Controversy on Speakers on Campus

The college administration has been faced with the task of allowing speakers on campus to express their views on topics. The controversy has centered around the question of whether certain speakers should be allowed to speak on campus or not. This issue has been a source of contention for both the college administration and the students.

The administration has received many letters from students expressing their views on the matter. One letter, written by a student named A. G. W. R. from the Student Senate, stated:

"I believe that the administration should allow all speakers on campus to express their views. This will make the campus a more open and diverse environment."

Another letter, written by a student named J. H. S. from the College Republicans, stated:

"I disagree with allowing all speakers on campus to express their views. I believe that certain speakers should be banned from campus because their views are not in line with the college's principles."

The administration has been torn between allowing open discussion and maintaining the integrity of the college's principles. They have received many letters from both sides and are currently reviewing the issue to make a decision.

Freshman English Courses May Undergo Changes In Fall

The freshman English courses offered at Cal Poly have been under review according to Dr. Philip Gerber, chairman of the English department. The purpose of the review is to determine whether the courses are meeting the goals set by the department. The review will consider all aspects of the courses, including the content, teaching methods, and student performance. The results of the review will be used to make necessary changes in the courses.

During the review, Dr. Gerber will consult with colleagues in the English department and other departments. He will also review teaching materials and evaluate student progress. The review will be completed by the end of the semester.

The changes made to the courses may include adjustments in the content, the teaching methods, or the grading criteria. The changes will be implemented in the fall semester of the next academic year.

library Celebrates National Week; Adds 13,500 Books This Year

The Library has added 13,500 books to its collection this year, bringing the total number of volumes to 750,000. The majority of the new books are in the popular fiction and non-fiction categories. The library has also increased its collection of rare and unique items, including historical documents and rare editions.

The library's collection has grown significantly in the past few years, with a focus on expanding the collection in areas of high demand. The library has also made an effort to acquire more electronic resources, including e-books and online databases.

The library has received a variety of donations from individuals and organizations, including the Cal Poly Foundation. The library has also been able to purchase new books through its budget, with a focus on acquiring high-demand titles and expanding the collection in areas of high demand.

Walker, Aceves Lead Spikers
Past Poly Broncos, 103 To 42

By ALAN HANSZITZ

The Mustangs played well in their first two games, losing only one of the five games played. The team was lead by ace setter Chuck Pomeroy, who had a total of 20 assists.

The other team, the Poly Broncos, was led by their setter, Mark Hansen, who had a total of 15 assists. Hansen's performance was praised by the visitors, who were impressed by his accuracy and control.

The Mustangs' victory was secured in the second set, when they outscored the Broncos 25-17. The team's victory was attributed to the solid performance of their libero, Dave Phillips, who had a total of 10 digs.

The Mustangs' victory was the first of two games on Saturday. The team will face the Long Beach State University next week.
