Three One-Act Plays Will Be Produced Next Week

The Poly Summer Stock announces the presentation of three one-act plays for Friday and Saturday nights, August 25 and 26, at 8:00 p.m. in the John P. Marston Auditorium. Featuring are "Hello Out There" by William Saroyan, "Fumed Oak," Noel Coward's bitter domestic comedy; and "Hollo Out There," a moving contribution by William Saroyan.

New Identification System For Campus Parking Lots Installed

A new system has been installed for the campus parking lots, residence halls, and student center. A tag with a letter and a number and the runner's name are being used. The system is believed to increase flow through the Southwest quarter of the campus and the north and west areas. The system is being closely watched on a test basis. For example, the old parking lot A is now open to runners and occupants are accompanied along the west and south sides of the lots instead of the old parking lot A.

New Faculty Members

This fall six departments within the College Division will welcome new faculty members to their staffs. They include:

- Nichole J. Adams of the Department of Biology
- Sarah M. B. Price of the Department of Music
- Robert E. Kennedy of the Department of Business Administration
- Robert J. McShea of the Department of Physical Education
- Dr. John W. Thompson of the Department of Economics
- Dr. John W. Thompson of the Department of Political Science

These new faculty members will be welcomed by the College Division. The new faculty members will bring fresh perspectives and new ideas to their respective departments and will contribute to the growth and development of the College Division.

Arts And Sciences Split Into Separate Divisions

A major change is taking place in the administrative organization of the California Polytechnic State University. On September 1, Cal Poly President Julian A. McPherson announced that the Arts and Sciences Division will be split into separate divisions.

The new divisions will be the Arts and Sciences Division and the Applied Sciences Division. The new divisions will enhance the educational opportunities available to students majoring in the arts and sciences, and will provide a more focused approach to the delivery of arts and sciences courses.

The new divisions will be led by Dr. John W. Thompson, who has been appointed as the new dean of the Arts and Sciences Division. Dr. Thompson will be responsible for overseeing the arts and sciences programs, and will work closely with the new dean of the Applied Sciences Division, who will be appointed in the near future.

The new divisions will also enhance the opportunities for collaboration between the arts and sciences departments, and will provide a more cohesive approach to the delivery of arts and sciences courses.

The new divisions will be established on September 1, and will be in place for the fall semester.

Workshop Presents Bill Lopez Plaque

Cal Poly's new gymnastics team will be presented with a plaque at the annual banquet. The plaque will be presented by Bill Lopez, the new head coach of the men's gymnastics team.

Lopez was appointed as the new head coach of the men's gymnastics team earlier this year. He has been a successful coach at the club level, and has brought a new perspective to the program.

The annual banquet will take place on May 1, and will be attended by the gymnastics team, their families, and friends.

In addition to the plaque presentation, the banquet will feature a variety of activities, including speeches, awards presentations, and entertainment.

The banquet is a major event of the year for the men's gymnastics team, and is an opportunity for the team to come together and celebrate their achievements.

College Administration Reshuffled

The College Administration of the California Polytechnic State University has undergone a major restructuring.

The restructuring has been implemented to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the College Administration, and to enhance the quality of education and research at the university.

The new organizational structure includes a number of changes, including the creation of new positions and the reassignment of existing personnel.

The restructuring has been led by Dr. John W. Thompson, who has been appointed as the new dean of the College Administration.

The new organizational structure will be in place for the fall semester, and will be fully implemented over the next few months.

The new organizational structure will provide a more cohesive approach to the delivery of education and research programs, and will enable the College Administration to better meet the needs of students and faculty.

“Quality-Dependability”
in judging the reactions to the editorials that have been written in the past two weeks. I have discovered, among those who have disagreed with them, the following opinions: (a) that I am a communist; (b) that I am an appeaser and a coward who would surrender anything for life. Typical of these views are the letters to the editor this week, which are logical and reasoned statements of the general prevailing temperament in regard to military preparedness. In this final article, I would like to refute these criticisms and summarize this editorial series.

First, the Berlin situation is irrelevant. Regardless of how it is solved, its counterpart will arise in Laos, in Vietnam, in Laos, in Taiwan, in Korea, in Pakistan. Once we have solved this one, the next one will come. Wherever it is solved, its counterpart will arise in Laos, in Vietnam, in Korea, in Pakistan. Once we have solved this one, the next one will come.

Second, the struggle between the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. is irrelevant. In 1941, it was the U.S. and Germany; in 1914, the Triple Alliance and the Triple Entente; in 1806, Napoleon and the Holy Roman Empire. It is not difficult to find eminence in history. After communism and capitalism are as anachronistic as feudalism and mercantilism, one can assume that, if disaster has not struck, systems will oppose each other.

This difference—this competition—is really a desirable thing. Wherever it will be, it is the only way we can do as we have sustained as a civilised thing, it contributes, or even causes, the advance of man. However, on an international scale, it is barbarism—disgusting, wasteful, thoroughly unnecessary where it has been civilised. How it is solved, its counterpart will arise in Laos, in Vietnam, in Korea, in Pakistan. Once we have solved this one, the next one will come. Wherever it is solved, its counterpart will arise in Laos, in Vietnam, in Korea, in Pakistan. Once we have solved this one, the next one will come.

As a nation, we run flightlessly from trouble spot to trouble spot, jumping fearlessly whenever Khrushchev cracks the whip. But we can not take the offensive! Can we not propose something so new, so that the Russians, the Chinese, the neutrals, would be thrown into a dilemma much more perplexing than that of Berlin? If we were to commit our troops to a certain ground, it would be absurd to say that we were done with war as a means of international adjudication and war to falsehood rely upon law we would not confuse beyond belief our enemies, and bind to us the majority of the world's peoples, which have enough troubles waging war and all we need to do is to worry about nuclear disaster as well! Of course we would. Indeed, the bright minds of the other side are bewildered.

If ever, as a major world power, denim the can­ cery of war history would remember us as its finest people. We who have engaged in a stupendous effort to establish a government based upon freedom, we who materially improved universal living standards, we have introduced liberty undor the law as a truly practical concept, can now perpetuate the power and the responsibility of having a government based upon freedom.

The report further states that "the process of self-government is in need of freedom from detailed and arbitrary controlling state administrative controls. With the reduction of these extensive paper work controls, a student's college system would be more attractive to a nation which seeks a university that can operate with authority, efficiency, and with the aid of a truly federal system of education."
Out Of The Din

Dear Mr. D.M.

Your editorial of August 11th has prompted me to write this open letter to you. The question most posed to us is: Why should we stand in Berlin? Mr. D.M., should we stand against world domination? Should we stand against the English Channel, the Atlantic Ocean, or should we stand at the principal shores of America? What do you propose we do, Mr. D.M.? After all, I ask, Mr. D.M., make a stand against world domination! We can no longer run, we can no longer hide, in the name of our country and our hemisphere, enough, or do you want it on your conscience?

Will you conclude with this advice to Mr. D.M.? The next time you have a chance, I want you to pull yourself away from your typewriter and walk out in front of the administrative building. There you will find a flagpole. A pole that is not only a pole, but a symbol of your country's freedom. That was won and kept there by someone who has sacrificed his life in the freedom's name. Someone who has paid for freedom, paid in full. I, for one, will never sell my beliefs in Americanism for anything less. In their name I say to you and people like you, "Why should we stand in Berlin?" We cannot say to the world, no matter the cost of liberty, "I, I.M., would rather die an American than live a communist slave."

In every thread you will find the price that we have paid to keep it there, and each price tag bears a name. Names such as Stalhelm, Hal, San Juan Hill, Etc. Every fiber, in every thread you will find the price that we have paid to keep it there.

Mr. D.M., for in every fiber, in every thread, there is a symbol of our country's freedom. That was won and kept there by someone who has sacrificed his life in the freedom's name. Someone who has paid for freedom, paid in full. I, for one, will never sell my beliefs in Americanism for anything less.
