CAR error nixed status of business seniors

BY TOM CONLON
Staff Writer

An error in the computer programming of Fall quarter registration forms for about 100 senior business students denied them their preference in class enrollment.

Registrar Gerald Puncheon said the error involved the class prefix numbers used to program the computer. Business classes were coded with a seven digit number while most other classes were assigned a five digit number. Puncheon said,

"The problem was just not anticipated and no one in particular was responsible," Puncheon said.

He added, "... it was a very unfortunate one-time error." When the quarter started the business department was faced with the hectic task of enrolling the seniors in the proper classes before the add deadline expired in a week.

"We had a couple of nervous days, but we were able to get most everybody accommodated," Business Dean Robert Coe said.

Coe said the department received no further complaints related to soil structure and the Diablo Canyon power plant's interaction; however, a structural engineer also noted several instances where building and equipment were capable of withstanding a magnitude higher than they were designed to survive.

"We can learn about earthquakes' effects on structures that survive as much as from instruments," the former University of Illinois professor said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A dozen years ago, Eugene McCarthy ran for president against policies that Eugene Rostow advocated. McCarthy was a dove on Vietnam and Rostow was an undersecretary of State known for his hawkish line. Now Rostow and McCarthy are bedfellows: They've both endorsed Ronald Reagan for president.

That's not the only unlikely alliance forming around Reagan.

The GOP nominee picked up the endorsements of the Ku Klux Klan—which he quickly disavowed—and of two black civil rights leaders.

He has been backed by two national unions and an organization of local police and firemen's associations. Customarily, if organized labor can't abide the Democratic candidate, it stays neutral.

McCarthy, a former senator from Minnesota, was a Democratic peace candidate in the 1968 and 1972 primaries and was an independent candidate for president in 1976.

Blast at Spanish school kills 64

BILBAO, Spain (AP)—A powerful gas explosion ripped through a grammar school in a poverty-stricken mining town in northern Spain Thursday, killing 64 or more children and injuring more than 10 others, officials said.

The blast caused the collapse of a four-story building, one of three units of the Marcelino Ugalde school in Ortuella, eight miles north-west of here in an iron-mining region of Vizcaya province. One eyewitness said it looked as if the building “had been swallowed by an earthquake.”

Rescue workers said more than 50 bodies had been recovered five hours after the blast. But sources at two hospitals in Bilbao said 64 bodies had been brought there by Thursday evening.

About 3 children remained hospitalized, and doctors said six of them were in critical condition.

EXECUTIONS MAY RESUME IN STATE

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)— Over caustic protests from the chief justice, the State Supreme Court on Thursday upheld a death penalty conviction and may possibly have signaled the resumption of executions in California.

In a 4-3 decision by Justice Frank Richardson, the high court refused to throw out the conviction of Earl Lloyd Jackson, 22, a black man, and the sentence of death he was convicted in the 1979 slayings of two elderly Long Beach women.

The court also reaffirmed the “presumed” constitutionality of California’s 1977 death penalty law, saying that it does not appear to “clearly, positively and unmitigably violate the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments.

The last execution in the state took place in 1967, when Aaron Mitchell went to San Quentin’s gas chamber for slaying a Sacramento policeman.

Jackson was convicted and sentenced for the fatal beating of Vernita Curtis, a widow in her 80’s, on Aug. 29, 1979, and the beating strangulation and sexual assault of Gladys Ott, 90, a week later. Under the state’s death penalty law, these crimes were considered punishable by death because of two special circumstances—murder in the course of a robbery and multiple killings.

He’s burned out

BY STEPEN FOX

AP Style Writer

Los Angeles (AP) — He’s tired all the time, often calls work or home with trouble concentrating, snaps at co-workers, opposes new ideas and is generally depressed and cynical about the job. He’s burned out.

Burnout cases, says Dr. Eli Glogow, are increasing in almost all professions among modern managers and executives forced to deal with intensifying job demands along with life’s normal ups and downs.

“It’s hitting education, business, all kinds of public and private sectors, says Glogow, associate professor at the University of Southern California’s School of Public Administration. “It’s a terrible waste of manpower and it’s increasing.

System range from heavy drinking to argumentative ness to zombie-like behavior, says Glogow, adding that burnout is something most people recognize when they see it.

People who work with someone who has burned out know it intuitively, he said in an interview. “It’s a kind of physical as well as emotional fatigue caused by excess stress and strain on the individual in which the individual really begins to wear out.

Most people who burn out don’t get much help from the organization where it happened, says Glogow, although more sophisticated companies know that burnout hurts both the employee and the bottom line.

“Sometimes the individual is conscious of it and sometimes not,” he said. “Drinking, tranquilizers and drugs are ways they cope with it. Very few organizations are doing anything to help them. But that will in crease. There will be more programs to help them.”

There’s no simple way to prevent burnout, says Glogow, because what drives one manager off the edge doesn’t always bother the guy next to him.

“It’s highly individualistic, he said. “You cannot say if this thing happens to that guy he’s going to be a burnout. Each of us responds to the same kind of event differently.”

Speaker details the fall of Jarvis

BY TOM KINSOLVING

Protestion (9)'s defeat this year was only a mere setback for tax crusader Howard Jarvis, who will probably be back on the next June ballot with a "Jaws III" proposition, said a Cal Poly associate professor.

The Rise and Fall of Howard Jarvis was the subject of speech in instructor Jim Conway's talk before a faculty audience in a seminar held in the faculty office building Thursday.

Conway, who has studied Jarvis and is on sabbatical to research his rhetoric and communication techniques, said the 76-year-old tax rebel is now recuperating from California's rejection of his last proposition.

Jarvis is now at work on a plan to cut the pensions of California state employees, Conway said.

"This talk is to explain why the tax are turned to rubber," Conway said, pointing out that the contrast of the overwhelming popularity of Jarvis and Proposition 13 two years ago as compared to Proposition 9 and its sponsor in 1980.

Nominated as one of four leading candidates for Time magazine "Man of the Year" in 1978, Jarvis began to look and sound, like the politicians he opposed.

Speech instructor Jim Conway appears to be at a loss for words after fielding a question about tax slasher Howard Jarvis. Jarvis declined in popularly, saying Jarvis began to look and sound, "like the politicians he opposed.

Extended illness forces Soviet premier to resign

MOSCOW (AP)

Premier Alexei N. Kosygin, a Fixture of the top Soviet leadership for 16 years, resigned his post Thursday because of illness. He was succeeded by old Nikolai Tikhonov.

Kosygin, 76, had decided to step down from the second most powerful position in the country during a meeting of the Supreme Soviet, the national parliament.

Tikhonov has long been associated with Brezhnev and his takeover of the presidency in the Kremlin hierarchy.

Kosygin came to power in 1964 in a leadership "troika" with Communist Party chief Brezhnev and then President, Nikolai Podgorny following the ouster of Nikita Khrushchev.

As premier, Kosygin was boss of the Soviet economy and of the day-to-day running of the government, and served as a much-traveled diplomatic troubleshooter.

Western analysts said they believe his departure will have little immediate impact on the direction of Soviet policy.

Brezhnev and Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko are widely believed to run foreign affairs.

Kosygin's grip on economic policy has loosened as his health has deteriorated, although the resignation could be seen as a symbol of change for the deeply troubled economy. Kosygin, who reportedly suffered at least two heart attacks in recent years, has not been seen in public since Aug. 3, closing two heart attacks in recent years, has not been seen in public since Aug. 3, closing.

He was absent when Brezhnev announced his decision to step down.

"He has been trying to resign for some time," a Soviet source who knows Kosygin's family said. "He just wanted to rest, to fish."

But other Soviet leaders have been reluctant.

Supreme Court refuses appeal from ex-Panther

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The California Supreme Court has refused to hear an appeal from former Black Panther Leader Huey P. Newton of his conviction on a gun charge two years ago.

The high court's ruling Wednesday means Newton must now go before Alameda County Superior Court Judge Joseph Karen for sentencing.

Speech has been free on $80,000 bail since his trial and faces a maximum sentence of three years in prison.

Newton was convicted of being in possession of firearms. He had been convicted of one other weapons charge in the same trial, but was acquitted of that charge on appeal. The charges stemmed from the alleged pistol-whipping of Newton's tailor.

Bay area ventures to Poly

BY BOB GRIFFITH
Special to the Daily

The Greg Kihn band, a Bay Area favorite, will headline the ASI concert committee's second show of the year on Thursday, Oct. 30, at 8 p.m.

Rip Masters and the Range Rockers, a Los Angeles-based rockabilly band, will kick off the Chumash Auditorium show. Student tickets are on sale for $5 in the University Union.

While some extremists contend that the Greg Kihn Band is new wave, it would be more accurate to say that Kihn's band blazed a trail paralleling the new wave, establishing its own brand of raw, purist rock 'n' roll.

Kihn's material, a rich and melodic form of power pop, is accessible to both new wave fans and traditional rockers, while an embarrassment to neither.

Since the band's conception in 1975, Kihn has concentrated on building a solid—some say cultist—following in the San Francisco Bay Area.

The Berkeley-based band comprises Kihn on rhythm guitar, Dave Carper on lead, Larry Lynch on drums, Steve Wright on bass and Gary Phillips—formerly of Earthquake—on keyboards. All are veteran rockers.

A virtuoso classical guitarist will return to the Cal Poly theater as the opening show of the 1980-81 Quintessence Fine Arts Series.

Internationally acclaimed musician Pepe Romero, who also came to Poly last year as part of the Quintessence series, will begin his recital at 8:15 p.m.

Romero, born in Malaga, Spain, in 1944, began his career at the age of 3, when his father, also a famous guitarist, began teaching him to play. He gave his first performance at the age of 16. Romero has achieved fame as both a recitalist and soloist, playing with orchestras around the world, and working with such conductors as Arthur Fiedler and Eugen Ormandy. He has recorded for Angel, Philips, Mercury and Contemporary Records.

Los Hermanos: untraditionally Mexican

BY ANGELA VENABLE
Staff Writer

Guacamole, tacos and burritos. All the dishes commonly found in a Mexican diet are on the menu at Los Hermanos, San Luis Obispo’s newest south-of-the-border restaurant.

But the selection at Los Hermanos, located in a large brick building on Osos Street facing the County Courthouse, includes several “Espectaculares.”

Chingaderas, Pancho Villa Tacos and wine margaritas.

Inside the restaurant, the brick and stone walls are decorated with oil paintings of Spanish vases. Mexican pewter and bronzed skinned people.

A choice is offered of sitting in a quiet booth off in a small room or in an open dining room. Wooden tables and chairs, many with beautiful carvings, cluster the floor.

Hot tortilla chips and fresh chile salsa top every inhabited table. The salsa is the traditional spicy combination of peppers, tomatoes, onions and various seasonings. The salsa was good as homemade, if not better.

On the extensive menu, there is a choice of appetizers such as nachos, quesadillas and guacamole dip. The guacamole was rich with chunks of avocado and spices.

The menu has the traditional expected enchiladas, tacos, tostadas and the rest, but there were added extras—Los Hermanos’ Espectaculares.

The chingadera is an extremely large chicken tostada, served with guacamole and sour cream on a bed of lettuce. The Pancho Villa Taco was an overstuffed taco with sour cream, guacamole and chile verde.

A favorite for seafood lovers is the San Francisco ceviche, an enchilada stuffed with crab meat and salsa verde. It is topped with the stables. Complete dinners are served with rice and beans.

The menu included many combination dinners that range in price from $4.25 to $6.95 including soup or salad and a choice of desserts.

Although Los Hermanos has no liquor license their wine cocktails, margaritas, piña coladas, daiquiris, and mescal are almost as good as any made with hard liquor. They go down almost too easy and taste like heaven.

A trip to Los Hermanos isn’t complete without dessert. On the dessert menu ice cream is the only choice that is self explanatory. There are also sopapillas, a deep fried flour tortilla covered with cinnamon and whipped cream; and flan, an egg custard covered with cinnamon.

Both desserts are rich and delicious. There is always the last resort—the after dinner drink. Here the cafe do oro is a good choice.

The service is friendly and efficient, and the food is great, well worth the money. About $18 covers the cost of drinks, a large portion entre, dessert, an after dinner drink, and the tip.

EVELYN WOOD READING DYNAMICS
Jaws II sequel may be on horizon, speaker says was enjoying the status of a folk hero, a man helping the people send an indigent message to the politicians, said Conway.

"Proposition 13 had a charm to it, "he said, adding that as a result, Jarvis was made famous.

Yet, ironically, this fame probably was part of the reason why Jarvis' popularity and image began to erode in later years. Conway noted a February, 1980 Los Angeles Times article, which read: "He Jarvis began to look more like the politicians he despises."

Jarvis' verbal attacks of the opponents of Proposition 9 earlier this year became more abusive, which deteriorated his once popular image, according to Conway. Governor Jerry Brown's criticism was labeled "a bunch of garbage" by Jarvis, who called the governor a "dead dodo."

Even more devastating to the Jarvis image was the Mustang Daily interview last spring, in which Jarvis attacked San Luis Obispo County as "the dumbest, crookedest bunch of god-dammed crap."

A Marvin Field Poll showed, however, that public sentiment against Proposition 9 began to mount, even before Jarvis made his slanderous remarks, said Conway.

The effects of Proposition 13, such as school employee layoffs and new fees for school bus transportation, began to show. The declining state budget surplus and worsening economy also was affecting public feeling for Proposition 9.

Conway said despite the proposition's substantial defeat, Jarvis was quoted claiming he would be "heard from again.

"I wouldn't be surprised if Jarvis II will be here next June election," said Conway.

Nuclear combatants conflict on Diablo earthquake safety

Under questioning from Atomic Safety Licensing Appeal Board members Drs. John Buck and W. Reed Johnson, Newmark said earthquake shock reduction figures recorded for previous quakes could be reasonably applied to the structures at Diablo Canyon. At a break in the proings, lawyer David R. Fleischaker for the Mothers for Peace disagreed with Newmark's testimony.

Fleischaker said one of the buildings used for comparison in the San Fernando Valley Earthquake in 1971 was in "deep soft soil," making it a poor quake shock conductor.

GAUCHOS CLAIM CONFERENCE LEAD WITH VOLLEYBALL VICTORY OVER POLY

If a score of a volley ball match was measured by how the heart and desire was put into it, Cal Poly would have won hands down against Santa Barbara.

The heart and desire only added to team spirit for the Mustangs as Santa Barbara pulled off an exciting victory before 900 vocal fans, 15-10, 7-15, 15-10, and 15-6.
Uranium hazard

Knowledge about uranium—the mineral which eventually fuels nuclear power plants—is scarce and scary. Some experts say the mineral can be safely packaged and put away for millions of harmless years while others insist the potential dangers of uranium mining and nuclear power will be evident within the next one hundred years.

San Luis Obispo county is facing the uranium question right now. Lomex Corporation, a mining outfit based in Corpus Christi in Texas, wants to begin drilling up to 140 test holes on its land claims 20 miles east of Santa Margarita in Los Padres National Forest.

We don’t need it. Furthermore, the first reason is the type of mining Lomex is proposing to use in the area. "In-situ;" a process also known as leaching or solution mining, involves pumping chemicals through a ring of injection wells—the 140 test holes named above. The solution brought to the surface and the uranium is extracted at a plant above ground. Waste is deposited in plastic-lined earthen evaporation ponds.

The problem with "in-situ" is: Where do those chemicals which were pumped into the holes end up? Paso Robles—site of the largest groundwater basin in SLO County—may be subject to water contamination for not days, not decades, but millions of years in the future.

Also, "In-situ" is new to mining technology and little is known about its potential effects. There’s been little government regulation of "in-situ" and Lomex does not know enough about the process to restore the groundwater to its original quality. That’s groundwater we depend on for agriculture, drinking wells and the preservation of our beautiful Santa Lucia Mountain Range.

Another reason to scrap uranium mining is the effect it would have on the people living in the area. The most vocal group, the Red Wind Indians, own land nearby and have drinking wells within one-quarter of a mile of one proposed drilling site. The drilling would have to be done on land which the Indians believe is sacred to native Indian culture.

"Contamination without representation" is what Toby Buffalo, a spokesman for Red Wind, calls the Lomex proposition. And others are also coming in from farmers and residents in the rural area who are afraid their water will be contaminated.

And what for—uranium? The final and most important argument is that we don’t even need the stuff. Because nuclear power is not as widespread as scientists once predicted it would be in 1980, there is currently a glut on the uranium market. Prices are low because opposition against nukes has been high, resulting in fewer plants and therefore a reduced demand for uranium.

Mustang Daily joins the Oak Tree Alliance, Assemblywoman Carol Hallett, Congressman Leon Panetta and the Santa Margarita Advisory Council in asking Secretary of the Interior Cecil D. Andrus to invoke a three-year moratorium on the project under the Federal Land Policy and Management Act.

The Daily goes even further in asking for a complete ban on "in-situ" mining in SLO County and specifically the Los Padres National Forest, 20 miles east of Santa Margarita. Progress will take its toll in San Luis Obispo, but progress which may endanger the health or well-being of this county should not be tolerated. People need to voice their views on such controversial issues like uranium mining and nuclear power which are potential hazards in this nuclear age.

To make your opinion known, write Senator Alan Cranston, 226 Russell Bid., Washington D.C., 20510 or Cecil Andrus, Dept. of Interior, C Street between 18th and 19th Streets 229 Russell Bid., Washington D.C., 20510 or Cecil Andrus, Dept. of Interior, C Street between 18th and 19th Streets 229 Russell Bid., Washington D.C., 20510 or Cecil Andrus, Dept. of Interior, C Street between 18th and 19th Streets 229 Russell Bid., Washington D.C., 20510 or Cecil Andrus, Dept. of Interior, C Street between 18th and 19th Streets 229 Russell Bid., Washington D.C., 20510 or Cecil Andrus, Dept. of Interior, C Street between 18th and 19th Streets 229 Russell Bid., Washington D.C., 20510.

In regard to the moped issue. Mopeds are the poor victims of unclassification. Mopeds are bicycles in some respect, but motorcycles in other ways. Mopeds can legally ride in the bike lanes and also ride in the flow of traffic, according to the SLO police department.

There is a definite parking problem in the motorcycle/moped parking areas. There is simply not enough room for motorcycles and mopeds. As it stands now, a moped found in the bike racks is subject to a fine from the campus police or destruction from bicycle vigilantes.
