathers at San Luis Obispo worried there would be damaging effects to the Morro Bay, according to Roy Parsons, president of the Sportsmen's Association.

But it was apparent the reservoir would not be open to public fishing, the Association tried civil suit.

At the suit, fishing on opening day of trout season last year it was closed, according to Parsons.

The city tried to get a morning order against the club and the sportsmen had a cross suit.

Parsons said the war was on.

According to Parsons, the San Luis Obispo Sportsmen's Association won the cross suit and a subsequent appeal. The last appeal was made to the Supreme Court and failed.

The people opposed to fishing in the lake are concerned with the purity of the drinking water, said J.H. Fitzpatrick, secretary of the Whale Rock Commission. Fitzpatrick cited deterioration of the water as a natural consequence of public recreation.

Glenn sparks, conservation aid for the Department of Fish and Game said, "Legally they can't close it. It's an open body of water.

He indicated that people pay money for fishing licenses which entitle them to fish.

Sparks said that anglers will be pleased with the "trophy fishing" in the reservoir.

"Sparks said, "In essence, it will basically be Whale Rock Reservoir for fishing only."

There are both land-locked steelhead and sucker fish in the reservoir, according to Sparks. They are now in the process of trapping the suckers which are relatively worthless "garbage fish," said Sparks.

The California Conservation Corp is in the process of building a trail and an application for a federal grant is in the works, said Sanville.

Sanville said, "There's no specific schedule for the opening of the reservoir but we're hoping by the end of the summer."

But Parsons noted, "I suspect that it will be a great fishing season when it opens."
Ma Jones allowed baby to grow up to be cowboy

BY DAVE BONTA
Daily Staff Writer

"Mommies don’t let your babies grow up to be cowboys," crooned country-and-western singers Waylon Jennings and Willie Nelson.

Cal Poly rodeo team member Johnny Jones has reflected on Jennings’ and Nelson’s lyrics as he has been gored in the hand by the horn of a steer several times and has had his earlobe cut off then sewn back on.

But Jones still said, rather nonchalantly, that his mother isn’t really worried about him getting hurt.

Jones’ mother has witnessed rodeo injuries before, as her husband is former steer wrestler Johnny Jones Sr., and perhaps has come to realize injuries are part of the sport.

In any case, the younger Jones is aware of the occupational hazards of wrestling 550-700-pound animals and is now enlisting on a rodeo career which may lead him to the world championship in steer wrestling—a title his father won in 1976.

The 19-year-old from Morro Bay is currently ranked number one in the nation in steer wrestling and at one time this year was top-ranked in calf roping too.

The success that Jones has known is due in part to his own hard work and the presence of his father. Jones said his father never really forced him into rodeo competition, but instead provided him with the opportunity if he wanted it. He took advantage of that opportunity when he competed in rodeos for the first time as a sophomore in high school. He said he found it to be "fun" and has participated ever since.

The elder Jones has continued to follow his son. See page 4.

Coaches build scholars

BY TOM JOHNSON
Daily Sports Editor

The athletes who spoke to keep "closer" in on the academic performance of its athletes and channel their effort toward good grades have been successful.

The coaches are motivated to do this. They say their job is not to develop the athlete’s physical potential to the fullest, but to help their student-athletes reach their academic potential as well.

Harmonious relationship existed between sports and academics. Athletes, the coaches believe, have come to realize the importance of developing the athlete's minds.

This myth was exploded last November when Arizona State officials were caught forging transcripts for eight football players in order to make them eligible to compete. Sports programs at large universities were exposed as no more than flesh factories, churning out athletes for professional competition with no thought of developing the athlete’s minds.

Oakland's Wilson wrote Raiders off

BY BILL BROCK

Joining a marathon race during the final stages and pretending to win is getting to be a deliberate procedure for some people, but one Cal Poly professor almost did it unwittingly.

Dr. Rob Logan, an associate professor of journalism, was visiting friends in Pebble Beach on April 20 and decided he'd go for a run. During the course of his outing, he became disoriented and began to head toward what he thought was his friend's home.

Shortcutting through a thick hedge, he was startled to find a group of about 40 persons looking at him and applauding. He was even more amazed when a man stepped forward to shake his hand and photographer's welcoming committee noticed not only was he not wearing a number, he was dressed in full-length sweat clothing.

Logan admitted the whole occurrence was an "amazing coincidence" and he was not inspired by the West German who appeared to beat Frank Shorter in the 1972 Olympic Marathon last week. It is unknown, however, if he influenced Rosie Ruiz to win the women's race.

Ruggers drop season finale

The Cal Poly Rugby club, bested by adjutants, dropped their season finale through San Luis City team 10-3 Saturday.

The Mustangs battled Stefari Luis for most of the first period, but Mike Pekaiko went down with a collarbone fracture and Cal Poly had no one experienced to fill the void.

San Luis City capitalized on the opportunity to add six points and assure the victory.

Though Cal Poly lost, Coach Kerry Stevens noted several positive points about his team's play. "Everyone played a good game. The defense played good which has been our strength all year."

AN OPEN LETTER TO HOWARD JARVIS

Assembly
California Legislature

CAROL HALLETT
ASSOCIATE MINORITY LEADER

April 28, 1980

Mr. Howard Jarvis, Chairman
California Tax Reduction Movement
6365 Wilshire Boulevard - Suite 350
Los Angeles, California 90048

Dear Mr. Jarvis:

Over the last weekend, your interview in the Cal Poly Mustang Daily in San Luis Obispo was called to my attention again and again.

To say that I am chagrined and disappointed in your attitude and language is to put it mildly. Without any provocation, you insulted and maligned the university, its students and faculty, and the County and City of San Luis Obispo, using the most vulgar kind of language.

Both the county and the school are in the 29th Assembly District, which I represent, and while they need no defense from me, I cannot let your sourrious and completely uncalled for attack pass without comment.

You owe every student and faculty member at Cal Poly and every resident of San Luis Obispo County an apology.

Regardless, however, I believe you have hurt the chances that Prop. 9 has of passing in the 29th District. Many of my constituents already are questioning my support of Prop. 9 because they identify it closely with you.

You have left me no alternative but to explain to them publicly that while I continue strongly to support Prop. 9 on its merits, I do not in any way support or condone what you have said or the manner in which you said it.

There are many excellent reasons to support Prop. 9:

- Increasing state surpluses literally demand a tax cut;
- The money it will leave in taxpayers' pockets and the stimulation it will bring to the state's economy;
- A real chance to cut waste in state spending.

But, it will be difficult for voters clearly to distinguish between the merits of Prop. 9 and your irrelevant comments.

I strongly urge you to apologize immediately to the faculty and students at Cal Poly and to residents of the county. It is important that Prop. 9 pass. Outbursts such as yours in the Mustang Daily will not help.

Sincerely,

Carol Hallett
Mrs. Carol Hallett
