PL 346 Students Must Clear Their Courses With VA

According to recent instructions received from the Veterans Administration, effective Nov. 4, any veteran student who desires admission or re-admission must be in good standing to obtain credit for courses taken. VA requires that the course to be taken be approved by the college, that the student has been admitted to the course by the college, and that the student be in good standing at the college.

Vince Stassen, a member of the three-man dairy judging team, placed fourth in beef, second in senior Herefords, and fourth in groups of three trailer. Reserve champion Shorthorn steer was owned cooperatively by J. B. Strother, R. C. Tomlinson, J. H. Corg, Gerald Craig, students composing the judging team, and Jessa Anderson, Bank of America vice president, who awarded the horn perpetual trophy.

The champion Shorthorn carload was dusted from Poly last year, going to Idaho. This year, the local Shorthorn carload was sold to R. C. Tomlinson, J. H. Corg, Gerald Craig, students composing the judging team, and Jessa Anderson, Bank of America vice president, who awarded the horn perpetual trophy.

The champion Shorthorn steer was a Shorthorn Junior yearling. These lambs took the champion and second and third in senior Herefords, and second and third in trailer. Reserve champion Shorthorn steer was owned cooperatively by J. B. Strother, R. C. Tomlinson, J. H. Corg, Gerald Craig, students composing the judging team, and Jessa Anderson, Bank of America vice president, who awarded the horn perpetual trophy.

OH Department Trebles Size, Plans Migration

By Jerry Welna

The Cal Poly ornamental horticulture department is now in its 17th year of operation, was started when William H. Brown, present department head, arrived here in 1932. The unit, once a small part of the Home Economics Department, has more than tripled its present six employees. Assistant professor, instructor, and assistant to Brown is a faculty of nine, a class of 23. He and Howes school the department’s present 50 students in general nursery work, landscaping, and related topics.

Projects Emphasized

Student work is particularly emphasized, according to Brown. Twenty-two projects are now in operation at the ranch; these include rose plant propagation, pot plants, bed-lining, stock, and related topics.

Growing Plants

Operations at the unit are now in a temporary state, however. Within a year, according to Brown, the department will move to the old Garcia ranch at the end of Grass Lane. This project provides additional space and, most important, a north slope protects from the prevailing wind.

Move Houses

Brown commented that the nursery business in general looks good for the coming ten years. Houses were built after World War II with little or no landscaping. Now these houses want plants of all kinds and men to landscape the new properties. He estimated that this will go on for at least two years to answer this need.

Campus Incinerators

Create Fire Hazard

All incinerators around the cam­ pus are to be removed because of the fire hazard involved during the dry season, E. A. Stier, security officer, announced today.

The number of the incinerators started a fire in the dry grass this fall, Stier explained. They are also a fire hazard to the older glass houses of the campus. In the future all of the trash will be removed to trucks.

Turkey Snaps Leg — Feast Begins

Eleven years ago this November, one of the poultry students of Cal Poly, San Luis Obispo, put a turkey in a corner of his flockyard. Following considerable debate over what to do with the bird, it was decided to have a banquet with roast turkey as the main course. This incident startled only seven men present at the first banquet, following the presentation of the poultry department head, and Carl L. Brunner, the dean of the college. Through the years, the banquet has grown in popularity and in size; the attendance of the last Saturday, November 4, will be the largest the San Luis Obispo airport for radio installation on one of the aircraft which had been allotted to the San Luis Obispo radio class has held to date. Rich Peterson, instructor in electronics department and its instructor in military aviation, flew to San Luis Obispo from Los Angeles in a personal airplane to attend this event.

Gerry had high praise for the electronic department and its instruction and said he noted much improvement in the radio laboratories since his first visit at Poly one year ago.

Miss E. A. Marston, instructor in English at Cal Poly, attended the workshop conference of the American Association of University Women tomorrow at Asilomar, Calif.

Miss Marston will meet with the chairman of local branches of the AASLH to discuss methods for promoting more programs on national relations and the United Nations Organization.

The San Luis Obispo chapter, in addition to its educational activities, sponsors the annual San Luis Obispo county art show.

Printing Club Meets

Election of officers for the printing student club was held recently. Hal Stinson was nominated as president, Clyde Kerk as vice-president, and Jack McNicoll, as secretary-treasurer of the group. It was decided to have a rogue's dinner at night due to the conflicting activities of the students.

SAN LUIS OBISPO
Joe Joins The Club

Following his episode with middlers, Joe, our suddenly below-average freshman, decided that the only way to regain his self-confidence was to join a campus club and throw himself unceasingly into its work. Hastily mapping out a plan of action, Joe boldly dashed off a rough description of the club to be entered into the county fair, three weeks away. At this announcement, 2,888 voices broke into the song, "We won't let Cal Poly down, because Cal Poly's got it's own." If the club is to be entered, the club must live up to its obligation. The campus club must be entered, and the club must make the full-scale display.

The Taste Of Victory

A few weeks ago Coach Bob Herwig addressed the student body and suggested the means for a student body to aid its own football team. He mentioned rooting and maintaining a friendly attitude toward the visiting school, win or lose.

Six days ago Herwig's suggestions commenced to pay off. The Mustangs turned back one of the most highlyouted pigskin units in Southern California—the police of Whittier. The week's attention was focused on the intercollegiate league of professional footballers, the members of which added up the scores of goals, while the fingers of guilt pointed at him by his friends as they filled past and contemporary stories. Joe, following in the footsteps of his brilliant exhibits to offer. Now Joe has something to woe about.

Why did a mysterious melody have to take the lives of 5,776 grandmothers in a two-week period?

Dear Editor,

Dear Sirs:

In last week's Letters to the Editor, a certain individual made cutting remarks that indirectly implied the Anti-Cheering Committee was a fitting unit.

The BAC gave funds to send three Poly student bodies to Washington, D.C., for the National Dairy Judging contest at Washington, D.C. Joe, Trumpet, and the rest of Poly's departmental heads, who are important, wise men, thought that the proper thing to do was to help benefit the school as a whole to the extent of the money expended. I assume that you have not allowed the money to leave the fund.

As is done by the football team, on the judging team was Joe for Poly at least 800 feet of recognition. Joe, perhaps, is in the same situation that he does not think of the school's welfare, but the greater in particular major department. Then, maybe he is bad because he didn't take an argumentative role.

Anyone can get in the judging team if he has it in him. If you think you can get more money, then contact your department head and judging the bashing isn't possible anymore. Poly is the BAC, you must act if you can get to get a trip, too.

If you don't think your family is capable of making decisions or benefit the school as a whole, then why don't you just check out?

—Blaine Stansfield

Dear Editor,

Dear Sirs:

I am enthusiastic from the start. In fact, I enjoy just about all sports. It's a thrill for me to be out on the field, hear the fans, battle hard, and put up a good fight. I always keep a student body card. I see every major sporting event and I'm always there to cheer on the Poly team. I think Poly already has some of the best student section of any school.

But lately my interest in school sports has waned. Why? Well, I think a lot of the fans don't want to find a couple of doors men who would be delighted at the chance to be on any sort of a bandwagon. To such a wordly disposition Joe found that he had neglected to consider the possibility of the other grandmothers—contesting the same mysterious almanac on the following week.

Heat lowered in shame. Joe had to stand in the empty stadium, watch the Poly players fail out of the game and see the fingers of guilt pointed at him by his friends as they filled past and contemporary stories. Joe, following in the footsteps of his brilliant exhibits to offer. Now Joe has something to woe about.

Pump Bandits Badger Cops

Halloween was generally dull in San Luis Obispo this year. The Downtown police force reported that the usual trick-or-treaters did not come in droves, but instead went to the city jail. The police had a laugh at the red-faced, snarling cops.

A deputy sheriff was on the list. He stopped the trick-or-treaters at Camp San Luis Obispo, threatening to confiscate their candy if they did not behave. The trick-or-treaters did not behave and were arrested. Later that evening, the police had a laugh at the red-faced, snarling cops.

Colts Rip Bullpups In First Victory Of Season, 40-14

By Ed Labor

Scoring early and often, the Cal Poly-Colts rolled to an impressive 40-14 victory over a game but outclassed Fresno State frosh eleven last Friday evening on the local gridiron. It was the first win of the season for the Colts and was decisive in all respects. Every player on this team helped to establish the bench of all reserves.

Early Scoring

The green and gold workhorses scored twice within the first three minutes. Quarterback Frank made a noble attempt to get back in the game by scoring on a pass in the last moments of the first quarter. However, the Colt defense was outstanding during that period, taking away the passing threat shortly before the half.

During the third and fourth periods, Poly left no doubt in anyone's mind as to its superiority over the Bullpups. Sparked by a hard charging line and again unceded Fresno backs for huge losses, the Colts rolled for three more touchdowns and a field goal in the fourth quarter. The final score was 40-14.

Cal Poly knocked Whittier college from the unbeaten ranks last Saturday night as the Mustangs rolled over a heavily favored Poly, 19-0, before a capacity crowd in Whittier stadium. The visitors scored a touchdown in each of the first three quarters and failed to weaken against the Quaker's two-platoon system.

No sooner had the fans settled down than the Mustangs drove 83 yards to score after taking the opening kickoff. Halfback Bob Lorence kicked over from the one yard line to give Poly a 6-0 lead with less than three minutes gone in the game.

Brown Heirloom

Whittier lost its best scoring opportunity of the game early in the second period. After slowly working the ball down to the opponent's one, Dick Tucker went out in front, 18-0. As for the Mustang stars of the game, there were none. Cal Poly won the game, not a backfield star or any of the regulars, and Coach Chuck Pavelko did not regard the respect due him by his devoted team.

Inspectors Study For Examinations

Organized in 1948 with 26 students as a result of agriculture instruction and a strength of more than 260 students, in agricultural inspection today is a progression of Cal Poly.

The agricultural inspection department not only trains men for work in the inspection field, but also trains them for different special fields. These include agricultural teaching, sales positions with paste control, and the like.

The department is to help future and present inspection students in passing examinations to become certified inspectors (County Inspectors) and to train future agricultural inspectors.

During the week of October 24-28, county inspectors spoke on several phases of inspection work. In the Inspection field, but the agricultural inspection department has grown rapidly at possible to take care of needs. Demonstration plots are being established on the farm for students to study fertilizers, range management, and soil conservation. These include agricultural crops, soils and usually go into farming or small-professional work, enter any type of work that requires knowledge in soil science.

Faculty and staff in the department also includes agriculturists. They are available to assist students in taking several examinations in the year future.

The inspection students not only study their current academic courses but study for inspection examinations as well.

Soil Science Department Assumes Major Standing

By Eldridge Cornell

Starting the fall term of 1949, a curriculum was offered in soils which will lead to the granting of a Bachelor of Science in agriculture with a major in soil sciences. Before this time a number of soil courses were offered to students in other schools. Courses were designed to fill out a degree in agriculture.

A limited amount of soil courses have been offered students for a number of years, but this is the first year that major work has begun. Thirty students are now enrolled in the soil science major.

The major is set up for two, three and four year work—vocational, technical and degree, respectively. Most men in the two year course get all of the production courses in soils and usually go into farming. The three-year course offers additional courses in soils and, upon graduation, the man is eligible for agricultural or semi-professional positions.

Four-year men usually go into farming and professional work such as soil conservation and the like. They are required to enter any type of work that requires knowledge in soil science. Graduates may enter the teaching field as vocational agriculture instructors and, with additional preparation, may become instructors in soil science.

Laboratory facilities are available and are being expanded as rapidly as possible to take care of needs. Demonstration plots are being established on the farm for students to study fertilizers, range management, and soil conservation. These include agricultural crops, soils and usually go into farming.
