Having taken most of my meals at old Mother Dan’s during the summer, I was natur­ally caught unprepared for the night that prevailed my laughable eyes as I stumbled into Nugget’s beauty for a spot of show. There were no accidents in my household that night. I immediately bolted for the door but was restrained by the general population of a nearby grassy spot, which held the hands of an older and older Polly in its embrace.

It took considerable effort to restrain an and quiet my fears, but reason and strength combined to allow me to continue. The victims, I was told, happened to be the visiting TE teachers and would do me no harm. Their brief apparel was strictly the uniform of the time of year and met with the approval of all the brain hay. My piglak little eye glance at this orientation until I remembered the visitors would soon depart.

girls, we’re gonna hate to see you go. You’ve increased the attendance at the school cafeteria by at least 20 per cent and have again put El Corral in the black.

But, it’s not only what we have done for Poly that revenue is concerned. It’s what we have done for the morale of those of us who have been here for a long time and for the rest of us again. We know now that every cloud has its silver lining and that the iron comes at least a portion of time until the sun breaks through. (Thanks, Jerome Kern.)

You see, girls, you represent the most important group of people in this school. We have on the curriculum. Oh, we have sports. Intramural games, good classes, Hall and Old, Al Games, old man Ditto, and various other entertainments, but we’ve got none. We’ve been plain. But we see, don’t get mad.

Just ask any of us students. We keep our eyes on Polly, but what he misses most and what he needs, better yet, what he doesn’t need, is women. And don’t ask us. WOMEN. Don’t ask him during the summer. We’re just asking for a hug. That’s what we deserve to get.

May be this guy Hughes has something up his sleeves.

Need Accident Insurance?

Somewhere amid the 60 odd inches of copy occupying the front page of El Mustang this Friday of August 28th is a small story telling of a new insurance policy being offered to Poly students. To some, this might appear to be just another space filler—it was that too. But to others, who realize the trouble to which certain individuals of campus have gone to obtain this premium, the story begins to mean a little more. Quite a little more.

For several years students who have met with campus accidents have complained loud and long about the absence of state coverage. To these people, it was not enough that the state furnished an education, but they also expected insurance against everything from a common cold to a football injury. The answer in form of the new low cost policy is now here.

For the small cost of three skims per quarter, or nine rocks per school year, a student can now be insured for all medical expenses up to $500 dollars, whether the accident occurs on or off campus. Another good point, so the story goes, is that the premium can be paid for the rest of the term. Three dollars per quarter is all the student has to furnish the rest. Three dollars per quarter is all the student has to furnish the rest. Three dollars per quarter is all the student has to furnish the rest.

It took considerable effort to restrain an and quiet my fears, but reason and strength combined to allow me to continue. The victims, I was told, happened to be the visiting TE teachers and would do me no harm. Their brief apparel was strictly the uniform of the time of year and met with the approval of all the brain hay. My piglak little eye glance at this orientation until I remembered the visitors would soon depart.

Big Grid Turnout Expected Monday

King football will rear its head from behind a click of summer activity on the California Poly campus Monday when Leroy Hughes, the Mustang's mentor, welcomes 70 aspirants for the first fall practice.

Hughes, looking forward to his first year as head of the Mustang pack, will direct his first practice Monday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock. It will be a day drill, while he and the first week, the morning session starting at 10 o'clock.

Twenty-one varsity returnees, eight other summer winners and fifteen junior college transfers are expected to be among those drawing suits Monday morning.

Hughes feels the Mustang first practice comes none too soon. Cal Poly opens the 1960 season on Sept. 10th in New Mexico against conference member Pepperdine collegiate. The Maua won practice on Friday and four days before the Mustangs.

Hughes is going along with the idea that no one is good enough when playing of military service and Mustang gymnastics. The Mustangs have not been hit too hard yet, but Hughes is prepared for the worst.

Journalism Majors, Printing Students

A beginning course in the management of conferences and manipulation of photographic materials will be offered in the fall quarter of 1950. It was announced today by William E. Bush, Instructor in the physical sciences department.

The course in photography will emphasize the use of techniques suitable for production of motion pictures and television, as well as the development of film in the darkroom. Material will be placed on the aesthetic aspects of good photography. Bush stated that he will employ the same system, which is a combination of the Archer-Adams system used in the photography schools on the east coast of the United States.

The primary aim of the course is to produce capable technicians in the ag journalism major and to help them make greater use of their laboratory techniques and make the camera a useful tool.

Other courses will be offered in journalism, photography, and art, and these will be taught outside the photography department.

The primary purpose of the Archer-Adams system is to train students to make up-to-date pictures of the highest quality.
