J. Gordon Strikes

California State Polytechnic College

In response to Mr. Gareffly's recent letter, I would like to say that I have never been a member of the United States Army. I have, however, been under the impression that he has been for several years.

When my first letter appeared in this publication I was accused of being a member of the United States Army. This is not true, and I have sufficient evidence to back up my statements and therefore feel that I owe no apologies.

I was surprised to see the results of the recent bull riding in the Jackpot rodeo. I am glad that the Rodeo Committee has taken the steps necessary to prevent this type of incident in the future.

Hetvaon House Has Glittering Past

Past guests of the Andrews Hotel, now known as the Hewson House, included Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Marlon Brando, and William Randolph Hearst. All of these well-known personalities, which gave the boarding house a glittering past, were guests of Hearst during 1911 to 1914.

According to J. M. Hewson, the newspaper magnate occupied the third and fourth floors of the hotel, using a total of 14 rooms while Hearst's castle, San Simeon, was being built. Hearst occupied the hotel in his usual style of splendor, said Hewson. He had his own maids and butler, and "built an elevator for convenience. Hearst also had his own private dining room, off the main dining room, which is now used for a general meeting room.

During this period the Andrews Hotel was the most fashionable hotel and restaurant between Santa Barbara and San Jose. The dining room boasted of cut glass and sterling silverware.
