Although not specifically aware of the state statute barring candidate or issue endorsements by the student press, most of the state university system newspapers do not print political endorsements, a recent Mustang Daily survey revealed. Student papers in the University of California system do make political endorsements, however, as they do not fall under the authority of the statute.

Title 5, Section 42403 of the California Administrative Code, which states that "funds of any university organization may not be used to support or oppose any candidate for public office..." was responsible for a quick trip to the recycling bin for the Nov. 4 issue of the Mustang.

The paper was killed after faculty advisor Professor James Hayes discovered the violation in an unsigned editorial supporting President Jimmy Carter for re-election.

Of the 12 CSUC campus newspapers contacted, only one, San Francisco State's The Phoenix, said it "would have run an endorsement" if the editorial board had reached a consensus on which candidate to support.

The Spartan Daily of San Jose State University does not make endorsements of candidates or issues, because, as editor-in-chief Bonnie Brewer said, "It's been made very clear to us that we couldn't do that kind of thing."

"Editor David Smith of the Cal State Long Beach publication The Daily Aztec said his paper prints signed opinion articles which may endorse a candidate, but that they do not print unsigned editorials.

"We were aware we couldn't do it, but we didn't know exactly where it said that we couldn't," Smith said.

Vincent Troia, editor of the Daily Aztec of San Diego State University said his paper does not endorse candidates or issues, although the staff at the Daily Aztec was unaware of Section 42403's prohibition of endorsements.

Other schools contacted by the Mustang Daily indicated that an editorial policy of "sticking with campus and local issues" precluded any public candidate endorsements.

"We concentrate on campus affairs... We don't make endorsements," said Kathy Schubert, editor of the Cal Poly Pomona Poly Post.

Curtis Scott of the Sonoma State Star said that paper only covers campus related news.

An attorney for the UC Board of Regents said the nine-campus system is not bound by Title 5 of the Administrative Code. Chief Associate Counsel Jim Holot said the UC

"There was no way this issue could have been resolved informally," said Beecher, who is confident the board will rule in the UC's favor.

The spokesman for the administration was unavailable for comment.

The post-tenure review policy called for a CSUC administrator's would require a performance review of tenured faculty once every five years. Although at Cal Poly all faculty members are evaluated on an annual basis, most campuses don't require review of tenured faculty, said Beecher.

Beecher said the suit charges an unfair practice by the CSUC officials in making a unilateral decision on a matter that is potentially bargainable after petitions had been filed by the UPC and by the Congress of Faculty Associations to become the faculty representative collective bargaining.

The announcement of the UPC's legal action follows mediation efforts of state Public Employment Relations Board members Monday. Apparently such efforts have failed, Beecher said the UPC's suit will be heard on the first week of February before the board in Sacramento.

According to Beecher, the union filed the suit after CSUC representatives had dropped their posture review plan. Neither union or CSUC officials would compromise, said Beecher, so the three-member PEBB will decide the union's case against administrators in February.

The United Professors of California is going ahead with its threatened lawsuit against administrators of the California State University and Colleges, the Daily learned yesterday.

According to Poly chapter UPC president Lloyd Becher, the union is going ahead with its unfair labor practice suit against CSUC administrators because of an offending policy drawn up by administrators earlier this year.

The policy calls for a performance review of all tenured CSUC faculty every five years by peers and by campus presidents.

Reagan will cut budget 6 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) - Advisers to President-elect Ronald Reagan have drawn a list of possible government cutbacks totaling nearly 6 percent of the 1981 federal budget, a principal aide to Reagan disclosed Wednesday.

The areas where the cuts would be made were not disclosed, although it was indicated that none would be made in the defense budget.

Edwin Meese III, who is directing the Reagan transition into the White House, said a spending control task force drew up the list so that Reagan could fulfill a campaign pledge to cut the budget by 2 percent.

Democrats on the House Budget Committee challenged Reagan to honor that promise by voting Tuesday to set a budget ceiling that would force the president-elect to cut spending by $17 billion, or about 2½ percent, from the current budget drafted by the committee's staff.

The committee action would reduce the budget from $648.7 billion to $631.7 billion and reduce the projected deficit from $38.6 billion to $25 billion.

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) - Voyager 1 sailed beneath the shimmering rings of Saturn and explored a half-dozen icy moons as it climaxed a monthlong journey Wednesday, Voyager buzzed the moon Tethys, and after passing Saturn it was probing the little worlds home and reaching speeds of more than 50,000 mph.

Leading mayors, edgy about what the conservative tide in Congress and the White House may mean to urban programs, are meeting Thursday to draft an "urban agenda" to be presented to the Reagan administration.

What we are likely to see under Reagan is a substantial acceleration of trends already begun under Carter," said Thomas Muller, an economist with the Urban Institute, a Washington-based research organization.

Federal programs involving mass transit, air and water quality, and education are considered to be vulnerable to cuts, or even elimination, as Reagan looks for ways to simultaneously balance the budget, reduce taxes, and boost defense outlays.

System has “no statutory counterpart” to section 2303 governing the publication of political endorsements. Conversation with representatives of the student press in the UC system indicated that they believe endorsements are fair game.

Of the seven UC campus papers contacted by the Mustang, six said they regularly endorse candidates for public office. The UCLA Daily Bruin editor Frank Spotnitz said, “We endorse whoever we want, whenever we want.” The UC Santa Barbara Daily Nexus supported positions on the each initiative on the ballot in November, according to Nexus managing editor Cathy Kelly, and the UC Davis California Aggie endorsed John Anderson for president in this last national election.

Mustang Daily adviser Professor James Hayes said it was by way of a “fortuitous coincidence” that the Nov. 4 issue of the paper was sent back to have the offending Carter endorsement removed. On that day, Hayes said the newspaper was without a circulation manager due to reorganization. For that reason, the 7,000 copies sat outside his office door, awaiting distribution by one of Hayes’ journalism classes. “I couldn’t miss it,” he said, of the endorsement and added that he believes someone spotted the endorsement before he did, and left the papers at his office door to ensure the article would come to his attention.

Despite being supported completely by advertising revenues, Hayes said the Mustang is considered an auxiliary organization because it is put together and printed on state property. As advisor, Hayes had the authority to recommend replacing the endorsement with the short notice that appeared in its place. Editor Andrew Jones reluctantly agreed, and the editorial was killed.

Student teaches others means of self-defense

According to the class syllabus, the underlying theme of the lessons is designed for each individual to develop his own strengths necessary for defending himself. Martin said the Students for Personal Security—a Cal Poly group concerned with crime prevention and individual security—plan to use his services to teach its members self-defense techniques.

An explanation

Two headlines were conspicuously absent from the front page of the Mustang Daily yesterday. This embarrassing error was committed during production and wasn’t discovered until too late. It shouldn’t happen again.

Health care professionals can improve their understanding of human sexuality in “Sexuality and Health Care Issues,” a Cal Poly Extension course that will be offered on Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 22-23.

The course will focus on additional and reeducational techniques useful for staff development and highlights from recent research findings. Several contemporary issues, such as sexual dysfunction and treatment, will be examined, according to teacher David Lynn-Hill of Chapman college.

Class meetings will be from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 22 and 23, in Room 205 of the Business Administration and Education Building, at Cal Poly.

Fee for the one-unit professional-credit course is $29, and preregistration is required by Friday, Nov. 14.

The course is approved by the California State Board of Registered Nurs- ing for 10 hours of continuing education credit for nurses. It is also approved for 10 hours of continuing education credit for psychologists.

Mustangs seek third running crown

BY ANDY BERGER

Hoping for a repeat performance, Cal Poly’s cross country team ventured to Kenosha, Wis. to run in the Division II National Championships. The Mustangs will be seeking their third consecutive cross country championship and their fifth straight running title since 1978.

Entering the meet as the nation’s top ranked school and the overwhelming favorite to repeat, Cal Poly is coming off an easy win in the Western Regionals on Nov. 1. The Mustangs left for the University of Wisconsin-Parkside Wednesday morning and will return on Sunday afternoon.

Many schools are in contention with the Mustangs for the team title, but agreeing on which schools is a different story. Poly head coach Steve Miller, a man who should know, thinks that the Mustangs’ closest rivals, UC Riverside and Humboldt, will be at the front with Poly. The Division II rankings have Humboldt fifth and Riverside 12th in the rankings. Southwestern Missouri and Indiana University-Pennsylvania are ranked second and third.

Individuals, Terry Gibbon of Penbrook looks to be the favorite, according to Miller. Henry just missed making the Australian Olympic team this past summer. Changing him will be Matt Curp of Central Missouri, and the two Californian runners, Mark Conover of Humboldt and Steve Alvarez of Riverside. Also in the picture will be Terry Gibbon, Poly’s top runner, and Conover’s teammate at Humboldt, Danny Grime.

But, as Miller says, “Invariably someone comes in and runs the race of his life. You don’t know what’s going to happen.”

Miller thinks that the two week layoff helped his team, but it wasn’t too good for senior Ivan Huff. Plagued by illness the first part of the season, Huff ran two good races at the end of the season. As he left for Wisconsin with the team, Huff again was nursing a cold.

He will run Saturday morning because as Miller says, “He’s too tough of a guy not to run in this meet. He is too much of a competitor.”

Miller was worried at first that it could become pneumonia or bronchitis, but Huff has been overdoing it on orange juice lately and should run. Poly has one, extremely large advantage going into the race—half of the teams there already think that Poly has won the championship.

Noted Miller, “Our program has been so successful that it’s tough for other teams to feel they’re going to beat us. The other teams have a problem before it starts when we’re the overwhelming favorites.”

The Mustangs have three goals they want accomplished in America’s Dairyland; 1) they want to win the national championship; 2) they want to have seven All-Americans which means placing all their men in the top 25, so no other team has ever done, and 3) they want to qualify one or two runners for the Division I meet.

A runner can go to Wichita State on Nov. 24 for the NCAA Division I Meet if he finishes in the top six at Wisconsin. Miller says he wouldn’t be shocked if two Poly runners made it to Kansas.

This year’s race will be different than in the past two years in that the Mustangs won’t blow the opposition out of Michigan.
Not again…!

On Sept. 22, 1977, Burt Lance resigned in disgrace from his post as head of the Office of Management and Budget after he was charged with making several overdrafts from the First National Bank in Calhoun, Georgia.

The Lance resignation was significant because it underscored a grave problem which made the Carter administration politically impotent—many of the men appointed to Carter’s cabinet were cronies from his days as governor of Georgia and were not completely competent.

Unfortunately, Reagan is falling into the same trap—he is considering all the influential persons of today who will go into battle with his administration. He should keep his eyes trained on the present and choose the Economic Advisors by Nixon, is considered a prime candidate for the Secretary of the Treasury. Ironically, it is because he convinced Nixon to escalate the Vietnam War that Kissinger mystique has been, or at least should be, tarnished. Without Kissinger’s dogged support of the Shah, the hostage crisis might have never happened.

The White House transcripts reveal that Nixon “strongly suggested” that Kissinger wiretap top advisors including Haig, and even himself. Reagan has the inside track for the Chief of Staff, the Secretary of State, and the Secretary of the Treasury with political cronies left over from the Nixon administration.

The Los Angeles Times reported in a November 6 editorial that George Shultz, the Secretary of the Treasury and the chief domestic and economic affairs adviser to Nixon, has the inside track for the Chief of Staff position. Shultz may have impressed both Nixon and the media by his hard work and dedication, but neither trait helped him grapple with the economy as inflation skyrocketed to the highest peak in 23 years, a fact which forced him to resign in 1974. If Shultz could not handle inflation, can Reagan expect him to solve the country’s intricate domestic problems?

Alexander Haig, Henry Kissinger and William Simon are all reportedly vying for the Secretary of State post.

The man placed in charge of this nation’s foreign policy must be a man committed to peace. Yet when Haig was the supreme allied commander for NATO during the Vietnam War, he supported a large military buildup against the Soviet Union. Haig, the Chief of Staff after H.R. Halderman resigned, fought to keep the Watergate transcripts from being released. This is perhaps because he wrote a memo between Alexander Butterfield and Jeb Magruder which said that Haig would “handle” Lawyer Clark Clifford who spoke out against Nixon’s Vietnam policy.

Kissinger deserves all the credit he has received for his diplomatic victories in Rhodesia and China. But the Kissinger mystique has been, or at least should be, tarnished because he convinced Nixon to escalate the Vietnam War by invading Cambodia. More recently Kissinger helped the Shah of Iran enter the United States so that his cancer of the spleen could be treated. Without Kissinger’s dogged support of the Shah, the hostage crisis might have never happened. The White House transcripts reveal that Nixon “strongly suggested” that Kissinger wiretap top administrative officials. It is not known whether he complied with this order, but Morton Halperin, former consultant to the National Security Council, was convinced he did and sued Kissinger and several others (including Haig) for wiretapping his phone.

William Simon, who seceded Shultz as Secretary of the Treasury and was the top administrator for the Federal Energy Office, is the third in line for secretary of state consideration. When Simon was appointed he vowed to cut inflation and was true to his word—the inflation rate dropped from 6 percent to 12 percent. But unemployment jumped from 5.5 percent to 7.6 percent which caused the nation to slide into a recession. As FEO head Simon Heaver did formulate a cogent plan to beat the energy crunch, which he admitted in a December, 1973, interview in U.S. News and World Report.

Alan Greenspan, chosen as the chief of the Council of Economic Advisors by Nixon, is considered a prime candidate for the Secretary of the Treasury. Ironically, it is the head of the CEA who traditionally has the president’s ear on economic matters, but Greenspan apparently did not speak loudly enough when he served as head of the CEA as Simon proved the moving force in Ford’s economic program. If Greenspan is named as chief of the President’s Office in the Ford economic plan even though he had the main part, can he be expected to lead the Reagan economic charge?

Because the men Reagan chooses as his top advisors will formulate the country’s policies for the next four years, Reagan should not cast his eyes toward the past and choose men infected with the Nixon era. He should keep his eyes trained on the present and choose the influential persons of today who will go into battle with his and hopefully defeat some of the major problems plaguing the nation.

Frawls

This time I’ll catch Ray Benda’s attention with my super-smooth,etter-price delivery. Penny Boy.

AND ANOTHER ONE BITES THE DUST...

Now that Republican mullahs control the Senate and much of the House the new economic policies should be an amalgam mixture of nostalgias and ignorance.

Tight budget-balancing as an example. Some of Reagan’s advisors can keep their desires for a constitutional amendment to balance the budget and spreading the cost of spending in the closet: others, such as William Simon, would see their books ask questions for just such an amendment. Forcibly budget-balancing is, of course, in absurd practice that would insult the Constitution and the health of the economy if adopted. Here is a partial complaint:

“Runaway” spending in a myth. Government spending has increased, but so has the gross national product. Spending and the interest cost of the public debt have steadily remained near 20 percent and two percent of the GNP respectively for the past decade.

Sackling the president’s budget authority is a bad idea, for Congress moves too slowly. The Congressional Budget Act of 1974, supposed to give Congress more budget authority, has only been used in the works: they are too two months overdue, for example, on next year’s budget.

Staining the Constitution with economic faddism is a disgrace. The most popular proposal today (the Heinz-Stone amendment) would turn our nation’s charter into a textbook on econtrometrics.

Tax cuts are another example. The freed money, sorry to say, will go right back into food, fuel, housing and other inflated essentials; the money will stimulate demand but not necessarily production.

Spending cuts? Reagan has already promised a larger defense budget. That savings social programs and revenue sharing, and when Reagan tries to cut these he’ll discover how loud a voice the affected can muster.

Both the Republicans and the Democratic deficit-demons must find a way to face a growing economic fact of life: monopoly. The monopoly power of labor (unions) and production (conglomerates and cartels) is confusing the once-simple workings of the marketplace and crippling solutions for inflation. The last serious attempt at solving this kind of “cost-push” inflation—Nixon’s wage-price controls—was a dismal failure. Reagan’s solutions will only feed the fire.

Editor

I would like to inform the Cal Poly community of an “inappropriate” use of money and power by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company. On Monday, PG and E distributed its publication, Public Issue throughout campus. This is a violation of university regulations. No group, whether on or off campus, may distribute propaganda on campus except in the U.U. plaza and on the library lawn—the “free speech” areas.

PG and E is now playing the shady games they have accused the anti-nuke groups of playing. If we have to play by the rules, so does PG and E. By this way, most of these issues of Public Issue have been confiscated and will be recycled to save energy.
