ASB Faced With Problem Of Electing Vice Proxy

Mette Resigns; Forces Pro-Tem Appointment By Smith; Balloting

"Unprecedented was the vice presidential special election issue faced by the Student Affairs Council last Wednesday, at their first special meeting of the year, according to Bob Smith, Associated Student Body President.

The special election question was brought about by Vice President mete R. Martin’s resignation, last June, to accept the scholarship of El Mustang R.C.C. in May of this year, failed to return. The Student Council was then responsible and time consuming problems, forcing him to make the decision.

Smith was named a letter of nomination to The B.A.C. last June, stating that he was not interested in the position.

In this aspect, the president now has the power to make the decision on that position, and until the special election is complete, the president will have the capability to run for that office.

The special election procedure may be followed by the Student Council, regular or special meeting after nomination by the election committee, the Student Council must be 21 or more years of age.

The special election must be held with the approval of the Student Council, the Student Council must be held in the Student Council meeting, and the election must be held at least two weeks prior to the election date.

Wanted: Talented Editor For Annual

Will Cal Poly have a 1958 Yearbook?

That is a vital question that yet remains unanswered. Every year the same question has been asked that the possibility for a yearbook is still not sure.

According to Chandler, the editor must sign a contract agreeing to provide a yearbook, and a 1958 yearbook need not be from the recognition department. Any qualified student can still sign a contract agreeing to apply immediately for the 1958 yearbook planning in the past year includes always starting during the last semester, which is the letter to the president.

Chandler continued. After two years, he wishes for the 1958 yearbook to be a new and different yearbook. The 1958 yearbook should be a new yearbook that the students feel the yearbook.

Chandler warned that sophomores are eligible to join only if they have completed at least three quarters of the college curriculum. Freshman who will be eligible to edit the yearbook will be eligible to edit the yearbook. If you’re interested in editing the yearbook, you can contact Chandler by phone.

Ex-Polyite, Duane Carter, Makes Racing History With Help Of Instructor Roy Metz

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1952

The record at the Chicago track was ten times as fast as they watched the little mechanical genius race around the last turn. It was back in 1928. Suddenly one midget and about five years came and failed. A streak for the tilt line A race went up from the stands. Up-and-coming Duane Carter had crossed the finish line first—his little car won it.

His new car was a success. He was on the road to international fame as a racing driver in the next few years. But the little midget car came into use with the leaders. Then Carter was further entered into the big events and won straight to fame instantly. He was in 100 miles in racing circles. Meanwhile, at California Polytechnic College in San Luis Obispo, Roy Metz, a little gray-haired, bespectacled professor of aeronautics, was following with pride the progress of Carter and his sensational midget. He had a right to be proud. It was his idea to build the midget in the spare time, over a period of six years. He had built other models but this was the culmination of over 26 years of research and study in the field of mechanical engineering.

Mechanical Genius

The little mechanical genius, indeed, can point out that he was actually one of the originators of the little midget race. He first got the idea of building a midget car while serving as an aircraft mechanic in Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, where the famous flying disk was in constant use consisting of four "Jenny Wheels." The famous testing plane of World War I and a Heyday-Davidson motorcycle engine. The device was being used for transportation and from the field by a civilian instructor. He decided then that if he ever had the opportunity, he would build a small one-man car with a streamlined body, for track racing. Metz started work on his midget at once and the car was large and entered two men. Also at that time, the term "half-man size" was introduced to racing. That was the name given to the little midget racer.

As Metz likes to look at the racer he sold Duane Carter, he has lost one regret. But he did not enter the car and give it to the man who first bought the car. He wanted his car to race under the same name he had Intended for it. The crowd at the Chicago track was so pleased by that world famous little midget racer. America was following with pride the progress of Carter and his sensational midget. He had a right to be proud. It was his idea to build the midget in the spare time, over a period of six years. He had built other models but this was the culmination of over 26 years of research and study in the field of mechanical engineering.

DRI LIPS!

You've asked for it. And here it is! The only lipstick of its kind! A new semi-moist lipstick created especially for women with extra dry or lined lips by that famous beauty authority, Helena Rubenstein—considered the most wonderful lipstick of its kind.

Made Trip

Made a trip to Sacramento to plead his case but the ruling stuck. Then Julian McPhee, president of Cal Poly, went to bat. He was unsuccessful and upon his return told Metz, "Roy, I'm awfully sorry, but I did all I could. As much as I'd like to see it, we just can't name the car, Cal Poly."

Metz' plan to publicize Cal Poly throughout the nation, it was just too much. He had named his little car went on to win races and at least report. It's still winning, after 18 years on the tracks of Argentina, South America. Since 1930, Metz has continued his mechanical genius to building midget cars—most notably Model A. Cal Poly students back with every at the beautiful stock car they have built. In building his cars, Metz always absolute and polished and is very patient. It before it is installed. Fortunately indeed, are the few people who can say they own a Mert built car.
In November, 1948, we told you the story, in this series, of 12 India-China "hump" flyers from the American Volunteer Group who came home from the war and started an air freight business. They called their company The Flying Tiger Line Inc.

4. Last year their fleet earned a total revenue of $340 million compared to $289 million the first year. In 1961 their planes flew a total of 18,643 million miles compared to 14 million miles the first year. Today The Flying Tiger Line Inc. is the world's largest certificated freight and air express carrier.

5. The company has used Union Oil aviation products since it began operations in 1948. But that doesn't seem nearly as important to us as the fact that the men were able to accomplish these things. It could hardly have happened under anything but the American profit and loss system.

6. For without the profit motive the businessmen wouldn't have put up the capital to start the business in the first place. Without the hope of gaining financial independence, the veterans wouldn't have had the incentive to sweat out the problems of starting the company and developing it. Altogether, we think it's a wonderful example of the advantages of our American free enterprise system over others.

Cruikshanks Covers Wide Area In Summer Travels

Distinction of having covered more territory during his summer vacation than any other Cal Poly faculty member was this year to Norman Cruikshanks, head of the college's social science department.

In a nine-weeks round trip from San Luis Obispo, Cruikshank traveled more than 80,000 air miles, visiting areas of cities in more than 10 different European and Mediterranean countries.

Back to his job as head of the social science department, Cruikshanks gained first-hand contact with government officials, labor leaders, educators, newspaper men, military leaders and other "John Does" citizens in England, Ireland, France, Yugoslavia, Greece, Turkey, Israel, Italy, Switzerland, and the Netherlands.

Cruikshanks left San Francisco on June 21 by plane as assistant director of a "Mediterranean-Baltic Cruise" sponsored by San Francisco State College. He was one person in addition to Cruikshanks and the tour director, Louis Wasserman, were included in the touring group.

In Washington, D.C. visiting the Senate, House Department and other governmental agencies, the group left New York by plane on June 29 for London.

After conferring with government officials, officials, labor groups, educators, and press representatives in England, Cruikshanks spent four days in his native country, Northern Ireland, visiting relatives whom he had not seen since his last visit 16 years ago.

From Ireland the group went to Yugoslavia where the had conferences with ministers of the government, including an air force general and the minister of religious affairs. Cruikshanks said that the Yugoslavian government is an effort to encourage tourists travel east that travelers are not bilked by the natives.

"If you don't try to buy anything except restaurant meals at hotel accommodations, travel in that country is rather inexpensive, but the natives pay plenty for clothing, etc." Cruikshanks said.

Group impressed

In both Greece and Turkey the group was impressed with the fine rehabilitation work that is being done by the American Red Cross. The most knowledgeable of all the countries visited, said Cruikshanks, was Israel.

"It is almost unbelievable what the people of that nation have been able to do in such a short time. Their problems are terrible, resulting in a revitalizing result in solving those problems." Cruikshank believes that the controversy can be solved. Cruikshanks believes Israel has the most promising future of any of the Mediterranean area countries.

Thousands of miles from home, one of the Israel government officials, Landis Gomel, who has charge of the development of irrigation and hydro-electric power national program. Cruikshanks believes that Israel is far ahead of the United States in its conservation with Cal Poly and its unique education and reclamation work.

Library Hours Change
To Benefit Students

Students will have no more means and groans over library hours. According to Dorothy B.
Wright, assistant librarian, the library will remain open between 11:30 and 10 p.m. Monday through Thursdays of the regular college sessions. The weekend schedule will continue as before.

Student body cards will serve as a library identification and students will be required to show
it when borrowing any library 材料 in both the circulation and reserve departments.

Only two hours reserve and periodical material will be loaned from the reserve desk. All other material will circulate from the circulation desk in the reference reading room.

New and interesting books are being added to the collection constantly, and students are invited to come in and survey the new book shelf.

New Cal Poly Coach Has Pro Background

By Frank Toursa, Jr.

There's a new look gracing the Poly athletic plant, and though most Mustangs have noted some of the oft-repeated question: "Who's the new coach?" In a few chow words, the new man is Tom Lee, and he comes to Cal Poly (tactfully speaking) from San Jose State, class of '40 where he earned his B. B. in Physical Education. A year at Stanford (19) added a Master's degree to the Lee name, followed by a season with the basketball boys, and now - Cal Poly.

Correlating "George" Prouse with the JV football boys, coach Lee's chief duty is to handle the varsity basball (if one ever looks around the campus as to "Who's the new coach?"") in a few chow words, the new man is Tom Lee, question at the last heard 'round about the campus.Who's the new coach?"

In a few chow words, the new man is Tom Lee, question at the last heard 'round about the campus. "Who's the new coach?"

Coach Lee's chief duty is to handle the junior varsity football boys, and basketball squads until he can win a light-heavy regional championship four years running. If that won't hold you, Tom Lee's full-time friend is the real cool part of a 12-11 record in his first year at Santa Ana J. C. Prouse, the Poly basketball coach, plays for the "All American Professional Basketball Circus" this season in high school, turning down an offer to hook up with Pat Heffeman's professional baseball team for two consecutive years, barnstorming with the "Bob Feller All-Stars." Paul Flisbeck, the boy who will help coach Prouse or Flisbeck; in the West Coast college boxing. Men interested in opening their training schedules now may contact Prouse or Flisbeck to the Physical Education offices adjacent to the natatorium. Prouse postscript: "Varsity Lettermen...means you too!"

Hurler Romero
Home From Tour

Back on the Poly Campus after a thrilling baseball tour of Japan is Frank Romero, the ace Montana hurler who brought smiles to the green and gold by posting three wins against an assortment of Japanese college all-stars. The big righthander picked up valuable experience on his Pacific tour, experiences that will make him a key figure in local conference next season. In all probability, his worked games at front of senior class as high as 8,000 persons—all of them rabid baseball fans. “We were treated kings everywhere we went in Japan,” said Romero, “those people over there would do justities to the Ebbets Field fans.” He remarked that the only fault was on the Japanese side, that all of the opposition was up when they played the Yankees. “We played every other day against the Japanese boys,” added Romero, “and it soon became evident that our biggest job was just lasting out our schedule.” The American club was staffed with six hurlers, but the plateaus and double double pipe. Frank Romero led a lot of his time in the outfield.

Football takes over the athletic scene as Poly tomorrow night at 8 p.m., when coach George Roesler sends his eager gang of gridiron fellows against a tough eleven from the College of the Sequoias.

Though dropping a 44-6 decision to the Poly varsity in an early scrimmage session, the Colts showed surprising strength at every position. Stated to lead the offensive unit is stately Bobby Green, a 6’4” quarterback from Montona High school.

The Poly natators apparently have their work cut out for them tomorrow night, as in their first game they suffered their first defeat in the fall by losing to Modesto Junior College, and the latter team is expected to have its best club in a decade. Some Polyites aided for bits of action tonight are halfbacks from Ebbets Field, and the latest and best hurler who brought acclaim toPoly during his one-year tour, experience that will make him a key figure in local conference next season. In all probability, his worked games at front of senior class as high as 8,000 persons—all of them rabid baseball fans. “We were treated kings everywhere we went in Japan,” said Romero, “those people over there would do justities to the Ebbets Field fans.” He remarked that the only fault was on the Japanese side, that all of the opposition was up when they played the Yankees. “We played every other day against the Japanese boys,” added Romero, “and it soon became evident that our biggest job was just lasting out our schedule.” The American club was staffed with six hurlers, but the plateaus and double double pipe. It's Your Boat—Row It

What would be the first thought to enter your mind if your sociology teacher, or that matter your agriculture, English or physics instructor, stopped you on the campus to day and said, "You’re a nice guy; tell you what I'm going to do." Well, right away you would naturally start thinking, ‘what's the old boy? What goes?'

Now wait a minute. Don't walk away yet. Suppose your instructor continued with a little gem like this, "To show you something for nothing, usually don’t happen to guys like you. The noon lab for the rest of the quarter so you can get an early in on the market. That's right, lifelong friendship. Friendship is priceless. Basically we come to college to prepare ourselves for the future. It's later than you think. Start now! Start today!"
