Polist Welcome Students

McPhee Says...

Julian A. McPhee, president of the college and state director of all California Polytechnic schools, told the students of Cal Poly, Pimentel, today, said, "One of the great advantages when coming each year is the tutoring of a more mature and responsible returning student.

"I want all the students to realize that Cal Poly is their college. The administration, it is true, and all the facilities of the college are here for just one purpose—to supply the students with the type of higher education they want.

"I think it is proper that students should work and study, but we also want them to enjoy the years they spend here by entering into various extra-curricular activities which go to make up a vital part of the personality development of the student body. Life at Cal Poly is a balance of academic work and extra-curricular activities which take place outside the classroom.

"Urging all new students to lead a full campus life, McPhee elaborated further by saying, "The enjoyment of your college years will greatly depend on your personal interest and your part in the activities which go on outside class. If you enjoy the extra-curricular activities you will find, more often than not, that they lead to additional personal contacts which will be of great importance in your future career. We can help you, if you let us, to find those activities in which you have an interest."

"Unregistered students will be called in by the registrar, Stroom, to register before noon Monday. Registration will continue until 4:30 p.m."

Pimentel Says...

Mr. Pimentel elaborated further by saying, "You will be awarded more than you have been given out by the older students. You will be a part of the Cal Poly family. Your success will be measured by the effort you put in."

"The administration is doing its best to make your college years a happy one. So far as we can, we will make every effort to see that you have the same opportunities as the older students."

"We want you to know that if you have any problems which bother you feel should be brought to my attention, I will welcome the opportunity to discuss them with you personally.

Reader's Digest Article Leads 'Upside Down' Plan

International attention was focused upon the unique "upside-down" plan of registering new students at California State Polytechnic college through an article appearing in the August 23 issue of Reader's Digest. Country Gentlemen article by Grace L. Taylor, title "Take a Cow to College and Make the Pay," describes the unusual educational philosophy of the Santa Maria section of college and industry. In explaining the "upside-down" educational pattern of the college which provides instruction in a reverse order, the Los Angeles Times, in a signed article by W. W. Post, listed the

Students Print El Mustang In New College Print Shop

This story which you are now reading was set on a Linotype machine by a student majoring in printing, one of the newest courses offered at Cal Poly. In fact all of the mechanical work of producing this eight-page newspaper, including type composition, setting up, and press work was done by students of this department. The course, taught by Assistant Professor A. M. Bert Fellows, is a joint issue of the clipping department and Guy C. Cullerton, assistant instructor.

Your Freshman Handbook was a project of the printing department, and Bert Fellows, head of the clipping department, and Guy C. Cullerton, assistant instructor.

Many Positions Available
In Poly's Music Department

A very outstanding Cal Poly organization is the music department headed by H. P. Davidson, director. Because Cal Poly is a land-grant college for agriculture and industry, the music department is in a class apart from most other college music departments because all musical activities ally closely the objectives of the volunteer efforts of the students.

There are many advantages of belonging to the Associated Student Body that you obtain in the music department.

There are three music groups:

1. The Poly Band—made up of three groups, and try-outs for each of these groups are open to all student body members.

2. The Glee Club—Sept. 9, 10, 8 p.m., Cr. 1.

3. Dance Orchestra—Sept 9, 10, 8 p.m., Cr. 1.

New Course in Art Offered at Poly

What's this? "Art at Cal Poly"—yes—but Cal Poly men need have no fear that the new course listed as Art 203 (Art Appreciation) in the Poly catalog is in any way designed to lure the student body dancer.

The main idea behind the course is that art is not just something you find in art galleries and museums but that it is one of man's principal daily activities and interests. Art, good and bad, is all around you—In cars, planes, machinery, tools, dishes, pots, pans, office buildings, factories, homes, house furnishings, gardens, plant life, books, magazines, movies—in fact, everything designed and made for man's use and pleasure.

A second underlying reason for the course is that the principles of good design are similar in all these fields; that the landscape designer, architect, industrial designer, layout man, house painter, and house painter all have to keep the same principles in mind as they work on giving us every day of the month.

The course of study includes the history of art, the development and principles of design, and the use of materials (pigments, steel, stone, clay, plastics, etc.) and the course will consider the problems of the main arts and crafts.

According to James Smith, instructor in the new course, it is intended that the course will be enjoyable in itself and that it will serve to encourage and aid the student's enjoyment, as well as understanding, of his own job and daily environment.

Egan Coordinates Student Welfare

Eugene A. Egan, formerly Assistant Dean in Charge of Admissions, Guidance and Placement, is the new coordinator of student welfare, a position established last March by the Regents for the purpose of placing authority in the hands of one person charged with the responsibility of supervising all student body services and activities.

According to President Julian A. McPhee, Egan's wide responsibilities include the supervision of resident student employment on campus, the coordination of supervision of clubs, student activities, and the coordination of all student body social events and athletic activities.

Egan was previously on the faculty of the University of Montana where he was a native of the state and where he received his Bachelor of Science degree in 1930. He also served as a member of the Montana State Board of Education and the Montana State Board of Agriculture. He received his Master of Science degree in 1930 and the University of Montana School of Agriculture and Forestry.

GOLF DOM

by Graham Tenbrook

"Fore" is a word that is hard pressing "Play Ball" all over the nation, being taken up and taken up seriously by several hundred new-comers every week.

Golf, originally called Kolf in the sixteenth century, and a favorite pastime among painting subject by such world famous artists as Rembrandt, has enjoyed a tremendous upswing in popularity after it was introduced to Americans.

The outstanding news of today in the golf world is unfolding at the University of Minnesota. Frank McCormick, director of athletics, taking the initiative in golf development in schools and colleges, hopes to have continuous classes of up to 500 pupils taking lessons and exercises from "Fore" in this one University alone.

Pattern For Others

McCormick's successful and extensive experiences in developing athletics in schools and colleges as well as in the Army, a new green golfer is in the making. It is already ventured in golf circles that this may be the pattern for all the nation for high school, prep school and college students.

The rising response for the new program is coming from the University's football and basketball stars and such men as Bill Dayley and Billy Bly, Gopher grid stars, are especially eager to develop a sound golf game. These athletes regard golf as an exciting sport they can enjoy after their days of strenuous competition have passed.

Most young men and women do not have the money for private golf instruction, but a simple and inexpensive method of teaching classes in groups, is being worked out at the Foundation Inc golf driving range which should be of immense value to the Cal Poly student.

In next week's edition of "Golf dom" we will start a series of articles on golf. It is hoped that each week the tip will be complete to itself and that it will not be necessary to make any lesson continued feature. Next week we will start with the hand grip, which is naturally the first step and is by the way, the one of the most vital mechanics for a sound game.

Student Governing System Explained By Vice Prexy

Student Body Vice President

The government and direction of the Associated Students of California Polytechnic College is under a group representative of all depart­ments, clubs, boards, and classes. This group is called the Associated Students Affairs Council. For more effect­ive operation, the A.S.A.C. has been, in the recently adopted constituent, given to a minimum, but it still a truly representative number of voting members.

Members are the elected officers of the Associated Students, one representative from each division of the college, one representative from each of the eight clubs or societies, one representative from each board (athletics, music, publications and Poly Royal), one representative from each class, one faculty advisory, one representative from the faculty or administration, and the graduate manager, who is a non­voting member.

Although only the above men­tioned are actual members of the A.S.A.C., any member of the Associated Students who is interested in the government of Cal Poly is urged to attend these meetings, which are held at least once a month.
