Final Exams Start Thursday, July 18

With a prediction by college officials of a twenty per cent increase in enrollment over last year for the six-week term which gets under way July 22, students are preparing for final examinations which will conclude the four-week term July 18-19.

All final examinations for the four-week term will be given during the last four days of the term, that is, July 12-15 inclusive. Students planning to enroll for the second term should take their final tests at the campus counseling center at 9:00 a.m. July 13-15 inclusive.

The Dean of Students, C. Paul Winner, reminded new students planning to enter Cal Poly at the Fall Quarter that this is the last term they may take examinations in the community relations field. It was explained that the "rush" of the legions of students registering for September 21 registration.

Guidance testing of new students for the second term of the current summer quarter will start Monday, the Counselling Center at 10:00 a.m. on July 8-9 inclusive.

Dr. Harry A. Grace, new Associate Dean of Students said today.

The tall, blond-haired Easterner, who has been active in the world of espionage, had high praise for Cal Poly's friendly reputation, Dr. Grace said he feels there is a definite tendency to give Cal Poly a try-instruction which in California only a short while ago was an army intelligence officer. He was assigned to the university where he taught German for veterans who were going behind enemy lines.

Dr. Grace's wife, Gloria, first place winner in the 1942 Wartime beauty contest, is a Doctorate degree. She, too, is a graduate nurse. He feels there is a definite tendency to give Cal Poly a try-instruction which in California only a short while ago was an army intelligence officer. He was assigned to the university where he taught German for veterans who were going behind enemy lines.

Dr. Grace, who first attended Cal Poly during the fall quarter of 1944-45, said that he decided to enroll at that time because he had a special interest in the agricultural field of study and the university had a strong agricultural school.

Bright Future For Farm Careers Says Dean Shepard

The dean of the west's largest agricultural school, took the chance today with statements that farming opportunities here have vastly increased for modern youth. They're not just "pretty bright," he says from Pomona State University, and he emphasizes that the program has been increased from its previous 100-student enrollment to a total of only 150 students. His forecast is that 25 per cent will return to the farm, 50 per cent will move to cities, and 25 per cent will go into each 1,500 farms.

The average age of California farmers today is 55 years, suddenly many of them will retire. For 20 years, someone must take over. And those who operate farms that in California have an average $1,500 to $2,000 capital investment must be trained to handle that kind of responsibility. To compete with the efficiency of large farms that had proper planning and management, the smaller farm must develop its own college-trained, management through the family.

Teachers Learn New Ways To Tell Important Story

To give California farm students a modern picture of agriculture and its possibilities, Cal Poly vocational agriculture teaching majors are competing in the design and construction of scale-model fair displays.

And to carry it still further, they judge their completed booths then sell in a professional fair setting for the judging, and as a result of the fair play during the annual California Agriculture Teachers Association convention at Cal Poly as well as other in-the-field teachers can rate them with the students and the pack.

About the size of a grocery store, the booths, the models are complete with lighting, motion, sound, color—the guest of up-to-date display techniques acquired through visits, use of flashlights, but even without them, the models show use of trade goods and similar details that are required. Using dimensions to fit booths to scale, teachers may build exhibits, all carefully built to scale.

"Actually," says Delta Andrews, agriculture teacher at Cal Poly, "the intricacy of building a detailed building with outstanding FFA participation requires more than one-half hour's planning. The students plan their work in the San Joaquin Valley, they must design plans that are built to scale using FFA conventions and contests.

Helpful Hint

If at first you don’t succeed, throw the road map away and get a newly folded one at the next gas station.

If you make a left turn from a right-hand lane, you are probably in the left lane and should not use the center turn lane; when the driver behind calls you.

Fourth Doctor Is Latest Addition to Health Center Staff

Cal Poly medical officer, Dr. Earl Lovett, announced recently that Dr. Clifford Walker has joined the campus health center staff. Dr. Walker, who was engaged in private practice in Half Moon Bay, California, where he was also involved in private practice for seven years, received his M.D. degree at George Washington University, Washington, D.C.

In an interview with an El Mustang reporter, Dr. Walker said he had always planned to work in a hospital or clinic with college people. He was very enthusiastic and San Luis Obispo is a good community in which he and his family may live. The new health center staff member went on to say, "I have not been disappointed."

"One of the reasons we left Half Moon Bay was that after five attempts the people of the city would not pass a bond issue needed by the schools," said Dr. Walker. He went on to say that upon the sixth attempt the bond issue was passed, but that after the next school year the students will have to start the next school year on a double-session schedule.

"We have been told that there are very good schools here in San Luis Obispo and that is another reason we came here," said Dr. Walker.

Another reason he left private practice, said Dr. Walker was to enjoy more time with his family. "The rewards of community service in private practice are wonderful," said the doctor, "who took over his new post July 1. But, he went on, there was no time to be with his family, which is very important to him."

Dr. Walker hopes to enjoy here at the West's largest agricultural college include sheep and horse rearing and gardening. Dr. and Mrs. Walker recently (July 8) celebrated their fourteenth wedding anniversary.
