More Foreign Productions featured in the Cal Poly Film Society's series II, which begins next week. The films, ranging from early and contemporary foreign productions, were selected to appeal to a variety of tastes. The series, aimed at expanding students' knowledge of international cinema, will feature films from countries such as France, Germany, and the United States.

San Jose, COP Weekend In San Luis Obispo

By Russ Pyle

With the CCAA race entering the final stretch, two current conference "wheelie" roll into town this weekend to meet the Cal Poly Mustangs in the local high school court. It will be the first-place San Jose Spartans who invade the green and gold stands for the first time of the season tonight, while the third-place COP Tigers make their initial San Luis Obispo showing on the court.

Surveys Plotting New Horticulture Unit Location

Preliminary action on the relocation of the horticulture unit was taken at the campus near avenue, the campus administration's plans for the future now are made to determine which will be the most suitable for the O. H. unit. Although science building plans have been in the works for some time, there is a possibility that it will not be occupied by the college for several more years. The present building and greenhouses would be torn down because of the construction of the science building. Informal surveys and present building and greenhouses could be used as an alternative site, according to the college.

Vets Correspondence

When veterans are unable to visit the VA personally, they may write for information. They are requested to identify themselves through use of service number, veteran number, civilian, or other identifying means. It will also aid if they refer to any previous letter with which the request may have had with the VA.

Veterans in receipt of subsistence, compensation, or pension should remember to furnish VA of any change of permanent address to the VA office having custody of their files.

To err is human, but when the veterans err out before the pencil batters.

Poultry Club

The poultry club will have their annual chicken by Saturday, February 20, at 6:30 p.m. Bryant Buchholz will preside. All students who would like to participate in the contest, and get a chance to shirk, are invited, he said.

VA Office Hours

VA office hours in the Los Angeles Regional area are from 8:45 a.m. to 4:45 p.m., Mondays through Fridays, except when closed for national holidays. Offices open Saturday mornings have been discontinued in line with VA policy throughout the country.

Veterans seeking information or services are advised to call at VA Contact Offices.

Service Papers

Veterans going to the VA are advised to take along all available papers so that they will be in a position to start the business to which they may be entitled. Veterans receiving benefits from the VA are advised a C-number, or claim number, and their documents should be kept in a file bearing the number.

November applications were about one percent under the total received by the VA during October.

Campus Paradox

Life is filled with paradoxes. For example, students take great pride in their successful athletic teams, yet in every sport, individuals, along with the other purposes mentioned above. The two courses and this year’s carnival are some of the biggest events of the school year.

All these things put together help to make Poly Royal the source of our most pleasant memories after we leave college. For all these reasons, and perhaps a few of your own, Poly Royal is a function worth the efforts of every student and faculty member. The time for the Country Fair will soon be here. What are you doing to make it a success?

D. W. G.

What is Poly Royal?

For years now, our college has put on a “Country Fair on the College Campus” the Poly Royal. Why do we go to this trouble each year, what are we trying to do, and what do we, as students, get out of it?

Poly Royal has many functions. It gives the students and departments a chance to show off their wares and abilities. It gives Poly’s different schools a chance to get some much needed publicity in trade journals and in that manner raising the prestige of the college and also helping us to get more recognition and a chance at better jobs after graduation. Poly Royal is the opportunity for man in one department to get to see what goes on in all the other departments—to know how the other half lives.

Poly Royal gives us all a yearly goal. To put on the best show possible for our friends and folks. The time of year when the campus is dressed up in its Sunday-go-to-meeting best, when we can be especially proud to have outsiders look over.

The female part of Poly Royal, our queen and princesses, is a big relief from the rather female-less existence we lead during the rest of the year. The sports events, rodeo, and exhibits are an entertainment for us as individuals along with the other purposes mentioned above. The two courses and this year’s carnival are some of the biggest events of the school year.

All these things put together help to make Poly Royal the source of our most pleasant memories after we leave college. For all these reasons, and perhaps a few of your own, Poly Royal is a function worth the efforts of every student and faculty member. The time for the Country Fair will soon be here. Something new has definitely been added to Ya Old Collar Chat. Several years has passed since I was asked to report on the happenings of the gals who make the wheels go around in the general office. Even as you read these lines, we are in the last two and half years in Panama.

Vera Silver, Mary Jenkins, Marita Cronoway, Emily Schuster, and Madeline Johnson were just a few of the office girls who have been on the payroll for a year or more, and are the happy hostsesses of the general office. Only the last two and a half years in Panama.

The general office has had a lot of excitement this week when Jerry Gray-Daughter's son, Richard Layton, came from California. He is one of the last two and a half years in Panama.

Since the day, some four years ago, when the first 15 student wives organized their club, it has been the proud of every student's column in El Mustang. With some students apart, with which classmate or teacher, or to the student wives, the Cal Poly men have been their justifiable pride, not only a column, but a women's page. It is the generality of it that is curious—thanks.

With all due respect, how many of you have found that you are "guilty widows"? Maybe then, your wife is offering instruction for Poly men, or she is inclined to hold class for women, too. Are you interested? Then join in, for there's no age limit. Your game, so, you'll be interested. Shortly at this meeting, the nominating committee is going to announce the slate at the next meeting for officers for the coming year. The only rules are that there must be an inclusive class, and the officers will be selected.

This meeting was held last night, Feb. 17. The last meeting for this year is set for Mar. 2, at the same time. If you want to go along for that Saturday game? Maybe Don Watts, who is going to tour the local area, is going to be interested. Her thanks wars so cold.

A fund-raising benefit card party sponsored by the student wives is being planned. At Poly Croat the play area will be open the rest of the year. Youngsters and their mothers. The jacket is made of flimsy material, with the jacket's lower part ornamented by a traditional Burmese hair-do. Girls with modern hair styles were frowned upon in "that time of the month." The jacket is made of flimsy material. Sometimes a toy car containing a five dollar bill is taken up in class. "Oh, isn't that good," "They're so small," "Why not have a few big toys?" The jacket is made of flimsy material, and Police Chief Aung Chau doesn't like it. Burmese wear three garments only—a longyi (sarong, to you), a brassiere lines, and a bodice. The Slide Rule On Maturity

By Fred Hawley

Just because you are a bright boy and have a good profile, doesn't necessarily mean you are going to get ahead in the world. While looking through the "Advertising Digest" for February 45, we came across the article, "Selecting College Trainees," by Robert M. McMurry, Ph.D. He states that the "quick-shot" student may be able to produce under stimulation which reward is insatiable. His efforts must be dovetailed with others, as he may not function as a solo in college. Therefore, the student with a less impressive scholastic record, but has the drive to finish particular tasks, is considered by personnel more than technical competence. He may not function as well as the student with a more impressive scholastic record. His top executives of the next generation are expected to come

The top executives of the next generation are expected to come from such present day trainees. Intermediate steps and therefore management are expected to come from such present day trainees.

Here are seven major factors which are considered by personnel in selecting college trainees:

1. Occupational Stability. Will he the Industrious type of man who is stable, industrious, persevering, loyal to others, self-reliant, compatible with fellow workers, and willing to lead in minor capacities if necessary to bring a return to the company for the money invested, and advance to more responsible positions?

2. Uncomfortable When Idle. Is he the industrious type of man who has the drive to finish particular tasks, or is he the non-industrious type who is anxious to achieve status, prestige and money that he is very impatient with others? Does he ever perform his duties with diligence or interest?

3. Ability to Follow the Path to the End. Does he have the ability to project himself and unite them with the company's undertakings?

4. Ability to Feed for Himself. Does he make or manage training or training relationships with others?

5. Ability to Look Ahead. Is he a leader for mature young men. Anyone who can act as a leader to others, self-reliant, acts as a peacemaker with workers, and willing to lead people basically a mature person.

The top executives of the next generation are expected to come from such present day trainees. As you stand-up on the six points?

HORN WEIGHTS

Roger Findahl, Mortising Digest's college assistant, department head, takes over a horse business in Minnesota. Findahl is assistant department head, and feeds and feeding and assisting in the animal husbandry graduates from Cal Poly and its theory of teaching. Findahl came directly to Cal Poly after obtaining his B.S. degree in animal husbandry to teach feeds and feeding and assist in courses for one who is in the animal husbandry field.

Findahl's father spent 12 years in the cattle business in LaSueur county, Minnesota, where Roosevelt's. The family moved in 1954 to a creek, Minnesota, where Findahl's father engaged in general farming and raising short-horn cattle.

Findahl, like the majority of animal husbandry graduates from the Cal Poly animal husbandry department, took to the teaching field.

When asked for his views on Cal Poly and its theory of teaching, Findahl remarked, "Cal Poly and especially the animal husbandry department, offers the student a terrific advantage with learn by doing method. The project system is something every student should take advantage of." Many students show a lack of desire to tackle the "dry" subject of animal husbandry, but, where his personal achievement, but, where his students show a lack of desire to tackle the "dry" subject of animal husbandry.

Cagers Falter, Lose To Tigers, Spartans

Finding the basket just a little out of reach, the Cal Poly Mustangs dropped a pair of BCSA conference games over the weekend, losing to the San Jose State Spartans 50-41 Friday night, and being defeated 58-54 Saturday evening. In their initial tilt of the weekend, the Polymen went with a fast break, finding the basket in the opening minutes. Coach Wirt pushed the ball into a man to man defense setting the tone for the remainder of the game. Poly had a difficult time breaking the Spartan defense, which was able to hold them to an average of 4 points per minute. Lead scorer, J. H. Grey Jr., administrator of veteran affairs, could only manage a total of 11.

Spartan proved to be the superior team, but the unbeaten Spartans lead change of tactics to a man to man defense following half time. Leading the scoring column with 11 points, J. H. Grey Jr. had a difficult time breaking the Spartan defense, which was able to hold him to an average of 4 points per minute.

Merman '49 Sked

Coach Dick Anderson took enough time from his grueling task of getting the team reactivated to win the local championship game. With H. M. Babin of UCLA knowing the aggressor and landed the most blows, thereby winning the decision.

Lou Basing was the second Mustang to see action. His opponent was Bob Luskin whom he defeated last year when the UCLA Bruin in a 25-25 decision. It was a thrilling contest, but the Bruin had found no way to halt the mounting score.

As for the Mustangs—basketball was used in place of the 155 pound bout that was scheduled for the even. It was a thrill-packed program for the boys who fought to a draw. The boys fought to a draw in the first round, and under the guidance of courtesy with your associates, thus smoothing the way for successful personal contacts, and build good will.
