VA Wants 5000 Questionnaires

Guest columnist National Contributions Council member and a veteran member of the Council's research committee reports that the VA has announced a new questionnaire to its veterans. The questionnaire will ask veterans to evaluate their personal needs and to indicate whether they are willing to accept help from the VA in meeting those needs.

VA said it plans to use the questionnaire to assess the needs of veterans and to determine the extent of their willingness to accept help from the VA. The questionnaire will ask veterans to rate their level of satisfaction with the services provided by the VA and to indicate whether they are willing to accept help from the VA in meeting their needs.

The questionnaire will also ask veterans to indicate whether they are currently receiving assistance from the VA and to indicate the extent of their satisfaction with the services provided.

The questionnaire will be mailed to veterans in the coming months and will be followed by a follow-up letter to veterans who have not responded.

The questionnaire will be used to help the VA improve its services and to help veterans better understand the resources available to them.

The questionnaire will be available in both English and Spanish and will be mailed to veterans in their home language.
