Salinger To Speak Here Tuesday; Press Association Sponsors Talk

Two hundred and fifty people will be seated Tuesday at 8:30 at the Railway Room in the Hotel Monterey for a luncheon address by Pierre Salinger.

The former U.S. congressional representative will speak on the topic, "The American political scene today: what we can do about it." The luncheon is sponsored by the Press Association, and is expected to be attended by students, faculty members and the community.

Salinger, who is currently interested in running for the U.S. Senate in California, has been associated with U.S. politics for many years. He was a member of the House of Representatives from 1956 to 1965, and served as Majority Leader of the Democratic Caucus from 1961 to 1963.

In his address, Salinger is expected to discuss the current political climate in the United States, and the role that citizen involvement plays in shaping public policy. He will also touch on the importance of maintaining a strong and effective political system.

The luncheon is open to the public, and reservations can be made by contacting the Press Association at (805) 464-4444.

Cal Poly Students Win Regional AIAA Award

The Cal Poly Student Chapter of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics (AIAA) recently won a regional competition at the AIAA Western Fall Meeting.

The Cal Poly team was led by Senior Aerospace Engineering major Peter T. Fagerlin, who has also been recognized as a member of the AIAA Student Branch for his outstanding contributions to the chapter.

The regional competition involved the development of a project proposal, which was judged on the basis of technical merit, innovation, and feasibility. The Cal Poly team's proposal focused on the design of a hypersonic vehicle for future space exploration.

In the regional competition, the Cal Poly team was one of several teams from universities across the Western United States. The team's success highlights the strong engineering education and research programs at Cal Poly.

The AIAA competition is open to student chapters across the country, and is a great opportunity for students to showcase their technical abilities and network with other professionals in the industry.

The Cal Poly Student Chapter is excited to continue their participation in AIAA competitions and will work hard to maintain their level of excellence in future competitions.

'Snake in the Grass' Fizzles; Jumps 529 (Picas)

"Little Pica" fizzled in the final round of the Jumps 529 (Picas) competition, held to determine the winner of the 14th Annual Western Region AIAA Student Branch Competition.

The competition, which was held at the Hotel Monterey, featured 14 teams from universities across the Western United States. Each team submitted a proposal for a project, which was judged based on technical merit, innovation, and feasibility.

The Cal Poly team, led by Senior Aerospace Engineering major Peter T. Fagerlin, was one of the teams that participated in the competition. The team's proposal focused on the design of a hypersonic vehicle for future space exploration.

Despite the strong showing by the Cal Poly team, the competition was a tough one, and only one team was able to emerge as the winner. The competition was sponsored by the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics (AIAA), and was held as part of the AIAA Western Fall Meeting.

The Cal Poly team is excited to continue their participation in AIAA competitions and will work hard to maintain their level of excellence in future competitions.
