Introduction to Special Issue

The papers in this issue originated as presentations for a symposium on Animals, Ethics and Law at the University of Tennessee, March 2-3, 2012. The symposium grew out of plans for an interdisciplinary course by the same title, which was taught that semester by Joan Heminway of the UT College of Law and me.

The symposium attracted well over a hundred participants. Attendees included many veterinarians, animal welfare workers and attorneys, as well as academics and students representing a wide variety of disciplines. The papers included here are merely a selection. Even so the range is wide. There are three by legal scholars (Taimie Bryant, David Favre and Iris Goodwin), four by philosophers (Jon Garthoff, Joel MacClellan, Clare Palmer and me), one by a philosopher/cognitive scientist (Colin Allen), and one by a psychologist/ethologist (Gordon Burghardt).

JOHN NOLT
Department of Philosophy
University of Tennessee, Knoxville
nolt@utk.edu

Volume 16, Issue 1

Jun 2013

© Between the Species, 2013
http://digitalcommons.calpoly.edu/bts/
Funding for the symposium was provided by the Haines-Morris Endowment, and the following units at the University of Tennessee: the Office of Research; the colleges of Arts and Sciences, Law and Veterinary Medicine; and the departments of Anthropology, Ecology and Evolutionary Biology, Philosophy and Psychology.

Videos of some of the sessions may be viewed at:

Happy reading!