Combining Campus Stores May Be Colossal Idea

Organisation of a campus retail store combining the various produce, dairy, poultry and possibly livestock sales has been a controversial and moot issue on campus for some time past.

Ferry Engle, poultry major, believes the establishment of such a store would enable patrons, such as student wives, to purchase the needed articles in one shopping center with convenience and economy of time.

Instead of driving around the campus to the several different stores, a wife could go to the one store for all the articles that require special handling and equipment, says Bennion.

It is possible a joint store would increase the sales of each store and perhaps more people would be present than by going to any single store. Eventually, perhaps, there might be a procedure and to show the relative difference between meat sales department also.

Lyman Bennion, animal husbandry department head, says a slaughtering course has been added to the A.H. department. Primarily to familiarize students with slaughtering procedures and to show the relative difference between meat sales department also.

While most of the small supply of fresh meat would be disposed of through the cafeterias, it is likely a surplus could be sold to campus residents, "providing the patrons did not have to be ordered in advance and at present.

Dick Jones, truck crops student, pointed out the advantage this plan would have for students with individual projects, as well as the departments themselves. Everyone would sell a better product in better condition, and would get more experience with modern marketing techniques.

This may not be the time to undertake such a venture, (so says Bob Kennedy, public relations director) but we believe in the future it may fit better with the college's plans for expansion.

Ornithologist Liming Trains Sparrow Hawk

By Dale Cayer

"It's entirely for the birds" is a slang expression when one is speaking of the activity on the north side of Comandra Hall.

Don Liming, a field crops and vocational agriculture major, brings to this campus a very unusual hobby —ornithology. His interest is mainly with the smaller type (sparrow) hawks and the owls.

At the age of 12, Don became interested in the hobby "when I saw five young sparrow hawks walking their heads from a hole in a telephone pole," he said. He took these young birds home and with the help of his twin brother, Pot, trained them while he continued to do his school work. During the school year, Don has trained and studied the behavior of some resident. This taught him the habits and habits of birds. The type of wings used will determine which breed the bird will hunt. The simulated bird is used to catch the bird's head and hunt the bird's head. After the attack is completed, Don takes the hawk and throws it at the simulated bird so that the hawk will attack it. This helps to keep the bird from flying off and not returning. Don keeps the hawk to the burrow which is just across the street from his dormitory. Don has a heavy leather glove on which the hawk lights.

Don favors the sparrow hawk mainly because of the quizzing he learns. Although the sparrow hawk is small and inconspicuous, it is a very active hawk and is found to hunt and kill certain types of small animals. Don trains and studies these predatory birds successfully.

At the present time, Don has a pair of young sparrow hawks, a young sparrow hawk which he is in the process of training. The owl is leashed just outside of room 106 in Comandra Hall where Don trains him. Don said that he regrets the fact that he has no time to train the owl but with his job as a junior at the college, he has very little time. The owl is quite tame and Don intends to keep it as a mascot for the FFA.

Drafting Now

"It is apparent now that less students will be drafted than formerly anticipated," said Dean Chadderdon in response to the fears in the minds of future draftsmen.

"We are starting to fill the lapsed list which will include all students. These lists will rank each student by grade points, birth year, and class, such as freshman, sophomore, etc., by divisions, so an unclassified student's standing will be sent to his draft board. He also added that this classification procedure is "quite a short trial, but the results will be very beneficial to the students.
