Poly Fame Reaches Norway Application Reaches Phibin

An article about California State Polytechnic College published in the San Luis Obispo Press-Telegram was recently received in the office of the San Luis Obispo Polytechnic College. It was about the visit of a group of students from the college to Norway. The article was written by Al Barto.

The article called Cal Poly "a shining school," according to the visitors, who said they were impressed by the school's facilities and the quality of education.

The story and a picture appeared on the front page of the Press-Telegram on Feb. 1. This week a letter was received by the college's administration, expressing gratitude for the visit to Norway. The letter stated that the visitors were interested in learning more about the college and its programs.

Cal Poly Alumni Support Athletes

Approximately 70 San Luis Obispo alumni of California State Polytechnic College and their guests went to the college recently to support their respective teams in the Mens' Basketball and Women's Basketball tournaments.

At the meeting of the Alumni Association last month, an agreement was reached to support the college's athletic programs. The agreement was signed by the president of the Alumni Association and the Athletic Director.
Poly To Offer Farm Machine Sales Course

A two-week course for salemen in the farm implement dealer industry will be offered this summer at California State Polytechnic college, according to plans conceived recently at a conference of dealers and college faculty members on the campus.

The course will be taught by depot salesmen July 21-Aug. 2 and will open to all farm equipment dealer representatives.

Plans for the course were formulated by the college members of the education committee of the California Farm Equipment Dealers Association and faculty committee members headed by C.O. Mertz, chairman of the education committee.

Sales psychology, report writing and school mathematics. They will be hosted at Camp Oceano before the two-week period. Attending the conference at Cal Poly were F.W. Tarr, president of the California Farm Equipment dealers associations; and Stewart M. Brachman, chairman of the college.

In making the motion which was unanimously passed, granting permission for the sign to be placed at the north and south entrances to San Luis Obispo, Count William O. Hall declared, "This is not meant to establish a rule for the 10-year-old school, high school, or other groups which people want to place signs of this type.

The signs, each reading 'Home of the Mustangs. California State Polytechnic College 1 mile SW of San Luis Obispo' with a barren oak, will be placed in two groups of four at the upper corner of the board, will be removed prior to April 15, according to a letter read at the meeting from William A. McPhee, president of Cal Poly. Vernen R. Mendenhall, dean of student welfare at the college, was present at the meeting in behalf of the signs. It was reported that the city council some months ago had voted a sum of money to contribute toward this cost of project, and that the balance of the cost and erection of the sign is the responsibility of Cal Poly.

Block "P" Society Reorganizes

Club Government

The Block "P" society underwent a major operation at its last meeting, February 17, in order to effect closer cooperation between the various phases of the athletic department. A evening reorganization movement, prepared inside the society, was voted in, changing the aims of the club and calling for a reorganization of the government of the Block "P." Changes in the government of the Block "P" society include the addition of six members, who with the officers will comprise a board of directors. Four of these six men will come from the major sports, and two from the minor sports which the society participates in.

The policy of the society in the future will be to align itself with the new athletic program.
