

Poly Canyon Observation Deck

Jordan H. Morofsky

The Poly Canyon Observation Deck is a project that I have been moving through the preconstruction for the past year. It started as a solo project but quickly evolved into an interdisciplinary project involving two architectural engineers and myself. Together we developed a project proposal that we presented to Cal Poly Facilities along with our building permit application. They have approved our proposal and have awarded us a provisional building permit which will be approved after they review the 100% construction documents. We have been working the past 2 quarters to finalize the design, pick materials, and perform a complete structural analysis. My partners recently completed the structural calculations which are now under peer review and waiting to be stamped.
