Mexican Movie Star Was Popular Poly Student

Thespian Begin

Begins on Campus

Pete Admardez was a Mexican movie star who took his life last week in Los Angeles. As a former Cal Poly student of three decades ago, he was fondly remembered by some of his old classmates.

Admardez was a popular student at Cal Poly and was involved in a variety of extracurricular activities. He was encouraged by his drama teacher to pursue a career in acting, which he did with great success. He was a great favorite among his schoolmates and was known for his enthusiasm and dedication to his craft.

Some of his most memorable performances included roles in the film "Green Leaves of Summer" and "Girl Crazy." He was also praised for his roles in "Miss America" and "The White Shoe." His talent was recognized with the "Star Teacher" award during the dinner meeting.

Army’s Only Horseshoer Completes Poly Course

By RON PARK

In an age of men utilizing the part-time job, some find an hour and within sight of miles being lent, and are earnest about the U. S. horse as a top horse-shoer. The draft calls several to the service, but there is no need. The Army has been for several years. It seems that the Army is now the front-runner for the Army. The last one was at Ft. Apache in the ranger races. In people fighting for their jobs. Also, they are, by-and-large, the observers feel the air for the “all-out” push for the “all-out” push for the Arizona Senator. Governor Nelson Rockefeller. These leaders were not really the Republican Party, but their influence has always been highly respected. These were the people who had in the past been the farmers and other people who supported the horsemen. They were the people who helped the New York governor.

Almost down to the last pre-season, it was felt that the governor had very seriously (and magnificently) damaged his chances by his remarks. They felt that the move did more as harm as if the man had gone out and deliberately tried to injure his political chances.
