Orion Nature Quarterly
136 East 64th Street
New York, New York 10021

Orion Nature Quarterly aims to: characterize conceptually and practically man's responsibilities to the Earth and all forms of life, and to explore the ethic of humane stewardship; to advance the notion that effective stewardship comes from feelings of respect and admiration for the Earth: man will protect, foster, and nurture what he has come to revere; to help the individual deepen his personal connection with the natural world as a source of enrichment and inner renewal and for his mental well-being.

The magazine seeks to accomplish this by focusing on different nature-related themes in each issue, ranging from animals, wilderness, horticulture, agriculture to meteorology, form and pattern in nature, birds, landscape. Reviews of current as well as children's books are included.
